No. 4770.—Mr. F. C. Barnes joined the office of the Accountant General, North-Western Provinces, on the forenoon of the 14th November 1872.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

The 2nd January 1873.

No. 17.—In supersession of the orders in the Notifications of this Department noted in the margin, the Governor General in Council is pleased to lay down the following rule:—

No. 3205, dated 22nd October 1868.
" 1131 " 15th June 1869.
" 4252 " 26th October 1869.
" 2876 " 8th December 1871.

For the interval between giving up charge of office, and commencement of furlough out of India, and between the end of furlough out of India, and the resumption of charge of office, a Military Officer in Civil employ shall be allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days. During subsidiary leave, his allowances shall be calculated as in the case of general leave taken in India. Provided always that if a Military Officer in Civil employ shall, under the action of the leave rules, have lost his lien on his appointment, he shall, during subsidiary leave, draw allowances under the rules of the Military Department applicable to his case.

This rule regulates allowances during leave subsidiary to furlough of any description, and is applicable to all Military Officers in Civil employ whether on consolidated salaries or on staff salaries.

The 3rd January 1873.

No. 21.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to rule that officers and men of the army, who may serve in any of the Civil Departments of Government, must abide, for the period of their Civil employment, by the rules of the Department under which they are actually serving, both as regards Military pay and Civil pay and allowances.

SEPARATE REVENUE.

The 31st December 1872.

No. 4791.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 26 of the "Court Fees Act, 1870," the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct, that on and after 1st February 1873, the use of impressed stamps in Mysore for the purpose of denoting fees chargeable under the said Act shall be discontinued, and that on and after the said date such fees shall be denoted by Mysore Court Fees Adhesive Stamps only.

SEPARATE REVENUE.

CUSTOMS.

The 4th January 1873.

No. 41.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Act XVIII of 1870, the Governor General in Council is pleased to exempt wheat exported from British India from the duties of customs to which it is liable under the Indian Tariff Act, 1871, with effect from this date.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secretary to the Govt. of India.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

Fort William, the 28th December 1872.

No. 1345 of 1872.—Under the authority of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council has great satisfaction in publishing to the Indian Army the following regulations, which are designed to secure suitable provision for the widows and orphans of officers of the Indian Staff Corps, officers of the Indian Medical Department, and Chaplains on the Indian Establishment not being subscribers to the late Military and Medical Funds.

Such pensions and compassionate allowances as are, by Royal Warrant, granted to the widows and families of British military officers, are already granted, from Indian revenues, to the widows and families of military officers in the service of the Government of India, who are excluded from the advantages of the late Military and Medical Funds; and it is to be clearly understood that the Government of India does not intend, by these present supplementary regulations, to sanction any further expenditure for this object from the Indian revenues. On the other hand, the Government of India does not, of course, wish that the Indian revenues should, in any way, profit by these regulations.

The Secretary of State for India in Council has reserved to himself the absolute right to regulate, from time to time, the contributions to be required from officers, in accordance with these principles, under these regulations, and to make any alterations in the regulations themselves that may appear to him equitable: provided always that the scale of pensions fixed thereby shall not be reduced in the case of actual incumbents. The Secretary of State in Council will endeavour to adjust the contributions to be levied from officers exactly, so that they shall neither be too large, nor too small, to supply the pensions provided for by these regulations. But if it should appear on experience that they have been fixed too low, the Government will not require any supplementary retrospective payments; and if they are found to have been fixed too high, no claim to refund will be admitted.

No insurance fund is established by these regulations. The contributions will be credited, and the pensions charged, directly to the Indian revenues as military receipts and charges. But, in order to adjust the rates of contribution, from time to time, to what is necessary to supply the pensions provided for by these regulations and no more, a separate pro formâ account will be kept of all contributions levied, and all payments made, under these regulations, and of the interest which would have been allowed upon such contributions if a mutual insurance fund had actually been established.

In accordance with the principle announced in this notification, that the Government does not intend that the pensions provided by these regulations shall be any charge to the Indian revenues, the rates of interest and of exchange with England, to be allowed in this pro formâ account, will be the rates which may be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of State in Council upon a consideration of the market rates of the day. For the present the rates to be used are 4½ per cent. interest, and 1*s.* 11*d.* per rupee exchange; and the contributions now prescribed have been calculated at these rates.

All needful statistics of ages, births, deaths and marriages will be carefully registered, and these statistics, with the pro formâ accounts, will be submitted at such periods as may be determined by the Secretary of State in Council to such actuary or actuaries as he may select, with instructions to investigate and ascertain whether the rates of contribution are such as will, at the rate of interest and exchange then to be re-considered and re-fixed, supply the pensions payable under these regulations, and no more. The expense of such actuarial enquiries and reports shall be debited in the pro formâ accounts reported upon.

Upon the report of the actuary or actuaries, the Secretary of State in Council will order any necessary alterations in the rates of contribution.

The report of the actuary or actuaries, with the orders of the Secretary of State in Council thereupon, shall be published in the Gazette of India, and any alteration ordered in the rates of contribution will take effect from the beginning of the month following the date of such publication. No retrospective adjustments will be made.

The rates of contribution fixed for immediate adoption have been calculated by Major-General Hannyngton, and approved by Mr. Samuel Brown, F. R. S. A. The reports of these gentlemen and the tables compiled by General Hannyngton will be furnished to any officer who desires to see them. The regulations will come into operation from the 1st of January 1873.

REGULATIONS FOR THE PROVISION OF PENSIONS FOR THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS OF MILITARY, MEDICAL, AND ECCLESIASTICAL OFFICERS IN THE SERVICE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

1. Pensions will be provided under these regulations for the widows and orphans of the following officers on the Indian Establishment, not being entitled to the benefits of any of the late Military and Medical Funds :—

Officers of the Staff Corps.

Officers of the Indian Medical Department.

Chaplains.

2. Any officer who has entered the service before the 1st of January 1873, may provide pensions for his family under these regulations, or not, at his option. (See Appendix, Form A.)

3. Every officer who enters the service on and after the 1st January 1873, must, as a condition of his appointment, provide pensions for his family under these regulations.

4. Any officer with whom, by Regulation 2, it is optional to provide pensions for his family under these regulations, but who does not, before the 1st July 1873, intimate his intention to make such provision, will thereafter be allowed to do so only on production of a medical certificate of sound bodily health. An officer who does not, before the 1st July 1874, announce his intention to provide pensions for his family under these regulations, will not be allowed to do so, save under the special order of the Governor General in Council.

5. For the purposes of these regulations, officers are classed as follows :—

Class I.—General Officers, and Inspectors General, Medical Department.

" II.—Lieutenant-Colonels, Archdeacons, Deputy Inspectors General, Medical Department, and Surgeons-Major.

Class III.—Majors, Senior Chaplains, and Surgeons.
" IV.—Captains, Junior Chaplains, and Assistant Surgeons who have served the Government of India for more than six years.
" V.—Lieutenants and Assistant Surgeons who have served the Government of India for less than six years.

6. The pensions provided under these regulations are payable, monthly in India, and quarterly in England, and to date of death.

7. The amounts of the pensions provided are as follows, in addition to any pensions or compassionate allowances granted under Royal Warrant :—

Table I.—Pension to a widow during widowhood, according to the class of her husband at time of his death.

Amount of pension to each orphan	10	20	30	45

8. The pension of a minor orphan will be paid to his or her mother, or other duly appointed or recognised guardian.

Contributions.

9. The contributions for pensions under these regulations, and the pensions of widows, will be regulated by the class of the contributing officer. An officer cannot secure a higher pension for his widow by contributing as if he belonged to a higher class.

10. Contributions will be deducted by paymasters or other disbursing officers from the pay abstracts of officers contributing.

11. Donations may be paid in one sum, or in twelve equal monthly instalments. If a donation be paid in instalments, interest on the unpaid portion will be levied at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum. The balance of any contribution due at an officer's death will be recovered rateably, without interest, from the pensions of his widow and orphans, in twelve monthly instalments in India, or four quarterly instalments in England.

12. The following are the rates of donations and monthly contributions prescribed for the present :—

16. A pension will be granted to a posthumous child on payment of the donation prescribed in Table V, which may be recovered by twelve monthly instalments in India, or four quarterly instalments in England. The report of the birth of a posthumous child must be made in Form D, the last sentence being omitted.

Commutation of Contributions.

17. An officer who desires to complete his payments during the term of his service in India, so as to be exempt from contributions after his retirement, will be permitted to do so at rates to be determined by the tables appended to General Hannyngton's report, dated London, 7th June 1870, or by any other tables that may be hereafter substituted therefor by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

18. An officer may, at any time, commute his future payments into a single payment, the amount of such payment being regulated by the same tables.

Duration of Pensions.

19. If a widow re-marry, her pension will cease during coverture; but if she again become a widow, she will become entitled to pension again as widow of her first husband, or, if her later husband have been a contributor, then at her option, as the widow of her last husband. A widow can only receive one pension.

20. The pension of a male orphan is payable until he attains the age of 21 years.

21. The mother or guardian of a male orphan who has completed the age of 16 may, at any time thereafter (on application in Forms F to H annexed to these regulations), have the residue of his pension commuted into a single payment, for the due application of which the mother or guardian is held responsible. The following table gives the commuted values of such pensions:—

Table VIII.—Showing the present value of the pension of a male orphan according to his age.

Years.	16	17	18	19	20
Months.	£	£	£	£
0	129	106	81	56	28
3	123	100	79	49	21
6	117	94	68	42	14
9	111	87	62	35	7

22. The pension of a female orphan continues until her marriage, and then ceases absolutely. It does not revive on widowhood.

Good Conduct.

23. The pensions provided under these regulations shall, in all cases, be held during good behaviour only, and will be withheld if any pensioner is found to be leading an immoral life, or on proof of any gross misconduct. The order of the Secretary of State for India in Council in any such case shall be final and conclusive.

Alienation of Pension.

24. A pension paid under these regulations may not be transferred or assigned, or in any way alienated, from the pensioner to whom, or for whose benefit, it is payable.

Passage Money.

25. An officer may, by a special contribution, provide passage money from India for his widow and orphans. The amount so secured will belong to the officer's estate, but will be primarily applicable to the provision of passage money and outfit for his widow and children.

NOTE.—The particular rules under which this benefit can be secured will be hereafter notified.

Transfer to Her Majesty's Corps.

26. Officers who may be transferred from the Indian Staff Corps to Her Majesty's Line Regiments will be entitled to receive back the amount of their contributions, after deduction of a sum equivalent to the risk borne by the fund during their membership.

Half Pay.

27. Married officers placed on half pay may receive back such portion of their contributions as is in excess of the risk borne by the fund during the term of their membership, or they may continue to subscribe at Indian rates for full benefits, or at lower rates for reduced benefits. In the event of their return to full pay, they shall, in addition to the subscription of their rank, be required to pay such donation as the circumstances of the case may demand.

Retired Officers.

28. Married officers who retire from the service on the pension of their rank may continue to subscribe in that rank, or they may withdraw from the fund, receiving back such portion of their contributions as is in excess of the risk borne by the fund during the term of their membership; but the usual subscription will be deducted from the pension of all such officers until they shall have intimated in writing their intention of withdrawing.

Dismissed Officers.

29. An officer who is dismissed the service by sentence of a court-martial, or by other competent authority, will cease, ipso facto, to be a contributor under these regulations, and will have no claim to any refund. His family will not be entitled to any pensions under these regulations.

Certificates.

30. Certificates of survival, of continued widowhood, and of the survival of children must be furnished annually in the annexed Forms I to N, to the office from which pensions are drawn.

APPENDIX.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 31st December 1872.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.

His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram made a solemn declaration of allegiance to Her Majesty, and that he would faithfully fulfil the duties of his office.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS took the oath of allegiance, and the oath that he would faithfully discharge the duties of his office.

POSTPONEMENT OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE IN SINDH.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE said that, with the permission of His Excellency the President, he would first take the motions on the Supplementary List of Business, because there was a necessity for pressing on the passing of the Bill which stood first on that list. He would move for leave to introduce a Bill for postponing the day on which the Code of Criminal Procedure is to come into force in the Province of Sindh. The reason for that was, that the Government of India had received a telegram from the Government of Bombay, the material part of which he would read to the Council:—

"Owing to the extraordinary conduct of the Superintendent of the Lithographic Press here, translations in Sindhí of the new Criminal Procedure Code have not been completed, and cannot be finished and circulated in Sindh for some time. It is therefore requested that the operation of the new Code in Sindh be postponed for three months more."

MR. HOBHOUSE supposed there would be no opposition to that proposal, because it seemed necessary that the people should know the law they were called upon to obey, and that they should also be able to understand exactly what the law was. He believed that was the only observation which it was necessary for him to make on this communication, and in moving for leave to introduce the Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business to enable him to proceed with the Bill to its ulterior stages.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said that the reason for the suspension of the Rules, namely, that the Code of Criminal Procedure would come into force on the first of January 1873, and that the translation into the Sindhí language had not been completed, appeared to him sufficient, and he therefore suspended the Rules.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the Bill be taken into consideration. The Bill was of the very simplest nature, and he believed that it was in the hands of all the Members. It simply recited that the law at present provided that the Code of Criminal Procedure would come into force on the first of January 1873. Then it recited that the translation of the Code into the Sindhí language had not been completed, and that, consequently, it was expedient to postpone the day on which the Code should come into force in the Province of Sindh. The Bill then provided in a few words that, in the Province of Sindh, the Code should come into force, not on the first of January, but on the first of April 1873.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE then moved that the Bill be passed.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR asked whether His Excellency and the Government had considered whether this Bill was really necessary. HIS HONOUR'S own opinion was that it was not necessary; but if the Government thought that it was necessary to postpone the operation of the Code in the Province of Sindh, he had no further observation to make.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE had already observed that the people who were called upon to obey a law, ought to be able to find out what they were to obey, and unless the law was translated into their language they would not be able to do so. He thought, therefore, it was only reasonable that the operation of the Code should be postponed in Sindh until the translation had been completed.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS said another reason why it was necessary that this Bill should be passed was, that there were in Sindh many officers having to administer the law, who were unacquainted with any language other than their own vernacular, and they therefore could not know what they had to do, until they saw the Code in a form in which they could understand it.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, the effect of the Code was in reality little more than to enlarge the powers of Magistrates and Judges, and to make some alterations in the law, but not in any essential points. Otherwise, the Code was the same as it had been before. The consequence of the introduction of the Code into Sindh now would be that the Magistrates would not exercise the extended powers vested in them until they understood what those powers were. He believed that it would be perfectly safe for the Magistrates, in the meantime, to act under the old Code as far as it went. In Bengal, there were about twenty different peoples, and there might be a good many nooks and corners in the province in which the Code had not been translated; and he might say that he would introduce the Code to-morrow morning into quarters where it had not been, and probably never would be, translated, and where no one would understand it if it were.

His Honour got an idea on this point from a gentleman who had much experience with regard to Railways. A Railway was advertised to open on a certain day. Some one said—"How can I open the Railway: the Railway Stations are not finished." The gentleman who informed him replied that he had great experience in regard to Railways; the only way to get a Railway completed was to open it, and to set trains running: and then those building the stations would finish them fast enough. Similarly, if His Honour had to consider the communication which had been referred to, he would say that it was much better to tell their people in Sindh "complete the translation of the Code as soon as you can, as we cannot postpone the operation of the law."

His Excellency the President said that it appeared to him that, considering the telegram from the Government of Bombay on this subject, and the necessity expressed by the Law Member of the Government that, before a law came into operation, the people subject to that law, and those who would have to administer it, should be aware of its contents, it was absolutely necessary that what was now proposed should be done.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

MADRAS DISTRICT MUNSIFS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse also moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to District Munsifs in the Presidency of Fort Saint George be referred back to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a week. Honourable Members who had been present at Simla would remember that, at the last time this Bill was before the Council, they had just received a communication from the Madras Government proposing certain alterations in the Bill. Those proposals were considered in Council, and had been dealt with in various ways. Another communication had very recently been received from the Madras Government, to the effect that they were perfectly satisfied with what had been done on that occasion, but they again suggested some amendments. He had not himself as yet seen those suggestions, but he was told by the Secretary that they could best be considered in Select Committee.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA COURTS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Act No. VII of 1872 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Courts in British Burma).

OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse asked leave to postpone the next entry in the List of Business, which was to introduce the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Oaths and Affirmations, and to move that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in two months. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had given formal notice that he would oppose the introduction of the Bill. Up to that time, it had been assumed that the Bill would be unopposed; but since notice of opposition had now been given, it appeared to him that it would be convenient that the Council should have some more time for its consideration. Mr. Hobhouse would undertake to give His Honour ample notice when it was determined to bring on the Bill again.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor wished to explain that, when he gave notice of opposition, he did not anticipate a postponement of the measure: he believed he had given fair notice that he should oppose it.

Leave was granted.

MADRAS DISTRICT MUNSIFS AND PRIVY COUNCIL APPEALS BILLS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley be added to the Select Committees on the following Bills:—

To consolidate and amend the law relating to District Munsifs in the Presidency of Fort Saint George.

To consolidate and amend the law relating to the admission of appeals to Her Majesty in Council from judgments and orders of the Civil Courts.

He said, with regard to the second of these measures, the Select Committee was not very actively at work at present. It was proposed to extend the provisions of the Bill, and before that proposal could be carried out, it was necessary to refer to the home-authorities, because, in such a matter, harmonious action with the Judges in England was obviously necessary. But it was convenient that we should have a Select Committee to deal with questions that arose here out of the frequent communications received on the subject.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

REGULATIONS AND ACTS LOCAL EXTENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Hon'ble Messrs. Bayley and Inglis be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the local extent of the general Regulations and Acts, and to the local limits of the jurisdictions of the High Courts and the Chief Controlling Revenue Authorities.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

SUNDRY BILLS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis be added to the Select Committees on the following Bills:—

To regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India.

To consolidate and define the law relating to the settlement and collection of Land-revenue in Oudh.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE asked leave to postpone the motion, which stood next in the List of Business, that the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis and the Hon'ble Mr. Bullen Smith be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the manufacture, importation and sale of Arms and Ammunition, and the right to keep and use the same.

Leave was granted.

OBSOLETE ENACTMENTS REPEALING BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE then moved that the Hon'ble Messrs. Chapman and Inglis be added to the Select Committee on the Bill for the repeal of certain obsolete enactments.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committee was named:—

On the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to District Munsifs in the Presidency of Fort Saint George—The Hon'ble Mr. Bayley, His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram and the Mover.

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE gave notice that, at the next meeting of the Council, he would move for the appointment of a Committee to revise the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 7th January 1873.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

The 9th January 1873.

No. 150.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that Section 89 of the Civil Pension Code be cancelled.

Section 88 will henceforth apply to all pensions undrawn for more than six months, for however long a period.

The 10th January 1873.

No. 169.—The following correspondence is published for general information :—

Letter from the Government of India in the Financial Department, to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 192, dated 10*th June* 1872.

By Section 41 of the Civil Pension Code, Uncovenanted Servants generally are prevented from counting the period of their absence on leave other than privilege or preparatory leave as service qualifying for pension. We have the honor to solicit that an exception to this rule may be made in favor of the classes of Uncovenanted Officers described in Section 1 (b) of the Civil Leave Code.

2. The Officers referred to have, in accordance with the instructions contained in Your Grace's Financial despatch No. 451 of the 6th December 1871, and previous correspondence on the subject, been placed on nearly the same footing as Covenanted Civil Servants in regard to furlough. It is manifestly inconsistent with such a concession not to allow any period of absence on furlough to count as service qualifying for pension, not only because such a prohibition is at variance with the rule on the same point for Covenanted Civil Servants, but because it nullifies the privilege of taking additional furlough for most of the Uncovenanted Officers to whom that privilege has been conceded.

3. For this reason, as well as on the ground that Covenanted Civil Servants are allowed to include four years' absence on furlough or special leave in the twenty-five years' service which qualifies for the maximum annuity, and that Officers of the Army are allowed to count absence on furlough for four years in thirty as service qualifying for pension, we are of opinion that Uncovenanted Officers of the classes referred to above should be allowed to reckon four years of absence on furlough, or special leave with allowances, as service qualifying for pension or gratuity. We consider, however, that the four years should be a maximum limit, and that the period of absence on leave which each Officer may actually count as qualifying for pension or gratuity at any particular period of his service, should bear a fixed proportion to the whole of his qualifying service. The rule, therefore, which we propose to lay down is as follows:—An Uncovenanted Officer of one of the classes described in Section 1 (b) of the Civil Leave Code may reckon four years of absence on furlough or special leave with allowances as service qualifying for pension or gratuity, provided that the period of absence so reckoned shall not exceed two-fifteenths of his entire qualifying service.

Letter from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to the Government of India in the Financial Department, No. 477, dated 12*th November* 1872.

I have considered in Council your Financial letter dated the 10th June last, No. 192, referring to Section 41 of the Civil Pension Code, whereby Uncovenanted Servants are precluded from counting the period of their absence on leave, other than privilege or preparatory leave, as service qualifying for pension, and requesting that an exception to this rule may be made in favor of the classes of Uncovenanted Officers described in Section 1 (b) of the Civil Leave Code.

2. You state that the Officers referred to have, in accordance with the instructions contained in my Financial despatch of the 6th December 1871, No. 451, and previous correspondence, been placed on nearly the same footing as Covenanted Civil Servants in regard to furlough, and that it is manifestly inconsistent with such a concession not to allow any period of absence on furlough to count as service qualifying for pension, not only because such a prohibition is at variance with the rule on the same point for Covenanted Civil Servants, but because it nullifies the privilege of taking additional furlough for most of the Uncovenanted Officers to whom that privilege has been conceded.

3. I cannot, however, admit the soundness of the views which you have taken. I consider that questions relating to the grant of pensions to Covenanted or Uncovenanted Officers on furlough should be dealt with on a general review of the whole subject. The inconvenience of any partial change is apparent on examination of the effect of your proposition, for in comparison with the advantages enjoyed by Covenanted Civil Servants, your proposition, if acceded to, would admit of the grant to Educational Officers, after certain periods of service, of higher rates of pension than those allowed to Covenanted Civil Servants.

4. When the Uncovenanted Pension Rules were revised in the year 1863-64, the question as to any portion of leave being allowed to reckon therein, was fully considered, and I see no reason to make a change in the rules as then sanctioned.

* Instead of 44,175 chests, as originally estimated, the quantity sold in 1872-73 will be (as already advertised), in consequence of the failure of the crop, only 42,675 chests. The average price of a chest was estimated originally at Rs. 1,200. It must now be Rs. 1,242, if the whole estimate is to be made good. The figures here shown as "estimates" are adjusted accordingly.

and may also, with the like sanction, direct the business of the said Courts to be distributed among them in such way as he thinks fit:

provided that no Court shall try any suit where the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds its proper jurisdiction.

Language of plaints and record of evidence.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, sections twenty-six and one hundred and seventy-two, plaints may be written and evidence may be taken down in such language or languages as the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time direct in this behalf.

Appeals to lie from Courts of original jurisdiction.

5. Notwithstanding anything contained in the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and subject to any express provision to the contrary contained in any other Act for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees and orders of the Courts of original jurisdiction in British Burma to the Courts empowered by the said Act, section eight and section sixty-nine, respectively, to hear appeals from decrees and orders.

All such appeals presented between the fifth day of April 1872 and the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to have been presented under this section.

Appeals to Special Court.

6. In the interval between the presentation of an appeal, under section sixty-nine of the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and the hearing thereof by the Special Court, the appeal and all applications relating thereto shall be dealt by the Judicial Commissioner as if it were eal presented in his own Court.

Special Court to be deemed a High Court under Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871.

7. For the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, the said Special Court shall be deemed to be a High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal or as a Court of Reference, as the case may be.

For the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, appeals and applications to the said Special Court shall be deemed to be, respectively, appeals and applications to a High Court under the Code of Civil Procedure or under the Code of Criminal Procedure, as the case may be.

Application of Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871 to certain petitions to Judicial Commissioner.

8. When the civil appellate jurisdiction of any Commissioner has, under section twenty-nine of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, been transferred to the Judicial Commissioner,

(a.) all petitions and other documents presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, be deemed to have been presented to the Commissioner:

(b.) and all appeals and applications presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, be deemed to have been presented to him in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction.

Power to call for record.

9. In any case in which a Court of first appeal has, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, wrongly refused to submit a statement under section thirty-five of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, the Judicial Commissioner may call for the record of the case, and may, on receipt of such record, proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

And in any case in which a Court of first appeal has submitted such a statement, but, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, the statement is unduly limited, or justice cannot be done without re-hearing the case, the Judicial Commissioner may proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

The Judicial Commissioner shall send the Court of first appeal a copy of his judgment in any case tried under this section, and the said Court shall dispose of the case in conformity with such judgment.

Amendment of Act VII of 1872, section 35.

10. To section thirty-five of the said Act, the following words shall be added: "and a certified copy of such reasons shall, on application to the Court, be furnished to any party to the suit."

Licensing of advocates.

11. No person shall be permitted to appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor, or of any appellant, complainant or accused person, in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, or in any Court, whether civil or criminal, subordinate thereto, unless such person is licensed thereto by the Judicial Commissioner, either generally or specially.

Rules for their qualification and admission.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules for the qualification, admission and enrolment of proper persons to appear, plead or act as aforesaid;

and for the suspension or dismissal of any such persons who are guilty of fraudulent or grossly improper conduct.

All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette.

Any person appearing, pleading or acting in contravention of any such rule, shall be liable, by order of the Court, to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Saving of agents of Government, suitors, co-suitors, and advocates of High Courts.

12. Notwithstanding anything contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder, any person may appear, plead or act as the agent for the Crown or for the Secretary of State for India in Council, and any suitor may appear, plead or act on behalf of himself or a co-suitor;

and any person who for the time being is an advocate, vakíl or attorney-at-law of any High Court may appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or any Court subordinate thereto.

And nothing contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder shall be deemed to affect the second clause of section 186 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Fees liable to taxation.

13. The fees to be received by any advocate, for business done in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or in any Court subordinate thereto, shall at all times be subject to the control and taxation of the presiding Judge; and no such fees shall be recoverable unless they have been allowed on taxation by the said Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules regulating the control and taxation of costs in such subordinate Courts.

Saving of certain trials at Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab.

14. No trial had by the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner at Courts of Session in the towns of Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab, shall be deemed to have been invalid merely on the ground that such trial was not by jury.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

EXECUTION OF KOOKA PRISONERS AT MALAIR KOTLAH.

No. 52J, dated Simla, the 10th October 1872.

From—The Government of India,
To—The Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD DUKE,—In continuation of our despatch No. 39, dated the 8th July 1872, forwarding, for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, a statement submitted by Mr. T. D. Forsyth, C. S., C. B., containing certain representations relative to the censure expressed by the Government of India of his conduct on the occasion of the Kooka outbreak at Malodh and Malair Kotlah in January last, we have the honor to enclose a further statement which we have since received from Mr. Forsyth, written after he had read the official papers with which he was furnished by our directions.

2. As Mr. Forsyth made several allusions to his communications with the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, we referred the statements to His Honor for any observations which he might desire to make, and we enclose a copy of a minute which the Lieutenant-Governor has written in reply to our reference.

3. Your Grace, in a despatch No. 41, dated the 31st August 1872, has informed us that you await the expression of our opinion before dealing with Mr. Forsyth's first statement, and we, therefore, proceed to make such observations upon both statements as they seem to us to require.

4. We do not consider ourselves called upon to discuss again the propriety of the action of Mr. Cowan and of Mr. Forsyth in respect to the executions of the Kooka prisoners. That question has been decided by the Government of India, and the decision has been confirmed by Her Majesty's Government. It is, therefore, not necessary for us to enter into the general arguments which Mr. Forsyth has put forward in defence of the executions. We have only to observe that the importance of the Kooka movement, and the gravity of the circumstances connected with the outbreak, were fully placed before the Government of India at the time by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

5. We regret that Mr. Forsyth considers that he was not allowed a sufficient opportunity of giving an explanation of his conduct before the case was decided by the Government of India. We must observe, however, that the letter of the 8th of February, addressed by this Government to the Punjab Government, contained the following distinct call for an explanation from Mr. Forsyth :—

> "13. With regard to Mr. Forsyth's proceedings, they would appear to have been legal; but His Excellency in Council fails to perceive the necessity for such extreme and indiscriminate severity as Mr. Forsyth displayed.
> "14. His Excellency in Council awaits the explanations of the officers concerned upon these points."

It appears that, in forwarding a copy of this letter to Mr. Forsyth, the Government of the Punjab did not specifically call upon him to give an explanation of his conduct, and that he gave no further explanation at that time. He had, however, in his letters of the 19th and 22nd of January, given at length the reasons which actuated him in approving of the summary execution of the 49 prisoners by Mr. Cowan. In reply to a further call for explanation, made in the letter of the Secretary in the Home Department, to the Punjab Government of the 22nd March, Mr. Forsyth, on the 8th of April, besides answering certain questions put to him (in consequence, as it appears, of a demi-official communication with the Secretary), gave a full explanation of the sentence carried into execution against the 16 prisoners on the 18th of January, and the proceedings amply prove the desire of Government not to decide the case before they were in possession of the most complete information of all the circumstances connected with it.

6. We regret that the Government should have been led into the error of attributing to Mr. Forsyth the use of an expression in his letter, confirming Mr. Cowan's action in the execution of the 49 prisoners, which was not actually used by him. The copy of the letter which Mr. Cowan furnished to the Government, and which was quoted in our Secretary's letter to the Government of the Punjab of the 30th of April, was as follows :—

> "I fully approve and confirm all you have done. You have acted admirably. I am coming out."

It appears from subsequent enquiry that the copy was not accurate, and that the real letter was—

> "A line to say I fully approve and confirm all you have done. You have acted with energy and promptitude. I am coming out."

Although the correction of the letter does not affect the fact of the full approbation and confirmation of Mr. Cowan's conduct by Mr. Forsyth, the use of the word "admirably," which was erroneously attributed to him, appears to us to be calculated to convey the impression of a more cordial sympathy with Mr. Cowan's action than the words really used implied, and we consider that Mr. Forsyth is entitled to receive an expression of our opinion to that effect.

7. Mr. Forsyth explains that when he approved and confirmed Mr. Cowan's proceedings, he was not aware that Mr. Cowan had put to death six men after the receipt of Mr. Forsyth's letter of the 17th of January directing him not to act in a summary manner. As it is possible that the inference may be drawn from our Secretary's letter of the 30th April to the Punjab Government, that Mr. Forsyth was aware of the fact, we think that the doubt should be cleared up. Mr. Forsyth's statement, an extract from which is contained in our Secretary's letter of the 22nd March, shows, however, that he believed Mr. Cowan to have received, before any of the prisoners were executed, general instructions from him contained in a previous letter, enjoining legal action, written before Mr. Cowan had proposed to execute any prisoners summarily.

8. Mr. Forsyth lays considerable stress upon a telegram which he received from the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, dated the 17th of January 1872. This telegram was referred to by Mr. Forsyth in the 11th paragraph of his letter of the 22nd January, and the explanation of the Lieutenant-Governor will be found in Mr. Lepel Griffin's letter of the 26th of the same month. We regret that Mr. Forsyth should still look upon this telegram "as implying a certain amount of preference for Mr. Cowan's action to the more cautious line he was adopting," for we consider that, instead of having been discouragement to Mr. Forsyth to proceed with deliberation and in accordance with law, it was an encouragement to him to continue in the wiser course which, up to that time, he had followed and advised. At the same time, we do not desire to imply that Mr. Forsyth did not, as he says that he did, read the telegram in a different sense.

9. Mr. Forsyth, in the 18th paragraph of his second statement, endeavours to show that the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab was incorrect in assuming that he would have sanctioned the execution of the 49 prisoners if he had been referred to beforehand. It is correct that, on the 22nd of January, Mr. Forsyth stated that he would not have executed the wounded men, but in a previous letter, dated the 19th of January, he used the following words:—

> "Before my official letter had reached him, Mr. Cowan had disposed of 50 prisoners in a summary manner. There was no question as to their guilt, for they were all apprehended, red-handed, and, unquestionably, had the proceedings been sent up to me, I should have confirmed the sentence of death."

10. We do not consider it necessary to allude further to Mr. Forsyth's statement, for we have desired to confine our remarks to those points which he has brought forward, which seem to us, in any degree, to modify the description of his conduct which is contained in our Secretary's letter to the Pubjab Government of the 30th of April last, or in which he has made statements which affect the conduct of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

His allusion to the orders he received for the deportation of Ram Singh has no reference to the Kooka executions, and appears to us to be sufficiently answered by the minute of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

11. Mr. Forsyth has stated, in the conclusion of his second statement, that it is not his object to ask the Government to alter their decision as regards the past, but that he trusts that his explanation, now offered, may be considered with reference to his position for the future when opportunity for so doing shall occur. He has also briefly alluded to his past services. We gladly embrace the opportunity of cordially recognising the value of those services, which are well known to Her Majesty's Government; and, while we are of opinion that Mr. Forsyth's statements do not so alter the aspect of his conduct in regard to the Kooka executions as to relieve him from the censure of Government, we consider that his previous services should not be overlooked, if an opportunity should arise for his future employment to the advantage of the public service.

12. We annex, for Your Grace's information, copy of a letter which we have addressed to Mr. Forsyth after receipt of his statements.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 7th January 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.

BURMA COURTS' ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Act No. VII of 1872 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Courts in British Burma) be taken into consideration. That Act had established a system of Courts somewhat different from those in other parts of the country. It provided for the constitution of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner; it continued, with some changes, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, and it created a new tribunal called a "Special Court," which consisted of a combination of the Recorder and Judicial Commissioner. The Act had been prepared with great care and in close communication with the Chief Commissioner and other local authorities, and everything was done which had been foreseen when it was passed. It was however found, as was constantly the case when new Courts came to work, that they desired the enactment of some provisions other than those which the original Act contained.

The first reason for introducing the Bill was, that the course of appeals did not run quite smoothly, owing to a reason explained on a previous occasion. The Committee had accordingly made the necessary amendment.

They had declared that the Civil Procedure Code extended to all parts of British Burma, excepting so far as it had been modified by the Act of last Session and the present Bill. The Code had been extended by executive orders to Arakan, Martaban and Tenasserim ; but no such extension had been made to Pegu. Act I of 1863, section 23, had been repealed, and the Judicial Commissioner considered that the Code did not prevail in Pegu.

The Committee had relaxed the rule prescribed by Act VIII of 1859, section 6, that every suit should be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to entertain it, by giving the Deputy Commissioner power to authorize, under certain rules to be from time to time prescribed by him with the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner, the higher grades of Courts to receive suits cognizable by a lower grade.

The Committee had relaxed another rule of the Code (sections 26 and 172) about the language in which plaints were to be prepared and evidence taken down, as it was found inconvenient to have one rigid rule on the subject. The practice in Burmese Courts presided over by English officers was, as MR. HOBHOUSE understood, that the plaint was written in Burmese while the evidence was recorded in English. The authorities in British Burma wished to maintain this practice, and accordingly the Committee had given the Local Government power to make regulations on that subject from time to time.

The Committee had also taken care to provide that the Court Fees' Act and the Limitation Act should apply to the "Special Court." The Committee had declared that the "Special Court" should, for the purposes of these Acts, be deemed to be a High Court. There were also in the Bill some rules as to the taxation of costs, giving the Judicial Commissioner power to make regulations for that purpose, and for regulating the licensing and fees of vakíls and pleaders of his own and the subordinate Courts.

There were a few other amendments, but MR. HOBHOUSE had mentioned the most important. The Council would see that the Bill involved no new principle. The Judicial Commissioner of British Burma had stated that the Bill, as it now stood, was satisfactory. And as it involved mere details relating to procedure, that opinion would probably satisfy the Council.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

MADRAS DISTRICT MUNSIFS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE presented the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to District Munsifs in the Presidency of Fort Saint George.

PANJÁB APPEALS AND REVIEWS OF JUDGMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb. He said, this was a very simple matter. The present Act regulating appeals in the Panjáb, No. VII of 1868, was limited in its operation to a period of five years. It would expire at the end of March 1873. The duration of the Act had been limited, because it was thought probable that, before that term of five years had elapsed, the Government would re-organize the executive and judicial services, and make some new arrangement respecting the work of the Courts. The time for doing so had, however, not yet arrived. The Government was not prepared to take any such step at present, and, therefore, the Panjáb authorities had called attention to the approaching expiry of Act VII of 1868 and desired that it should be prolonged.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA PORT-DUES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the levy of Port-dues in the Ports of British Burma. The object of the Bill was this. The Port-dues Act (XXII of 1855), which was a general Act, provided (s. 2) that the Local Government might, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, declare any Port to be subject to the Act. Then it provided, by a subsequent section (41), that no dues should be levied after the 13th August 1855, excepting under the authority of that Act or of some subsequent Act; but by section 42 the Local Government might vary the dues within the maximum limit laid down by the Act which regulated their levy. The consequence was, that if it was desired to do anything beyond merely declaring any Port to be within the limits of the general Act, which was nearly always the case, a fresh Act was required. Two Acts (XXXV of 1857 and XXV of 1860, amended by XIII of 1867, s. 1) had been passed with respect to certain Burman Ports: they had been passed on the same model, fixing the maximum dues and certain conditions under which the dues might be levied. Now, the Chief Commissioner of British Burma desired to bring various Ports in that Province within the limits of the general Act, and suggested that, instead of passing a fresh Act on each occasion, a general Act should be passed enabling the Local Government, in communication with the Supreme Government, to regulate the levy of Port-dues within a maximum to be laid down by the Act. It was obvious that such a course would save much trouble, and for that reason MR. HOBHOUSE moved for leave to bring in this Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that a Committee be appointed to revise the Rules for the Conduct of Business. Some of the Rules were found to be rather too limited in their operation; for instance, those which prescribed a definite time for doing certain acts. Such was Rule 14, which provided that there must be a definite notice given of a motion for leave to introduce a Bill; Rule 16 said that no Bill should be introduced until fourteen days after a copy of the Bill and of the Statement of Objects and Reasons had been furnished to each Member, and there were two or three more of the same kind. Then, again, there was the Rule relating to the publication of Bills in certain languages. All these Rules were of a fixed nature. It was found that these Rules had not been observed in practice, and it would be obvious that, when the practice varied from the written rule, it pointed to some inconvenience in the Rules. It was desirable, if the Council had Rules, that they should act in accordance with them; and it therefore appeared convenient that the Rules of the Council should be revised. There were also some Rules which it would be convenient to make clearer; but that would be a subject for the consideration of the Committee. It was with a view to make the practice coincide with the Rules that he asked for the appointment of a Committee to revise them. There was a Rule (21) which provided for the appointment of a Committee for the purpose.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT wished to say, with respect to the action of this Committee, that it was not his wish that its Members should in any way relax the essential provisions of the Rules in respect to the publication of Bills, either as introduced or whenever they were altered in any essential particular, in the language of the Natives of India who were to be subject to those laws.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE thought it would be convenient if he read out the names of the Members who had consented to serve on the Committee: they were, the Hon'ble Messrs. Ellis, Chapman (whose experience of the working of the Council at Bombay would be of value), Bullen Smith and Stewart, His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram and the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, who was not in his place to-day, had informed MR. HOBHOUSE that he could not spare the time to serve on the Select Committee; but he had kindly promised to afford the Committee any information they might require which his experience of the practice in the local Council might enable him to furnish.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 14th January 1873.

No. 339.—Surgeon P. F. Bellew received charge on the forenoon of the 3rd January 1873 of the office of Deputy Assay Master, Bombay Mint, from Mr. L. G. Hynes.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

The 16th January 1873.

No. 335.—The Governor General in Council directs that Section 62 (c) of the Civil Pension Code be corrected as follows:—

(c.) After eleven years and six months' such service, a retiring pension of £750 a year.

No. 372.—The following Financial Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to the Government of India, No. 513, dated 4th December 1872, is published for general information:—

I have considered in Council your Financial Letter, dated the 26th September last, No. 359, forwarding papers relating to a request by * * * * * that on resigning Civil employment, and accepting the Military pension to which he is entitled, he may be re-appointed to be a Deputy Commissioner of the grade in which he at present serves.

"When an officer, who has retired on a pension obtained, not on medical certificate, but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, he shall be permitted to draw the pension in addition to the salary of the office to which he may be appointed; but in the event of a Military Officer resigning the service after he has been appointed to a Civil office, he must at the same time vacate that office. He may, however, be re-appointed to the office, not as a matter of course but only in the event of your considering it decidedly for the benefit of the public service."

3. You also state that the principle of that rule, which was at first applicable to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, has been extended to all Civil Officers, and that Section 96 of the Civil Pension Code provides that "no officer can be permitted to retire with the view of being re-employed, whether in the general service or at the charge of local funds, and drawing pension in addition to pay," and you propose that that rule should now be extended to Military Officers in Civil employ.

4. Previous to the receipt by you of the Financial Despatch, dated the 9th July 1868, No. 290, it was the invariable rule that a Military pension should merge in Civil salary, and it was only on "your strong recommendation" that any modification of that rule was authorized.

5. Under the terms of the modification sanctioned in 1868, you have full power to guard against the abuse of the concession granted by declining to re-appoint any officer to a Civil appointment who may resign the service for the purpose of obtaining Military pension in addition to Civil salary; and I am of opinion that you should do so, except under exceptional circumstances, when it is decidedly for the benefit of the public service. I see no objection, however, to your proposition to extend to Military Officers in Civil employ the rule on the subject which you have laid down as regards Civil Officers.

6. * * * request should accordingly be negatived.

SEPARATE REVENUE.

OPIUM.

The 11th January 1873.

No. 274.—The following comparative estimate of Opium Revenue to date, compared with the estimate for the year 1872-73, is substituted for that published in Financial Department Notification No. 109, dated 10th January 1873 :—

PRESIDENCY.	LATEST MONTH.			TEN SALES OF BENGAL OPIUM AND NINE MONTHS' DUTY ON MALWA OPIUM.
	Estimate.	Actual.	Better than Estimate.	Estimate.	Actual.	Better than Estimate.
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Bengal ...	434,700*	472,236	37,536	4,430,835*	4,989,866	559,031
Bombay ...	227,077	260,640	33,563	1,670,653	1,945,585	274,932
TOTAL ...	661,777	732,876	71,099	6,101,488	6,935,451	833,963

* Instead of 44,175 chests, as originally estimated, the quantity sold in 1872-73 will be (as already advertised), in consequence of the failure of the crop, only 42,675 chests. The average price of a chest was estimated originally at Rs. 1,200. It must now be Rs. 1,242, if the whole estimate is to be made good. The figures here shown as "estimates" are adjusted accordingly.

HIGH COURT.

NOTIFICATION.

Fort William, the 9th January 1873.

It is ordered that the following Rules be read and passed as the Rules and Orders of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in its Original Jurisdiction, to take effect from the fifteenth day of January 1873 :—

1. If a suitor appear in person he shall affix on the deposition of each witness examined on his behalf, within 48 hours after the termination of the trial, High Court Stamps equal to the amount of the fee payable for swearing and reducing into writing the deposition of such witness.
2. In all cases in which the parties are represented by Attorneys, the Attorney for each party will be held personally responsible to the Court for the payment of the fees for swearing and reducing into writing the depositions of witnesses examined on behalf of his client.
3. In every such case High Court Stamps equal to the amount of the fee payable for swearing and reducing into writing the deposition of each witness shall, within 48 hours after the termination of the trial, be affixed on his deposition by the Attorney of the party on whose behalf such witness shall be examined.
4. If default be made in complying with the last preceding rule, the Registrar will give notice in writing to the defaulting Attorney that unless the fees due be paid within 24 hours from the service of the notice, application will be made against him for an order prohibiting him from acting as an Attorney.
5. Every Attorney who shall not have paid the fees due as aforesaid within the time mentioned in the Registrar's notice, may be, if the Court shall think fit so to direct, upon the application of the Registrar (which it shall be his duty to make), prohibited from acting as an Attorney until the further order of the Court.
6. Every order suspending an Attorney from practice for non-payment of fees shall be set aside on the certificate of the Registrar that the fees have been paid.

An Act to amend the Burma Courts' Act, 1872.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma Courts' Act, 1872; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Courts' Act Amendment Act":

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma:

Commencement.

Sections eleven, twelve and thirteen shall come into force at the expiration of two months after the passing of this Act. The rest of this Act shall come into force at once.

Code of Civil Procedure applied to Burma.

2. Save as otherwise provided by the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and by this Act, the Code of Civil Procedure shall be, and shall, on and from the fifth day of April 1872, be deemed to have been, in force throughout British Burma.

Power to distribute business.

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, section six, every Deputy Commissioner may direct suits to be instituted in the Courts subordinate to him, according to such rules as to the description of the suits and the amount or value of their subject-matter as he shall from time to time, with the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner, prescribe in this behalf, and may also, with the like sanction, direct the business of the said Courts to be distributed among them in such way as he thinks fit:

provided that no Court shall try any suit where the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds its proper jurisdiction.

Language of plaints and record of evidence.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, sections twenty-six and one hundred and seventy-two, plaints may be written and evidence may be taken down in such language or languages as the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time direct in this behalf.

Appeals to lie from Courts of original jurisdiction.

5. Notwithstanding anything contained in the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and subject to any express provision to the contrary contained in any other Act for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees and orders of the Courts of original jurisdiction in British Burma to the Courts empowered by the said Act, section eight and section sixty-nine, respectively, to hear appeals from decrees and orders.

All such appeals presented between the fifth day of April 1872 and the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to have been presented under this section.

Appeals to Special Court.

6. In the interval between the presentation of an appeal, under section sixty-nine of the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and the hearing thereof by the Special Court, the appeal and all applications relating thereto shall be dealt with by the Judicial Commissioner as if it were an appeal presented in his own Court.

Special Court to be deemed a High Court under Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871.

7. For the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, the said Special Court shall be deemed to be a High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal or as a Court of Reference, as the case may be.

For the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, appeals and applications to the said Special Court shall be deemed to be, respectively, appeals and applications to a High Court under the Code of Civil Procedure or under the Code of Criminal Procedure, as the case may be.

Application of Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871 to certain petitions to Judicial Commissioner.

8. When the civil appellate jurisdiction of any Commissioner has, under section twenty-nine of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, been transferred to the Judicial Commissioner,

(a.) all petitions and other documents presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, be deemed to have been presented to the Commissioner:

(b.) and all appeals and applications presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, be deemed to have been presented to him in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction.

Power to call for record.

9. In any case in which a Court of first appeal has, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, wrongly refused to submit a statement under section thirty-five of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, the Judicial Commissioner may call for the record of the case, and may, on receipt of such record, proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

And in any case in which a Court of first appeal has submitted such a statement, but, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, the statement is unduly limited, or justice cannot be done without re-hearing the case, the Judicial Commissioner may proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

The Judicial Commissioner shall send the Court of first appeal a copy of his judgment in any case tried under this section, and the said Court shall dispose of the case in conformity with such judgment.

Amendment of Act VII of 1872, section 35.

10. To section thirty-five of the said Act, the following words shall be added: "and a certified copy of such reasons shall, on application to the Court, be furnished to any party to the suit."

Licensing of advocates.

11. No person shall be permitted to appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor, or of any appellant, complainant or accused person, in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, or in any Court, whether civil or criminal, subordinate thereto, unless such person is licensed thereto by the Judicial Commissioner, either generally or specially.

Rules for their qualification and admission.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules for the qualification, admission and enrolment of proper persons to appear, plead or act as aforesaid;

and for the suspension or dismissal of any such persons who are guilty of fraudulent or grossly improper conduct.

All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette.

Any person appearing, pleading or acting in contravention of any such rule, shall be liable, by order of the Court, to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Saving of agents of Government, suitors, co-suitors, and advocates of High Courts.

12. Notwithstanding anything contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder, any person may appear, plead or act as the agent for the Crown or for the Secretary of State for India in Council, and any suitor may appear, plead or act on behalf of himself or a co-suitor;

and any person who for the time being is an advocate, vakíl or attorney-at-law of any High Court may appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or any Court subordinate thereto.

And nothing contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder shall be deemed to affect the second clause of section 186 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Fees liable to taxation.

13. The fees to be received by any advocate, for business done in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or in any Court subordinate thereto, shall at all times be subject to the control and taxation of the presiding Judge; and no such fees shall be recoverable unless they have been allowed on taxation by the said Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules regulating the control and taxation of costs in such subordinate Courts.

Saving of certain trials at Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab.

14. No trial had by the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner at Courts of Session in the towns of Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab, shall be deemed to have been invalid merely on the ground that such trial was not by jury.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 19.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 1 OF 1873.

A Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb.

Preamble.

WHEREAS the law relating to appeals and reviews of judgment in the Courts established in the Panjáb has been amended by an Act of which the second section provides that it shall continue in force to the thirtieth day of April 1873: And whereas it is expedient to repeal that Act and to re-enact it without prescribing any period for its continuance; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Appeals' Act, 1873:"

Extent.

It extends to the territories for the time being under the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force at once.

Repeal of Act VII of 1868.

2. Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is repealed.

Appeals when to lie.

3. An appeal shall lie from the decrees of the Courts of original and appellate jurisdiction to the Courts authorized under Act No. XIX of 1865 (The Panjáb Courts' Act) and Act No. IV of 1866 (The Panjáb Chief Court Act) to hear appeals, except where such decrees are by law declared final.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply to appeals.

4. All appeals falling within the jurisdiction of the Courts established in conformity with the said Acts shall, save as in the said Acts and in this Act is otherwise provided, be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, with the modifications subject to which it was extended to the Panjáb, by notification of Government, dated the twelfth day of September 1866.

Second regular appeals.

5. If the decision of a Deputy Commissioner or of a Commissioner passed in regular appeal reverse or modify the decision of the Court of original jurisdiction on a point material to the merits of the case, the Commissioner, where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Deputy Commissioner, and the Chief Court where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Commissioner, may receive a second appeal, if, on a perusal of the grounds of appeal and of copies of the judgments of the Courts below, a further consideration of the case appear to the Commissioner or the Chief Court (as the case may be) requisite for the ends of justice.

Time for presenting appeal.

6. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, accompanied by copies of the judgments of the lower Courts, shall be presented in the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shows sufficient cause to the satisfaction of such Court for not having presented the memorandum of appeal within such period, that is to say, within sixty days if the appeal lie to the Court of a Deputy Commissioner or Commissioner, and within ninety days if the appeal lie to the Chief Court.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the judgment and decree appealed against was pronounced and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment and decree from which the appeal is made.

Confirmation of decision of lower Court.

7. When a memorandum of appeal, or an application for the admission of a special appeal, has been registered, the Appellate Court may, if it sees fit, after fixing a time for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and hearing him accordingly if he appears at such time, confirm the decision of the lower Court, without sending intimation of the appeal to such Court and without issuing notice to the respondent.

Chief Court may remove appeals.

8. The Chief Court of the Panjáb may, whenever it thinks proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect or for purposes of justice, remove and try any appeal falling within the jurisdiction of any Court subject to its superintendence.

Review of judgment.

9. Any person considering himself aggrieved by a decree of a Court of original jurisdiction from which no appeal shall have been preferred to a superior Court, or by a decree of a District or Divisional Court from which no regular or special appeal shall have been admitted by the Chief Court, or by a decree of the Chief Court from which either no appeal may have been preferred to Her Majesty in Council, or, an appeal having been preferred, no proceedings in the suit have been transmitted to Her Majesty in Council;

and who, from the discovery of new matter or evidence which was not within his knowledge, or could not have been adduced by him, at the time when such decree was passed, or from any other good or sufficient reason, may be desirous of obtaining a review of the judgment passed against him, may apply for a review of judgment by the Civil Court which passed the decree, or by any Court to which the business of the former Court has been transferred.

Judgments of Civil Courts subject to revision only as provided by Act.

10. Except as hereinbefore provided, the judgments of the Civil Courts established in conformity with the said Acts and with Act No. III of 1868 (to authorize the Local Government of the Panjáb to invest any person with the powers of an Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár) shall not be subject to revision.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is a temporary measure, and (as it stands) will expire on the 30th April 1873. The object of this Bill (which has been prepared at the request of the Local Government) is to prolong the provisions of the Act indefinitely.

It has been thought better to repeal and re-enact the substance of Act VII of 1868 than to increase the number of laws in the Statute-book. The opportunity has been taken to make two verbal amendments (suggested by the learned Judges of the Chief Court of the Panjáb) in sections 3 and 4 of the present Act.

[First Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 2 OF 1873.

A Bill for the levy of Port-dues in the Ports of British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient from time to time to bring Ports in British Burma under the provisions of Act No. XXII of 1855 (for the regulation of Ports and Port-dues) and to make regulations for the levy of dues in such Ports without the necessity of passing a new Act for each occasion; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Port-dues Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends only to the ports of British Burma which shall have been declared subject to the said Act No. XXII of 1855 :

To be read with Act XXII of 1855.

It shall be read with and taken as part of the same Act ;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Power to declare maximum amount of port-dues leviable in Burma.

2. In every case in which the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, has declared or hereafter declares any port in British Burma to be subject to the said Act, he may, with the like sanction, by the same or any subsequent declaration, and notwithstanding anything contained in section forty-one of the said Act, further declare—

(a.) the maximum amount of dues to be levied in such port,

(b.) the conditions and modifications under which such dues shall be levied, and may also from time to time, with the like sanction, vary such maximum amount, conditions and modifications.

What vessels chargeable.
Limitation of rate.

3. Provided that the dues so authorized shall be charged only on sea-going vessels of the burden of ten tons and upwards, and shall not exceed the rate of four annas for every ton of burden.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to regulate the levy of Port-dues in Mergui, and any other port of British Burma to which Act XXII of 1855 may be extended. Legislation in this direction has already taken place respecting Rangoon, Maulmain, Bassein, Kyuk Phyu and Akyáb. The Bill is so framed as to render it henceforward unnecessary to pass a special Act for every port.

The maximum fee leviable will be four annas per ton.

The Bill has been prepared at the desire of the Local Government and the Marine Department of the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

CONTRIBUTION PROMISED BY THE MAHARAJAH OF BULRAMPORE, K. C. S. I., OF RS. 12,000 ANNUALLY FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A MEDICAL SCHOOL IN CONNECTION WITH THE BULRAMPORE HOSPITAL AT LUCKNOW.

No. 5312, dated Lucknow, the 18th December 1872.

From—H. B. HARINGTON, Esq., Offg. Secy. to the Chief Commissioner of Oudh,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, HOME DEPT.

IN your letter No. 3690, dated 10th August 1869, the Chief Commissioner was directed to inform the Maharajah of Bulrampore, K. C. S. I., that His Excellency the Viceroy in Council had learned with extreme gratification that he had expended two lakhs of rupees for the erection and endowment of a General Hospital in the city of Lucknow.

2. The building had just been completed when the late Lord Mayo visited Lucknow in April 1871, and elicited the unqualified approbation and admiration of that lamented nobleman.

3. It has since been proposed to form a Medical School in connection with the Hospital, with the details of which it is perhaps unnecessary at present to trouble His Excellency the Viceroy in Council; suffice it to say that it is calculated to cost about Rs. 10,000 per annum; and the Local Committees constituted under Act XVII of 1871, for regulating the expenditure of the rates levied under that Act in the several districts, were asked whether they would lend their support to the scheme by subscribing each Rs. 840 per annum.

4. The Officiating Chief Commissioner is glad to be able to say that the twelve Committees at once responded to this call, and agreed to subscribe the necessary funds; but as soon as the Maharajah of Bulrampore heard what was in progress, he sent a letter to Sir George Couper, a copy of which is enclosed, in which, while fully appreciating the public spirit of his countrymen, he deprecates the necessary funds being raised by subscription, and offers to endow the Medical School, which will be the consummation of the undertaking, the welfare of which he has so much at heart, from his own purse.

5. The Maharajah sets an example to all his fellow talookdars in his generosity to his dependants, and in his readiness to promote any measure which may have for its object the welfare of the people and the prosperity of the province at large; and the Officiating Chief Commissioner submits that this last spontaneous proof of the earnest desire of his generous nature to do good is deserving of a special mark of the approbation of the Government of India.

Dated Camp Lucknow, the 5th November 1872.

From—The Maharajah of Bulrampore,

To—The Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

I HAVE been informed that the Committees for the control of the expenditure of the local cess rate in the several districts have subscribed for the establishment of a Medical School in connection with the Hospital which bears my name.

While I am glad to see the public spirit evinced by my countrymen in the furtherance of so laudable an object, I would deprecate the necessary funds being raised by subscription. The establishment of the School will be the consummation of the undertaking, the welfare of which I have so much at heart, and it is therefore my earnest desire to send twelve thousand rupees (with the Government revenue which I have to pay through the Deputy Commissioner, Gondah, annually), which will represent the amount subscribed for its maintenance.

No. 125P, dated Fort William, the 14th January 1873.

From—H. WELLESLEY, Esq., Offg. Under Secy. to the Govt. of India, HOME DEPT.,

To—The Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your Secretary's letter No. 5312, dated the 18th ultimo, reporting that the Maharajah of Bulrampore has promised to contribute a sum of Rs. 12,000 annually for the establishment of a Medical School in connection with the Bulrampore Hospital at Lucknow.

2. In reply, I am to request that you will be good enough to convey to the Maharajah the cordial thanks of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council for this fresh instance of his munificence and benevolence.

3. This correspondence will be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

EXTRACT (PARAS. 53 AND 54 AND CLAUSE 7 OF PARA. 62) FROM THE ANNUAL ADMINISTRATION REPORT OF THE COTTON DEPARTMENT OF THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY FOR 1871-72.

PARA. 53.—The American in a field of 4¼ acres gave an average outturn of 232 lbs. clean cotton per acre, thus giving a higher yield even than the native Sind, the highest outturn of this being on 1½ acres 228 lbs. per acre, while on the farm generally, and under different treatment as regards ploughing and sowing, 216 lbs. was the highest yield.

PARA. 54.—It will be seen from the above that the American in Sind gave about as heavy an outturn of "clean cotton" as our best land in other parts of the Presidency has given of "seed cotton," or, in other words, nearly three times the yield. This, however, is chiefly to be accounted for by the use of irrigation, and also by the fact that at the Sind farm rain is almost unknown; the consequence is that there the young plants do not suffer, as elsewhere, from excessive rain at one period, and a total or partial want of it at another stage of their existence.

PARA. 62 (Clause 7).—The English agricultural implements used by the Superintendents are, as a rule, considered too heavy, though, there can be no question as to the superiority of the work performed. In Sind especially lighter implements are required, as the plough, &c., has to be turned so frequently. The difference, however, in the quantity of water required for irrigating land ploughed deeply by the English and lightly by the Native plough is—as mentioned by Mr. Strachan—very remarkable; he says, speaking of the English plough, "the cotton plants thrive much better on land turned over with it, and also require less water than they do on soil ploughed with the country plough, the yield of cotton per acre on land tilled with English tools being 12 lbs. above the highest return of any of our other fields, though land wrought with the foreign implements was considerably inferior in quality to the field from which our highest return by the Native system of culture was obtained. The former was four times watered, while the latter got nine waterings all over, and part of it got ten".

The italics are mine.

"Deep-ploughing," in addition to its direct advantage to the plant, would thus appear to result in the saving of a considerable amount (say 50 per cent.) of water in irrigation, and consequently, and in addition, in a saving of cattle power, and therefore of expense in lifting the water. It may thus—if proved to be as advantageous as would appear, and if largely practiced in years to come—eventuate in the saving of large sums of money in irrigation works, and even tend to reduce the disposition to certain classes of fever now said to be so prevalent in the neighbourhood of irrigation canals: further, it would appear to double the advantage received from a fixed supply; if this be the case, the rainfall in a district where it is naturally scanty and insufficient would in effect be artificially and indirectly doubled by this deep-ploughing and superior treatment of the soil. With regard to ploughs, Mr. Shearer also speaks: The plough sent out by the Marquis of Tweeddale appears in its construction to be well suited to Native learners and beginners in this country; it is said that "it is very easy to work, for when once the furrow is formed it requires no holding to keep it straight," and even with one pair of bullocks "the work progressed very satisfactorily." The English harrow was also found useful and superior to the Native implement for covering in the seed, as the former leaves the land rough and broken and ready to receive moisture, instead of smoothing it over and laying it flat, as is the case when the latter is used and when a considerable portion of the rainfall would naturally run off, while the "skin" or crust, which forms on level surfaces in black and other rich soils after heavy rain, would not be so unbroken, and therefore so objectionable.

CONFLICT BETWEEN THE POLICE AND THE COOLIES EMPLOYED ON THE DEVONSHIRE CASTLE PLANTATION IN BRITISH GUIANA.

No. 129, dated India Office, London, the 21st November 1872.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,
To—The Government of India.

I FORWARD herewith, for the information of Your Excellency in Council, copy of a letter from the Colonial Office,* with enclosures, relative to a conflict, attended, it is deeply to be regretted, with loss of lives, between the Police and the coolies employed on the Devonshire Castle Plantation at Essequebo in British Guiana.

* Dated 1st November 1872.

2. Further particulars will be transmitted on receipt from the Colonial Office.

Dated Downing Street, London, the 1st November 1872.

*From—*R. G. W. HERBERT, Esq., Under Secretary of State for the Colonies,
To—The Under Secretary of State for India.

I AM directed by the Earl of Kimberley to transmit to you, for the information of His Grace the Duke of Argyll, the accompanying despatch† from the Governor of British Guiana, on the subject of a conflict between the Police and the Indian coolies employed in the "Devonshire Castle" Plantation, Essequebo, and a disturbance which occurred on the neighbouring plantation of "Anna Regina." Lord Kimberley is not at present in a position to express any opinion upon these occurrences, but will no doubt receive by the next mail further particulars which shall be transmitted to you without delay.

† No. 132, dated 7th October 1872.

No. 132, dated Georgetown, the 7th October 1872.

*From—*J. SCOTT, Esq., Governor of British Guiana,
To—The Secretary of State for the Colonies.

IT is with extreme regret I have to acquaint your Lordship that a conflict took place on Monday last between a body of Indian coolies, about two hundred in number, belonging to Plantation "Devonshire Castle," the extreme northern estate on the Essequebo Coast, and a Police force of twenty-four men, which has been attended with fatal results, five coolies having been killed and nine wounded; of these latter only one received a severe wound, and he is expected to recover.

2. At present I cannot do more than offer a narrative of this lamentable occurrence as it has been reported to me. An inquest was opened by the Sheriff of the County on the following day, but only the evidence of the Doctor, who examined the dead bodies, was taken: the inquest will be resumed to-day. Should this investigation fail to elicit all the facts which it is necessary to ascertain, I shall at its conclusion institute a formal enquiry.

3. On Tuesday, the 24th ultimo, Mr. King, Acting Sub-Agent, visited Plantation Devonshire Castle, and he informs me that some of the immigrants complained that they were paid a too low price for their work. This is a common complaint often found to be groundless, and on his offering to have their work valued in the customary manner they refused, stating that they had received the money and there was an end of the matter. He, however, examined the pay lists, and found they had been earning good wages. One coolie complained that he had been compelled to work all night in the buildings.

4. On Friday, the 27th, it appears that one of the immigrants had been guilty of disorderly conduct in the buildings, and was arrested by a rural constable, and the other coolies present immediately rescued the prisoner. The Manager, Mr. Abel, on the same day applied to the Stipendiary Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, for a warrant to arrest the immigrants implicated in this transaction. The Magistrate being aware that the Sub-Agent, Mr. King, had visited the estate a few days previously, placed himself in communication with him, and it was agreed that they would visit the estate on the following day (Saturday) and enquire into the circumstances reported by the Manager. On returning home, Mr. Loughran was informed by his servant that upwards of two hundred of the Devonshire Castle coolies had passed along the road on their way to Georgetown to see the Governor. He states in his report that he immediately procured an interpreter and followed and came up with the immigrants in full marching order near Queenstown (about 10 miles distant from Devonshire Castle), and called upon their leader to explain their grievances, and with much difficulty persuaded them to return to the estate, promising to hold an enquiry on the spot the following day. This arrangement accorded with that already agreed upon with the Manager. He at the same time sent a request to the Sub-Inspector of Police to move a body of Police to Daniel's Town, a village about two miles distant from Devonshire Castle Plantation.

5. Mr. Loughran reports, under date Saturday, the 28th, that he held the enquiry as promised at Devonshire Castle, and that Mr. King, Acting Sub-Immigration Agent, informed the coolies that the work of which they complained would be appraised by proper parties. With regard to the men working in the buildings, he states that they had two causes of complaint, one was the length of time they asserted they were obliged to work every day for two shillings; the other was a complaint of an assault committed on one of them by the Manager on the previous day (Friday), when the disturbance, to which I have already referred, took place in the buildings. The Magistrate having completed this preliminary investigation, appointed Monday, the 30th, for a judicial hearing of the charges at his Court at Daniel's Town.

6. In continuation of the narrative I will quote from a report made by the Magistrate late on Monday evening after the conflict had taken place between the police and the immigrants. He states, "I proceeded to hold a special sitting at Daniel's Town to hear the complaints of two coolies (Peraag and Pertaub) against the Manager of Devonshire Castle, an overseer, and the head boilerman. These persons were present to answer to a charge of assault and battery. When the cases were called the complainants refused to appear. I sent my interpreter to them, but instead of returning to Court they marched at the head of some hundred coolies in the direction of their estate Devonshire Castle. I believe that no assault was committed on the two coolies who brought the charges. About one o'clock the Inspector (Griffin) informed me that the immigrants had returned to Plantation Devonshire Castle and were about to wreck the estate. The armed force were marched there at once. When the Inspector and I arrived we found the coolies drawn up in battle array across the road leading to the Manager's house. I went forward and asked them to disperse. They refused to move an inch. I then read the Riot Act and explained it to them through my interpreter. I informed them if they did not disperse within one hour the police would drive them away, and what might occur would be on their heads. I sent my interpreter to them frequently, earnestly requesting them, in the name of the Queen, to return to their houses, during the hour that elapsed before the police charged with fixed bayonets. The coolies remained in position insulting and defiant. The Riot Act was read at a quarter to two o'clock, and the police charged with fixed bayonets at three o'clock P. M., when we saw further parley useless. The Inspector ordered the men to use their bayonets only. I told them as well as the Inspector not to pull a trigger until they received orders. There were twenty-four of the armed police present. At this juncture a deplorable accident occurred. When the police charged, the coolies rushed at them with their hackia sticks, one of which struck two of the rifles on the hammer and they exploded. Some seven more of the men thinking, I presume, that an order had been given to fire, discharged their guns. The effect was most disastrous. Five men were killed and some eight wounded. I enclose the Doctor's report. Immediately after the discharge of the rifles, the immigrants took to flight and peace was restored; some prisoners were made, but two of the ringleaders have escaped to the Bush. One of the worst men was shot dead. I left Inspector Griffin in charge of the estate. I have had an interview with the Acting Inspector General and Mr. Trotter. I shall meet them early to-morrow morning to concert means for the complete pacification of the District. I have written to Mr. Sheriff Humphreys to hold inquests. Many respectable people were leaving the coast, so frightened were they at the coolie displays of strength."

7. I have given a narrative of the events which led to this deplorable conflict between the immigrants of Devonshire Castle and the police, as reported to me by the Stipendiary Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, but it is right that I should place Your Lordship in possession of certain other proceedings which occurred at the same time on another estate within Mr. Loughran's district, "Anna Regina," situated about six miles distant from Devonshire Castle, and which has given rise to an impression that there was a connivance between the coolies on several estates to create a general disturbance and proceed to acts of violence. There is no evidence before me to support such a conclusion, but it would be premature to offer any opinion on this and other public rumours until a full investigation has been made.

8. Mr. King, Acting Sub-Immigration Agent, visited the estate of Anna Regina on Friday, the 27th ultimo. Complaints were made to him by some of the immigrants that they were insufficiently paid for their task work, and a memorial to this effect was presented to him.

He proposed that they should select arbitrators to value the work, to which some of them assented, and named two planters, both of whom do not reside in the Essequibo District; others refused a resort to the usual arbitration, and requested Mr. King himself to examine the work. He visited the field with them, but not being skilled in the labor of the estates, could not offer any decision, and he informed the immigrants that he would write to the immigration office and measures would be taken to investigate their complaints. Shortly after Mr. King left the estate, the Manager, Mr. Shaw, on leaving the estate's hospital was assaulted by two coolies, who are said to have been drunk, but the other coolies at once interfered and rescued the Manager.

9. On the following day (Saturday 28th), Mr. Loughran on returning from holding his preliminary investigation on Devonshire Castle, called at Anna Regina, and was requested by the Manager to issue a warrant for the arrest of the ringleader of the two coolies who had attacked him, which was granted, and the Magistrate at the earnest request of the Manager consented to have it executed on the following morning (Sunday 29th). The reason given for its execution on Sunday was that the assailant had been a convict at the Penal Settlement, and if any delay occurred he would be employed during the interval in spreading discontent on the estate. The warrant was entrusted to Police Serjeant Evelyn, with instructions from the Magistrate to execute it in the quietest manner. The coolie was arrested and was being conveyed to the Police Station close to the estate when a large crowd of coolies assembled and rescued the prisoner. On the rescue being reported to the Magistrate, he sent for a reinforcement of Police, and at once proceeded to the estate to re-arrest the prisoner. On this subject the Magistrate reports as follows:—

"In this I was disappointed, as the man could not be found, and had evidently been smuggled off the estate. Mr. King was present. He and I did all in our power to persuade the immigrants to deliver up the man, but without effect. The coolies were very insolent and threatening in their demeanour. Many of them were intoxicated. Seeing that we were foiled, I told the immigrants that I would suspend proceedings until Tuesday, when I would hold a court at Bush Lot (the Police Station adjoining the estate), when Mr. Shaw would answer their charges. They said the prisoner would deliver himself up then. Summonses will be served early to-morrow morning (Monday 30th) on the coolies who rescued the prisoner. Mr. Shaw has also been summoned for assault. I fear there is widespread discontent among the coolies. I trust a sufficient force will be sent to the Coast in order that the law may be enforced without delay."

9. The immigrants did not wait to attend the Magistrate's Court on Tuesday, but early on the Monday morning about two hundred of them assembled and left the estate with the intention of proceeding to Airy Hall, and embarking in the steamer for Georgetown, and coming to the Immigration Department. On passing the Magistrate's residence, situated about 2½ miles from the estate, they stopped, and he urged them to return, but they refused, stating that they were underpaid for their labor. The prisoner who had been rescued was amongst them. The immigrants proceeded on their journey, and had arrived within a short distance of Airy Hall, where the steamboat takes up passengers, a distance of thirteen miles from their estate, when they were met about one o'clock P. M. by the Acting Inspector General of Police and Mr. Trotter, Sub-Agent of the Immigration Department, who had just disembarked from the steamer, and were by this latter gentleman persuaded to return to their estate on his assurance that he would make a full enquiry into their grievances.

10. Your Lordship will observe that the proceedings of the coolies on Anna Regina had no connexion with those of the Devonshire Castle coolies. At the time the affray occurred between the Police force and the latter, the former were on their return to their own estate from an opposite direction, and distant twelve miles from Devonshire Castle.

11. The first information I received of these disturbances on the Essequibo Coast was from the Acting Inspector General of Police, Mr. Hill, who very early on the morning of Monday, the 29th, brought to me a letter from Mr. Inspector Griffin, who reported that the immigrants had rescued a prisoner arrested at Anna Regina under the warrant of the Stipendiary Magistrate of the District, Mr. Loughran, and requested a reinforcement of Police. I at once instructed the Acting Inspector General of Police himself to embark on board the steamer then about to leave for the Essequibo Coast, with a detatchment of fifty policemen, and directed the Sub-Immigration Agent, Mr. Trottter, to accompany him. It was on their landing that they met the coolies from Anna Regina, and persuaded them to return to their estate as I have above reported.

12. On Tuesday, the 1st of October, I received about mid-day a letter from the Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, reporting the conflict between the Police and the Devonshire Castle immigrants, and it being impossible to judge what might be the effect of this occurrence on the other coolies on the Coast, I deemed it prudent to engage a steamer and despatch a detachment of fifty men of the Regiment stationed here. The troops were to be stationed in the large Police barracks at Suddie, to be ready to aid the Police force should any exigency arise. With the troops I sent over the Government Secretary and Mr. Brumell, the Police Magistrate, who was well acquainted with that part of the colony. Mr. Trotter, the Sub-Immigration Agent, had visited the Estates of Anna Regina and Devonshire Castle, and he was enabled to report to the Government Secretary that the immigrants on both estates had resumed their work on a promise from him that their complaints should be fully investigated. The coolies on Devonshire Castle he found laboring under great excitement, and they stated that they would not continue to work on the estate if the manager and an overseer, who they named, were not removed. This is a condition which I need scarcely observe cannot be complied with; but the Indian immigrants are a people easily excited, who after a short time calm down, and there is at present every reason to believe that no further commotion will arise. In cases of this kind it has always been found that the mass are influenced by a few turbulent men, who from the power they have gained amongst them, incite them to rash acts in which the majority join unwillingly.

13. The Government Secretary visited the estates of Anna Regina and Devonshire Castle, and found the immigrants at work. All the coolies against whom warrants were issued have been quietly arrested by the Acting Inspector General without any display of force, and they are now in custody. The Government Secretary with a portion of the detachment of troops returned on Saturday; the remainder returned by the steamer to-day. A small detachment of Police have been left on the estates of Devonshire Castle and Anna Regina as a temporary and precautionary measure. Mr. Trotter is now engaged in investigating, according to promise, the complaints put forward by the immigrants of insufficiency of wages, which he expects to complete by Thursday next, and he is sanguine that it will end peaceably.

14. By the next mail I will report to Your Lordship the results of the Coroner's Inquest and other investigations which may be instituted in order to arrive at a just conclusion on the painful occurrences on Devonshire Castle.

No. 142 (Emigration), dated India Office, London, the 11th December 1872.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,
To—The Government of India.

I FORWARD herewith, in continuation of my despatch of 21st November, No. 129 of 1872, a further communication* from the Colonial Office, on the subject of the recent riot by coolies on the "Devonshire Castle" estate in British Guiana.

* 20th November 1872, and enclosures.

2. I would draw the particular attention of Your Excellency in Council to the despatch addressed by the Earl of Kimberley to the Governor of British Guiana. I have informed the Secretary of State for the Colonies that I shall await the result of the full and searching enquiry therein ordered.

Dated Downing Street, London, the 20th November 1872.

From—R. G. W. HERBERT, Esq., Under Secretary of State for the Colonies,
To—The Under Secretary of State for India.

WITH reference to my letter of the 1st instant, I am directed by the Earl of Kimberley to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a despatch* from the Governor of British Guiana, enclosing the report of the inquest on the bodies of the coolies who were shot by the police in the riot on "Devonshire Castle" estate.

* No. 138, 25th October.

I am also to enclose a copy of a despatch which Lord Kimberley has addressed to Governor Scott on the subject.

No. 138, dated Georgetown, the 25th October 1872.

From—J. SCOTT, Esq., Governor of British Guiana,
To—The Secretary of State for the Colonies.

IN my despatch No. 132 of the 7th instant, I reported that a conflict had taken place between a body of about two hundred Indian immigrants working on the Devonshire Castle plantation and a detachment of twenty-four police, in which five coolies had been killed and nine wounded.

I now enclose a printed copy of the minutes of the evidence at the Coroner's inquest held before the Stipendiary Magistrate and Sheriff of the county, Mr. Humphreys. The verdict of the jury exonerates the policemen who fired, considering that they were acting in defence of their lives and other persons present, and for the preservation of the public peace; the jurors further add that but for the accidental explosion of one rifle from the blow of a hackia stick which caused the police constables to believe that the order to fire had been given, and so discharged several other rifles, they believe, from the evidence before them, that the riot which was confined to Devonshire Castle would, but for the fortunate explosion of these rifles, have become a widespread rebellion, most disastrous in its consequences.

3. In my former despatch I gave a narrative of this deplorable occurrence based upon the reports sent in by the Stipendiary Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, and it may be convenient again to refer to the main causes which led ultimately to the conflict of the police.

4. Mr. King, Sub-Immigration Agent, visited Devonshire Castle on the 24th of September in the discharge of his ordinary duties of inspection, on which occasion some of the immigrants complained, as is not unusual, of the low wages they were receiving. They, however, refused to have their work valued by arbitrators, stating that they had received their wages and there was an end of the matter. On the same occasion one of the immigrants, named Peraag, complained that he was compelled to work too long in the buildings for the two shillings he received, and he was told that no one could exact from him more than ten hours' labor by the Ordinance. And from the evidence of the manager it appears that Peraag went round the buildings on the following day and told all the people to knock off work at five o'clock in the afternoon, and that the coolies in the buildings did so on that and the following day. On the Friday, Peraag began creating a disturbance in the buildings, shouting and dancing frantically, and haranguing the other coolies. This was in the presence of the manager, who ordered him to be quiet, but he only became more violent and used threatening language. The manager ordered him to leave the buildings and attempted to have him turned out, but ultimately sent for a rural constable to have him arrested. On the arrest being made, Peraag called upon the other coolies to rescue him, and two immigrants, named Pertaub and Warral, with some others, released him. Their conduct then became extremely violent; they threatened the manager's life, and Peraag endeavoured to excite them to attack the manager's house. Further proceedings were prevented by the manager being joined by two of his overseers. Ultimately, a large gang of the coolies, numbering about 250, left the estate and proceeded to the Magistrate's residence. As I have reported in my former despatch, the Magistrate made arrangements to visit the estate in company with Mr. King, the Sub-Immigration Agent, and it was decided after holding a preliminary investigation that the case would be heard before him at his Court on Monday. A large gang of coolies attended at the time of the opening of the Court, amongst which were Peraag, the originator of the disturbance, and others who had joined him. They refused to enter the Court when called, and, under the inducement of their ringleaders, returned to the estate. From an investigation made by Mr. Trotter, the Sub-Immigration Agent, it is shewn that the coolies on their return to the estate became very violent and greatly excited; those who had not already their hackia sticks, a formidable weapon as the evidence before the Coroner shows, obtained them from their houses, and they openly declared their intention to kill the manager and one of the overseers. All the Creoles who were at work in the buildings left, being afraid of the coolies, and these latter searched the overseer's house to find Mr. Mackenzie, whose life they threatened to take, but he fortunately had concealed himself elsewhere. The coolies then proceeded to take up a position on the public road leading to the estate, and while there stopped the waggon of a Mr. Bunbury, and two of them were upon the point of striking him with their hackia sticks, when they were prevented by the others who called out that he was not their manager.

5. Shortly after this the police arrived with the Magistrate, and the occurrences which then took place are fully described in the evidence taken before the Coroner, as well as in my former despatch as reported by the Magistrate.

6. I have given this short account of the acts of the coolies in order that Your Lordship may perceive how, from the unruly conduct of one man, those who joined him were led on step by step into a serious riot. Having openly defied the Magistrate and disregarded his entreaties to become peaceable and return to the estate, he considered it to be his duty to disperse them and preserve the peace, and prevent their carrying out their threats of violence. His object in directing the police to charge the rioters with bayonets was to arrest the ringleaders. From the small number of police and the large number of coolies, armed with their hackia sticks and worked up to a pitch of intense excitement, there was great risk of the police being overpowered, and had this occurred the results would, there can be little doubt, have been most disastrous. It is evident that the coolies did not think the police would fire upon them, and hence their bold daring and defiance of the Magistrate. Your Lordship will observe from the evidence of Mr. Inspector Griffin, formerly an officer in the Army, and the Stipendiary Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, that it is considered that had not one of the rifles been accidentally discharged, and which led to the discharge of others, the police would have been surrounded and overpowered, and their lives sacrificed. The Magistrate expresses his opinion that had not the police fired he would eventually have been under the necessity of giving an order to fire, as the coolies treated the bayonets with contempt.

7. The jurors in their verdict state that the riot, which was confined to the one estate of Devonshire Castle, would, but for the accidental explosion of the rifles, have become a wide-spread rebellion, most disastrous in its consequences. This declaration is based, I presume, upon the opinion expressed by the Magistrate at the inquest that "had the coolies overcome the police the county of Essequebo would have become a scene of murder, rapine and pillage." There is no evidence adduced in support of this declaration; it is mere surmise, and a matter upon which no one could rightly make any positive declaration. Had the police been overpowered, it may be safely predicted that the result would have been most disastrous to those opposed to the coolies, and in the excitement which would have followed, other acts of violence would most probably have been committed, but I am not disposed to consider it would have led to such results as those predicted by the Magistrate.

8. It has been generally stated that there was a combination amongst the coolies on Devonshire Castle and those in the neighbouring estates, but I have failed to discover any evidence of this, and from enquiries made by the Acting Inspector General of Police, I feel assured that it is one of those rumours which, on occasions of this kind, are easily originated and propagated from person to person.

9. As regards the complaints of the coolies, in the first instance, that they were insufficiently paid for their task work, I have to report that the Sub-Immigration Agent, Mr. Trotter, has, with the assistance of skilled arbitrators, selected by the coolies themselves, clearly shewn that the wages they received were equal to the value of the work. Indeed, it appeared almost certain at the beginning that this complaint was not put forward by them seriously and was merely one of those complaints so frequently made to the Sub-Agents on their visits of inspection. The first step which has led up to the serious affray with the police was the conduct of the coolie Peraag in the buildings. Unfortunately, there are found on most of the estates a few coolies who obtain a great influence over their fellow coolies,—men of energy and of turbulent spirit, who easily excite them, and thus in some measure force them to join unwillingly in acts of violence.

10. In my former despatch I reported that the ringleaders had been quietly arrested, without any resort to force, and that they are now in prison awaiting their trial before the Magistrate. Mr. Loughran having been personally concerned in the affray, I have directed another Magistrate to hold a Court for the purpose, and should any of them be referred for trial to the Supreme Court, as will most probably be the case, I shall direct a special Session to be held in the county of Essequebo, and thus avoid the long delay which would otherwise occur in bringing them to trial.

11. I am glad that I can report that the coolies both on Devonshire Castle and on all the other estates in the Essequebo district are working peaceably and industriously. I see no cause to fear any further excitement or any disturbance of the public peace.

The Essequebo Disturbance.

THE inquest concerning the death of the men who were shot on the occasion was opened by Mr. Sheriff Humphreys at the manager's house on Tuesday, 1st October, when the evidence of Dr. Goring, the medical attendant of the estate, was taken. It was then adjourned till to-day, to be resumed at the Bush Lot Station.

Friday, 4th October.

The inquest stands adjourned till Monday (7th) at 11 o'clock, at the Bush Lot Station.

Monday, 7th October.

The inquest touching the death of the five coolies, Maxidally, Beccaroo, Kaulica, Baldeo, and Auckloo, who were shot during the riotous disturbance which took place on plantation Devonshire Castle on Monday last was resumed to-day by Mr. Sheriff Humphreys at the Bush Lot Court-room. Mr. Stipendiary Justice Loughran, the Magistrate of the district, occupied a seat near the Coroner.

Shortly after eleven o'clock, the Coroner entered the Court-room, when he was informed by Inspector Hill that one of the jurors—Mr. Shiells of plantation La Belle Alliance—was unable to attend in consequence of illness. He had seen him that morning, and he was in bed.

The Coroner asked whether the doctor had seen him, and whether he had forwarded a certificate that he was ill and unable to attend?

Inspector Hill replied that the doctor in the morning unfortunately passed him and went up the coast.

The Coroner said that was unfortunate. The enquiry was a most important one, and the wish of the Government was to get through it as quickly as possible. He regretted that he would have to postpone it.

Mr. Loughran said there was no reason why the enquiry should be postponed. Mr. Shiells was absent, but three other jurors were present. They were "good and true men," and the law stated that three men, but not less than three, could sit.

The Coroner said the enquiry was a most important one, and he should like the four jurors originally summoned to be present.

Mr. Loughran assured his worship that it was not absolutely necessary that the whole number of jurors originally summoned should be present before the inquest could be proceeded with. If there were three present, that was sufficient, according to his reading of the law.

The Coroner, after looking over the Ordinance, said there was no provision in it for such a contingency. He recollected that in a case before the Supreme Court down here, that one of the jurors in the case—Mr. John Young—took ill, and was compelled to go home, and the case had to be adjourned till the next day.

Mr. Loughran said there could be no doubt as to the course which should be adopted in the event of such a contingency, for in criminal cases the law distinctly said that there should be neither more nor less than twelve men.

The Coroner consulted Jarvis, but could find nothing in it bearing upon the point. He then handed it to Mr. Loughran, remarking that perhaps he understood the index better than he (the Coroner) did, and he might be able to put his hand upon some passage bearing upon the subject.

Mr. Loughran said that in very many instances the index showed you just nothing at all; but he had no doubt the inquiry could be legally proceeded with, with the three jurors who were present.

After some discussion—

The Coroner finally made up his mind to proceed with the enquiry, and the jurors were formally sworn. Their names are:—Philip Smith and James Alexander Bascom, of plantation Hampton Court, and Peter John Rohlehr, of plantation Windsor Castle. Mr. Smith was elected foreman.

The first witness examined was—

Mr. Peter Abel, the manager of plantation Devonshire Castle. He said: This is my first management: but I have been deputy manager at La Penitence. I have been manager of plantation Devonshire Castle about fifteen months. Having been a deputy manager I have had coolies under my charge before. I left La Penitence to go to Devonshire Castle as manager by way of promotion. For fourteen months everything has gone on smoothly. I have never heard any complaints or grumblings from the coolies; on the contrary, they had always worked very cheerfully. I have never heard of any dissatisfaction expressed by any of the people during the period I mentioned, and I have every reason to believe that they were perfectly satisfied and contented. At different times—shortly after I went to the estate—they asked for more wages. It was about five or six weeks after I had been upon the estate that they hinted, as I was going through the fields, that they wanted more money. It was not a general demand or complaint: it was only made by some of the coolies. There seemed to be no discontent among them whatever. On one or two occasions I complied with their wish and increased their wages according to the nature of the work. I cannot remember the exact day upon which this last dissatisfaction showed itself. One Friday, about a month or five weeks ago, the whole coolie shovel gang were digging a trench, and there were 25 or 30 Creole laborers with them. The coolies had been working the whole of that week without showing any signs of dissatisfaction; but on this Friday they came to me in a body and demanded more money for their work. They asked in a very quiet way; but I refused to give them more money. Their conduct after my refusal to comply with their demand was not insolent; but they went away in a body to the Magistrate of the district. This was on the 30th of August, to the best of my knowledge. There were about 130 of them. They returned from the Magistrate on the afternoon of the same day and went back to their work the next morning—the same work they had been doing, and for the same rate of wages. I saw no more signs of dissatisfaction among them until two or three weeks afterwards, when there was a change in their demeanour altogether, and the coolies generally began to be very insolent. On Tuesday, the 23rd September, Mr. King, Immigration Agent, came down to the estate on a visit, and they made several complaints to him in my presence about their work and their wages. They complained of insufficiency of wages. That was the only complaint they made against me. Mr. King took notes of their complaints, and three or four of them, named Ooderman, Gopaul, Serjoo, and Maxidally, who has since been killed, expressed a wish to be removed from the estate. Mr. King took two extracts from the pay list, and told them that they were earning higher wages than the coolies on the West Coast. That did not seem to satisfy them at all, and one man named Peraag complained that he was kept too long in the buildings. Mr. King told him that no one could compel him to work more than ten hours, and he said nothing. The next day this man Peraag went round the buildings and told the people to knock off work at five o'clock in the afternoon, and they did so that day and on the next. On the Friday morning at about seven o'clock (the 27th) I went into the buildings and found Peraag creating a disturbance on the copper-wall. He was shouting out at the top of his voice, and dancing frantically about, stamping upon his hat, and haranguing the others. I ordered him to be quiet: he refused to do so, and began to abuse me in Hindustani. I know the Hindustani language. (Witness repeated the expressions, which were of the most filthy and revolting nature.) I ordered him to go out of the buildings, and he refused to go, and commenced dancing more than before, and became more violent. When I attempted to have him put out, he said that he would cut my head off with a cutlass. I told him I would send for a constable and have him put out, and he said he would kill the first constable that came near him. I had a charge made against him for riotous and disorderly conduct, and sent for a constable named Pompey Reid to arrest him. The constable came and I gave him the charge. At first Peraag refused to go, and while he was standing on the wall he threatened to kill me and the constable. At last he went, calling all the way to the rest of the coolies in the buildings to rescue him. He did this in Hindustani. Two men named Pertaub and Warrall came to rescue him, at the same time calling upon the others to follow them. At about 50 yards from the buildings they stepped between Peraag and the constable, and I saw Peraag take up a punt pole to strike the constable, but finding it too heavy he dropped it, and struck him with his fist. I saw all this. Peraag then sent two men named Ramadeen and Soodje to call the men composing the shovel gang, which was working quite near. He armed himself with a cocoanut limb, and the shovel gang was immediately on the spot. He then came up to the bridge where I was standing, and shook the cocoanut limb in my face, saying that he would kill me before the sun went down. I had been joined by two of the overseers by this time; their names are Hugh McKenzie and James Robertson. Two of the men named Oodermah and Gopaul came up to us and threatened us, and Peraag, in my hearing, advised them to attack my house, and smash up everything that was in it. They came forward immediately after and stood at the bridge, thus preventing the overseers from passing. Some of them had sticks. I had nothing in my hands. About two hours after some of them came to me and asked me to allow them to go back to their work in the buildings, on the understanding that they should knock off when they pleased. I refused to allow this, and in about an hour and a half after, they left the estate in a body. There were about 250, and we have about 450 on the estate. This was at about one or two o'clock on the Friday. The next morning not one coolie belonging to the estate returned to work, except a few porters, some of whom were indentured. On that day one of them preferred a charge against me before the Magistrate of the district, Mr. Loughran, who had come to the estate for the purpose of enquiring into matters. The coolies were called up, and Peraag complained to Mr. Loughran that I had assaulted him the previous morning. I believe Pertaub made a complaint against one of the overseers for assault, and the Magistrate investigated the complaints on the spot. Peraag said he had no money to pay for a summons, and the Magistrate told him that he would give him a free summons, and would hold a court on Monday to try the cases. He said he would not go to prosecute, but Mr. Loughran told him that he would have to go. After a good deal of hesitation he promised to go, and the coolies dispersed for that day. The Magistrate had called up the overseer Fraser and the head boiler Sundersingh and myself in presence of the whole gang, and told to appear on the Monday at Daniel's. The coolies had been told to be at Daniel's Town Court-room at eleven o'clock, where he would hold a special court to hear their complaints. Sunday was quiet. On Monday I was at Daniel's Town at eleven o'clock. I took Fraser, Pompey Reid and Sundersingh with me. When the court was declared opened, I saw the coolies (the whole gang had come) going down the road, and heard them saying that they were going home. The court was opened immediately after the Magistrate came. I observed Peraag and Pertaub among the gang, and one of the men was shoving them along and telling them to go home. They went, and Mr. Loughran took my evidence and Pompey Reid's. When the cases of Peraag and Pertaub were called, they were not there, and then it was that the Magistrate proceeded to take the evidence for the defence. Before this was finished a message came from the estate to the effect that the coolies had taken possession of it. There were also five different messages to the effect that the coolies were waiting for me on the way to kill me. I informed Mr. Loughran, who was still in court, of what I had heard, and a body of police was sent down to the estate. Mr. Griffin was in court, and had on the previous night brought down a detachment of policemen, and it was these men he sent to the estate by the Magistrate's order. This was at about one o'clock. I went along with Mr. Griffin and the Magistrate to the estate. When I got there I saw the whole coolie gang, women and children and all, draw up across the road leading into the estate, about 250 of them being armed with sticks. They were the usual long hackia sticks. On getting out of my waggon, I went up to them to within ten yards, accompanied by the Magistrate. He went close up to them, taking an interpreter with him. He cautioned me not to go too near to them, as that might exasperate them; and went up to them himself. He told them through the interpreter that if they had any grievances, they must conduct themselves properly, and their grievances would be redressed. They said to the interpreter that they did not want any redress, but wanted to kill everybody that was there. They were greatly excited, and were brandishing their sticks in all directions. The Magistrate ordered them to disperse, and I heard one of them named Rambaul say that if we got into the estate that day it would be by walking over their dead bodies. Other threats were uttered, and instead of becoming quiet they got worse. They were more intoxicated by excitement than by liquor. The yellings, cursing, and swearing continued for about half an hour, the Magistrate in the meanwhile using all his powers of persuasion to get them to disperse. They paid no attention whatever to his words, and I saw one man come out of the ranks and raise a stick over his (the Magistrate's) head, but he was pulled back by another, who said that it was not time to do that yet. In the meanwhile the police were drawn up at about six yards in front of them. They were continually pressing forward, and at one time they made a movement to surround the police. Seeing this, Mr. Griffin drew back his men a little, and formed them in a half circle or crescent. Mr. Loughran again requested them to disperse, and again they refused to do so, several of them calling out in Hindustani to "kill them outright." Seeing that they were getting more desperate, Mr. Loughran was compelled to read the Riot Act. That was interpreted to the coolies three times over. A great number of them were coolies who had been here for years; an hour and a half elapsed, and they did not disperse, although begged repeatedly to do so. The Magistrate then pointed out three of the ringleaders, and ordered them to be arrested. Inspector Griffin pointed them out to three of his men, who went forward to arrest them. The men had not advanced more than a step when the whole body of coolies closed in upon them. I saw one policeman knocked down. The coolies were striking about with their sticks in every direction. Eight or ten of them came round me, and I received a blow at the back of my neck, and I saw nothing more. I had a sword in my hand, which I had sent to my house for some time before I was attacked. I was afraid I would have been murdered. I had no revolver. I saw the ranks of the people broken, but I did not observe much, for I was busy taking care of myself. In all my experience I have never seen such a rising by coolies, and I considered that my life and the life of every one who was not a coolie were in danger. They pointed out the Magistrate and myself particularly as objects of destruction, and I did not expect to see another day. I heard at one time the report of one rifle, and afterwards I think about three or four reports followed. After these reports the coolies continued to fight for two or three minutes. My opinion is that if those reports of the rifles had not taken place, the police would have been overpowered, and every one of them murdered.

By the Foreman of the Jury.—There were free coolies among the gang, and they were also armed.

By the Coroner.—I have been in this colony five years. I did not see any of the Hampton Court coolies in the riot, but immediately after I saw about fifteen or twenty of them on the Devonshire Castle estate. It was about five minutes after the riot. After the mob had dispersed, I observed two of the coolies lying dead upon the ground. I did not call the Hampton Court coolies up and ask them what they were doing there; but they had no business there. It was three o'clock then, and they ought to have been in the field at Hampton Court. I saw the coolies strike the rifles of the police with their sticks, and several of them struck some of the police. I think there were about twenty or twenty-four policemen there. They were several black people there, but when they saw it was coming on to fighting they ran away. Among the persons who came there to assist were Mr. Blake, Mr. Bunbury, Mr. Muir, and two of the overseers. They were not armed; so far I saw.

The enquiry was here adjourned for ten minutes.

On its being resumed—

Pompey Reid was examined. He said: I live on plantation Devonshire Castle, and I am a rural constable. I have been a constable about fifteen years. On Friday before last the manager sent for me to arrest a coolie, and I went. When I got into the buildings he gave me a charge against Peraag. He was quiet at the time, and when I told him that I had a charge to arrest him upon, he said that he would go, and another coolie named Pertaub told him not to go. I remained near for a while, and then Pertaub told him to go, and he went; but Pertaub said that if that man, meaning Peraag, went to the station all the coolies would leave off work and go too. While I was going away with Peraag, Pertaub followed me, and cried out to the other coolies not to work. At about six yards over the bridge, all the coolies about the buildings ran after me, and some who were working at the front joined them. There were about 30 of them. When Peraag saw them he would not go any further, and I went and told the manager what had taken place. On my return to the place where the coolies were still standing, Peraag came up to me and gave me a blow. He then held me by the hand and attempted to drag me in the midst of the coolies, but I pulled myself back. He then took up a punt pole and said that if I arrested anybody he would knock me down with it. When I heard that I went away, and told the manager that I was unable to take the man to the station, and he had better send for some policemen, as it appeared to me that the coolies were going to make a row on the estate. I was not at the front of the estate when the fight was going on. I did not go on any further with Peraag in consequence of threats which were uttered against me by the coolies. I heard the coolies threaten the manager on the same day. They said that they would beat him and kill him, and were talking about wages. They said that the manager made them work very hard, and did not give them enough money. On the same day at two o'clock I saw a large number of them leaving the estate and going up the coast; but I do not know where they went to. On the day the row took place I had gone to Daniel's Town, and had not returned in time; when I got back everything was over.

The Coroner.—Is it not the fact that you did not go back to the estate as soon as you might have done because you were afraid of the coolies?

Witness.—No, sir; it was not exactly that. I had a child sick at Daniel's Town, and I was looking after it.

The Coroner.—You are a rural constable, and you did not get there in time, eh? But you saw the men marched off by Mr. Griffin, did you not?

Witness.—Yes sir, I saw him.

Coroner.—Are you a driver of a coolie gang at Devonshire Castle?

Witness.—Yes, sir.

The Foreman of the Jury.—The shovel gang, or the weeding gang?

Witness.—The shovel gang, sir.

The Coroner.—And you did not take part in the row, eh? You kept away on purpose?

Witness.—I did not keep away on purpose, sir, I saw the police going down, so I thought that there would not be any more row.

Mr. James Robertson was next examined. He said: I am overseer on plantation Devonshire Castle. I have been in this colony two years, and this is my first overseership. I have never been anywhere else. On Monday, the 30th September, I went to the Daniel's Town police station to give evidence in two cases. I was a witness for the manager in a case of assault, which was brought against him by Peraag. When the case was called Peraag was not there; he had come and gone away again on the opening of the court. There were over a hundred coolies there that day, and some of them had sticks. When the case was called Peraag did not answer, and the case went by default. While I was at the court a messenger came to the manager and told him that the coolies had taken possession of the estate. Another messenger came soon after and said that the coolies were waiting for him on the road to kill him. The manager went on to the estate as soon as he heard this. I was riding, and there was with us, the Magistrate, Inspector Griffin, and Mr. Blake. When I got to the estate, I found the coolies all drawn up across the road at the entrance to the estate. They were all armed with hackia sticks and were over two hundred in number. The police were drawn up in front of them, at the distance of a few yards. The Magistrate went up to the coolies and addressed them through an interpreter, telling them to disperse. They refused to disperse, and were in a very excited state, making a noise, and refusing to allow us to pass. At last the Magistrate had to read the Riot Act. About an hour had elapsed from the time we saw them and the reading of the Act, and all this time the manager and the Magistrate were standing on the road. After the Riot Act had been read, the manager repeatedly endeavoured to get them to disperse, but they would never do so. There were a good many women there also, and when the Magistrate told the men to send them home, they refused to do so. The women came forward and told us to kill them as well; they were not afraid. They afterwards retired behind the men. All this occurred for fully an hour after the Riot Act had been read, and they were then more excited. They were flourishing their sticks and making a noise. I saw the Magistrate point out three men and ordered them to be arrested, and Inspector Griffin pointed them out to his men. As the men were going up, the coolies rushed forward and commenced to beat them with their sticks. The policemen were raising their gun above their heads to keep off the blows, and I saw one of the hackia sticks strike one of the guns, and it went off. I do not know the coolie who struck the gun. The blow struck the barrel, and, sliding down, it struck the hammer and the gun went off. I saw all this myself. I did not see any man fall after the gun went off. I do not know whether the policeman's hand was struck at the same time. About two seconds after the first gun went off, I heard the reports of others. When the guns went off the coolies broke off, and came to where I and the manager were standing, and they attacked us. I had a short hackia in my hand, and I was obliged to defend myself. I did not see when the manager received a blow, for I was too busy looking after myself. I apprehended that the coolies meant mischief, and I defended myself. I heard the Magistrate call upon the black people in the name of the Queen to assist; but they ran away. There were about 30 or 40 of them present. There were there, besides myself and the manager, about eight or nine, excluding the black people, and there were about 200 coolies opposed to us. I do not know how many men were arrested at the time.

The enquiry was here, at half past five P. M., adjourned till Wednesday, at 11 o'clock.

The Coroner said that he was anxious to bring it to a close as soon as possible; but he had to hold court at Aurora to-morrow, and on the same day some of the jurors had to meet Mr. Trotter, of the Immigration Department.

Wednesday, Oct. 9, 1872.

Mr. Robert Bunbury was called and examined. He said: I live at the front of plantation Devonshire Castle. On Monday, the 30th September, as I was coming along the public road at one o'clock, I met the sick-nurse of the estate, Samuel Archer. I was driving home, and he asked me if I were going straight home. I said yes, and he said I had better not, as there was a gang of coolies on the road who had stopped him. I went on, and on my way I noticed a coolie upon every bridge. They appeared very sulky, and when I asked one or two of them what was the matter and what they were doing there they said it was no business of mine. I went on and as I got opposite Miss Featherson's house, I saw a lot of coolies assembled on the public road. They were calling out to each other, and running about the public road in every direction. They appeared to be very much excited. I do not know what they were saying, but I could see that they were mustering, and they had hackia sticks in their hands. There were about 300 of them, including women—at any rate the number exceeded 200. The women had no sticks. I did not notice any cutlasses in their hands then, but I saw two or three afterwards. I was sitting in my waggon looking at them, and as I was about leaving Mr. Featherson's house, two men from the gang ran towards me with uplifted sticks, followed by two or three others. The two men who ran at me are named Little Benny and Kawal, and they would have struck me if they had not been dragged back by the hair by two other men. Their sticks were already coming down on the top of my waggon. Kawal made a second attempt to strike me, when he was again held by the other coolies, who said—"This no manager, this Robert Bunbury." He then said "suppose you been manager, me kill you dead." I then went on to my house, and in about three quarters of an hour I saw about 20 or 24 policemen marching past. I ran out of my house to see where they were going, and I saw them draw up in front of the coolies. The coolies were drawn up across the road leading into the estate from trench to trench. One trench had water, but the other was dry or had very little in it. The coolies were all armed with hackia sticks, which were elevated, and they formed about ten deep. They were talking very loud, and appeared to be very much excited and angry. I forgot to mention that the two men who stopped me appeared to be under the influence of drink, and while I was standing at my bridge I saw them. I saw them go over to the manager's house and commence beating at the doors. I then turned and saw three waggons coming up the road, and at the sight of them the coolies became mad. When the waggons got near me, I saw that one contained Mr. Loughran, the other was Mr. Griffin's, and the last was the manager's. Mr. Blake's came some little time after. As soon as the coolies saw them they commenced to yell, and became more furious, and were immediately joined by others from the buildings. The Magistrate passed my place and got out of his waggon, and the other waggons stopped about four rods from my bridge. The Magistrate went directly up to the mob, taking his interpreter with him. I heard him saying something to them, and when I went up I found that he was reading the Riot Act and having it interpreted to the coolies. I heard him say to the interpreter, "Tell them that I will give them one hour to disperse, and if they do not at that end of that time, I will use force, and it will all be upon their own heads." The coolies laughed and jeered at him, and said in English (several of them) "You bring soldier man to fight: can't more: must fight." Two chairs were brought out from the Portuguese shop opposite, and Mr. Loughran and Mr. Griffin sat upon them till the expiration of the time. Before the hour was up, the Magistrate called upon Mr. Abel, the manager of the estate, to point out to him the ringleaders, and the moment he said so, three men came forward to the front and leaned leisurely upon their sticks. One was a tall man, another was a short man with curly hair, and the other was a shopkeeper on the estate. I have heard that they are in custody. The Magistrate spoke to the coolies several times and warned them to go away. About fifteen minutes before the hour had expired the Magistrate called upon me as a constable, as well as upon others who were standing by, to come forward and render assistance and assist in arresting the ringleaders. There were about thirty black people standing by, and the moment they were called upon, they bolted in every direction, and at such a rate that one would imagine that they were being pursued by furious dogs. They had no weapon of any sort in their hands, or anything to defend themselves with. Those few who consented to remain I took into my house and gave such sticks as I had. I gave them some greenheart rails about ¾ inch square, and others took up some courida sticks which were lying in a Portuguese yard near by. I took myself a letter-wood walking stick, and an empty revolver, which I put in my pocket. It was a small pea revolver, but I had no ammunition for it. At the end of the hour the Magistrate asked them if they would disperse, and they said they would not. He then told the interpreter to tell them to send away the women; but instead of doing so they called the women forward and put them in front, with their children. One woman was very noisy in particular, and said in English "Kill man, kill me too; you bring soldier." The women were six or seven deep. One old woman, who had been on the estate a long time, came up and said she was very sorry for what had taken place, and the Magistrate advised her to go and tell the other women to go away. She went into the crowd and disappeared, and there was no other movement among the women; but the men became more violent. The Magistrate then told them that the time he had given them had elapsed, and that if they did not disperse, they would bring down the law upon their own heads. A man then came forward and told the Magistrate in English to let the soldiers go away, and the Magistrate said, "I came here to maintain order; the time is up, and if you do not go away, you will have to take the consequences." He disappeared also. He seemed to be a quiet man, and had nothing but his cap in his hand. The Magistrate then commenced to put his men in order. He said "left remain; right fall back," and the coolies immediately approached the police with their sticks uplifted with both hands. There was an empty cart behind the armed force, and the Magistrate ordered me and the rest of the men he had called upon to assist to form a line to the left, so that the coolies might not break through. I saw the police fix their bayonets; but I was too far to hear when the order to do so was given. The Magistrate then came forward and pointed out the coolies who were to be arrested, and the order was given to "charge and arrest." I do not know whether this order was given by the Magistrate or by Mr. Griffin, but I heard it. The men then marched up at the charge, and as soon as they got to within about three feet of the coolies the latter advanced and brought down their sticks upon them, and I saw two or three of them fall. The coolies then attempted to break through the force on the side where the cart was, and I saw a stick strike the hammer of one of the police rifles, and it went off. Then I heard the reports of several other rifles in succession. I saw one man fall with his leg broken. The coolies were trying to sweep round the police and get behind them, and I saw Inspector Griffin struck with a stick, and a stick was raised over the Magistrate; but I do not know whether he received the blow or not. Inspector Griffin nearly got shot, for he was right in front, trying to make the men stop firing. I am positively certain that if those shots had not been fired, the police and everybody else would have been murdered. After they had been discharged the coolies dispersed like lightning. I received no blow myself; but I struck. I saw one of the ringleaders who had been pointed out, and I followed him and struck him with my stick. The stick broke; I struck him again, and it broke again. In my opinion the whole only lasted a minute or a minute and a half. I have never seen coolies in such a condition before: it is the first coolie riot of the kind I have ever seen, and I am positively certain that they meant mischief—in fact, they said so. I saw some of the men in the second (police) rank struck down with sticks. I saw the bayonets knocked off the guns, and after that my opinion is that the hackia sticks were going to have the advantage. I am also of opinion that the black people had a good deal to do with this riot, for I heard them advising the coolies, and one of them, a man named Will Smith, said he wished the manager was killed. An ordinary first class hackia stick was about six feet, and about four pounds in weight. There were about 250 coolies assembled, and my opinion is that if the whole of the armed force had discharged their rifles, they would not have had time to reload before they would have been surrounded and attacked by the coolies with their hackias. They would have had to use their guns as clubs in their own defence. I did not hear any order given to the men to load their rifles, but I saw them load. This was after the Riot Act had been read. In fact, I ought to say that I saw the men open the breaches of their guns, but I did not actually see them load. I heard no order given them to fire. I was standing near the Magistrate, and must have heard if such an order had been given.

The Coroner.—You say, then, Mr. Bunbury, that it was only after the first gun went off in consequence of the accidental blow, that you heard the other shots?

Witness.—Yes, Sir. I saw when the first blow fell upon the gun and strike the hammer. I do not know the policeman whose gun first went off, but I think he was a man in the second rank, and I may know him if I saw him again. [Police Constable David Tull was called into court and identified as the man]. Scarcely any time elapsed after the first shot was fired before I heard the other reports. There was such a noise going on at the time that I did not hear Inspector Griffin's orders, but I saw him amongst the men, trying to stop the firing. There was so much noise and confusion that no order could be heard, and there was no wonder that the police, after the first report, thought that an order was given to fire. I was not afraid myself, but I thought it was rather a serious affair.

George Mearns was the next witness examined. He said: I am an overseer on plantation Devonshire Castle. I remember on the 1st October having been called to look at the bodies of five coolies who were lying dead in the dead-house of the hospital. I recognised them to be the bodies of Maxidally, Beccaroo, Kaulica, Baldeo, and Auckloo. I knew them alive. During the fight I was in the buildings, and do not know what took place: I was too far away.

David Tull (Police Constable 581) said: I am stationed at Suddie. I was one of the men ordered down to Devonshire Castle. I was marched from Daniel's Town station. When we got to Devonshire Castle I found a large number of coolies across the road leading into the estate, armed with hackia sticks. There were about four or five hundred of them. After about an hour and a half we were ordered to charge and make some prisoners. We had our bayonets fixed, but I had no time to charge, because, although I was in the rear rank, I was struck down with a stick over the head of the front rank. We were two deep. I was struck on the right shoulder several times, and on other parts, but although I was on the ground I kept hold of a prisoner. I am still in hospital.

Joseph Smart (Police Constable 62) said: I am stationed at Suddie, and was one of the party that was marched down to Devonshire Castle on the 30th September. When we got there we found a great number of coolies drawn up across the road, all the men, as far as I could observe, being armed with hackia sticks. About an hour and a half after we had been there we were ordered to advance and charge by Inspector Griffin, and take some men who had been pointed out as the ringleaders—three in number. I was a rear rank man, and we had stepped about two paces forward with our rifles at the slope, with bayonets fixed, when the whole rank was attacked by the coolies with hackia sticks. One of the sticks came down upon my rifle twice and knocked my bayonet off, breaking the solid iron piece by which it was held on to the rifle, and bending it. Another blow struck the trigger guard and destroyed it, and I received a blow on the back. I arrested the man who was pointed out to me. His name is Gopaul, and he is now in custody. [The rifle exhibited.] After the bayonet had been knocked off my rifle one of the men tried to take it away from me by grasping the barrel. I tripped him, and then fell upon him; but while I was upon the ground I had to keep my rifle up to ward off the blows which the coolies were showering at me. I remained in that position until the Magistrate came to my assistance.

The enquiry was here adjourned for ten minutes.

On its resumption, Mr. John Henry Blake was sworn and examined. He said: I am clerk to the Stipendiary Magistrate of the North Coast Judicial District. I reside at Henrietta. On Friday, the 27th of last month, the Bush Lot Court was over at a very early hour. I was proceeding home, and the Magistrate was going to Henrietta store to make purchases. While we were in the store, Mr. Abel, the manager of Devonshire Castle, was passing by. The Magistrate, who had then completed his purchases, was returning home, when he was met by Mr. Abel on the road. They had a conversation, and then the Magistrate returned to the store and requested me to come on to the Bush Lot police station. He said that Mr. Abel had made a statement to him about his coolies, and that he wanted it taken on oath. I came on, the Magistrate and Mr. Abel turning into Anna Regina. During my stay at the station a gang, consisting of about 250 or 300 coolies, passed, the greater part of them being armed with hackia sticks. Sergeant Evelin, who was in charge of the station, went out and stopped them on the bridge. He asked them where they were going to, and what was the matter. They would not answer. I told the sergeant to tell them that the Magistrate would soon be back, and that they must come in and sit down. They would not do so, and I observed one or two of the gang pushing and hurrying the others to go on. I told the sergeant to bring one or two of them in and ask them to sit down until the Magistrate came in. He went out and brought in one or two who appeared to be the headmen. First of all they wanted to beat the sergeant; but I jumped between them and said I would give in charge any man who struck him. They quieted down, and agreed to come into the court-yard and wait for the Magistrate; but after remaining a short time, they all got up, and, with a yell, ran away. When they came into the yard I asked them where they had come from, and they said they belonged to Devonshire Castle. I had detained one man, who appeared to be the ringleader, in the hope that by so doing the others would wait; but they said if I did not let him go they would smash everything about the place, and considering discretion the better part of valour, I told the sergeant to let them go, and they went. I immediately went off to tell the Magistrate that the Devonshire Castle coolies had gone in a body up the coast. I met him and the manager of Devonshire Castle on the road, and we all came back to the station. The manager then in the court-room here told the story about Peraag, and said he wanted a warrant to arrest him. He said that Peraag was being sent to the station for misconduct in the buildings, and was rescued by some other men. The Magistrate told him that the better plan would be to summon him, and he would not grant a warrant.

The Coroner.—Did the Magistrate state any reason why he would not give the warrant?

Witness.—I apprehend it was because he had not heard both sides of the story. Well, we went to our homes, and next morning (Saturday) I received instructions to go down to Devonshire Castle. I went with him in his own waggon, and when we arrived on the estate he called Peraag, and asked him what was his grievance. He and another man named Pertaub then came up into the gallery, while a large number of coolies remained downstairs. The Magistrate put them upon oath, and heard their statements. Peraag said he was a boilerman, and the building overseer had beaten him; that Mr. Abel had pulled him off the copper-wall, and a coolie named Sundersingh had struck him. Pertaub said that Sundersingh, who was the head boilerman, had struck him. The Magistrate said he would give them free summonses, and desired me to take them aside with an interpreter and reduce what they said to writing. They each made complaints, and I summoned nine witnesses on their behalf. The Magistrate then called the manager, the overseer, and Sundersingh together, bound them over to appear at Daniel's Town, and said he would hold a special court to try the cases of Devonshire Castle on Monday, the 30th September. He made the Magistrate tell Mr. Abel and the overseer, who well understood Hindustani, and Sundersingh, in presence of Peraag and Pertaub, that they were bound over to appear at court on Monday, in order that they (Peraag and Pertaub) might understand how the matter stood. They at first said they would not attend the court, but after great persuasion by the Magistrate, they consented to attend. They appeared to be intoxicated, and were very much excited, making frantic gestures at the manager, who was in the gallery. They at length left, and soon after we left also, they agreeing to attend the Court at Daniel's Town on Monday to hear their complaints against the manager and overseer and the head boilerman Sundersingh. On Monday, the Magistrate and myself appeared at the Daniel's Town court-room. A large number of the Devonshire Castle coolies—over 200—came there armed with sticks. The Magistrate took his seat and declared the court open. The coolies then all got up, and with a yell ran out of the court-yard, saying that the Magistrate was not going to give them justice, and soldier-men (meaning the policemen) had been placed there. The Magistrate despatched his interpreter after Peraag and Pertaub, and told him to tell them to come back, as he wanted to hear their complaints upon oath. They said the soldiers were there, and they would not come back; but they knew what they were going to do. And then they went away in a body. The cases were then called, and the evidence for the defence heard upon oath. During the investigation a man came up and said that the Devonshire Castle coolies had gone back, driven the buildings people out of the buildings, gone to the overseers' quarters, and broken their doors in search of the overseers. Another messenger immediately after arrived and said that the coolies had taken charge of the estate, and had determined to kill the manager and overseer on their return home, and that they were going to take charge of the manager's house. Mr. Abel said the only thing he was afraid of was, that there were some sepoys among the coolies, and they might be very mischievous if they went into his house and took possession of his guns. Inspector Griffin, who was present and heard all that was said, went up to the bench and intimated it to the Magistrate, and the court was closed. The Magistrate then gave instructions to those who were then present to repair to the spot. The armed force, consisting of about twenty men and three policemen with hand-cuffs, marched down under Inspector Griffin. The overseers rode on their mules, and the manager, myself and others went in waggons. I was the last to arrive on the spot. When I got there I found the Magistrate speaking to the men through the medium of his own interpreter. The coolies were drawn up with hackia sticks in a line from the Devonshire Castle avenue, in such a position as to prevent entrance into the estate. On the public road itself they were about four or five deep, and on the other side they were about three deep. The manager had finished reading the Riot Act when I went up, but he was explaining it to the people through his interpreter then. An hour and some minutes elapsed, during which time he went up to them several times and asked them to disperse. They were very much excited, and one of the men came out with a stick apparently with the intention to knock him down, when he was pulled back by another coolie. Then a woman came across and said something about the time for working in the buildings. The Magistrate told her that they would speak about that afterwards; but that in the meantime they must disperse. They would not leave the road, but said they would rather die first, and that they were not going to allow anybody to go into Devonshire Castle. The Magistrate then told them that a half hour had elapsed and that they had better go away, or they would be arrested. They became more frantic, and refused to leave. After an hour had elapsed the Magistrate went back to them and again requested them to leave the road; but they still refused to do so. There were a great many women on the ground, and he sent to tell them to leave, as he would have to disperse the mob. He then turned round to a lot of black people who were standing on the road near us, and asked them to assist in arresting the ringleaders; but they immediately flew away in all directions. None of them had any cutlasses or hoes in their hands. I only saw two buildings men with cooper's axes in their hands. The Magistrate then pointed out the ringleaders to Mr. Griffin, who pointed them out to his men, and told them to arrest them. The inspector gave notice to fix bayonets. Before fixing bayonets, the men loaded their pieces. The Magistrate went round the men and told them to charge low, and not to attempt to fire unless he told them to do so. Inspector Griffin gave order to charge and arrest the ringleaders. As soon as the men advanced to the charge, the coolies met them and commenced to beat them with their hackia sticks. The bayonets were pointed low, just above the shins. The coolies knocked two of the men down and broke the front rank, still pushing forward. They were sweeping round the public roadway and pressing through the ranks they had broken. At this time I found myself surrounded, and having a stick in my hand, I licked my way up to the front where Mr. Loughran and Mr. Griffin were standing. I saw the Magistrate and other gentlemen trying to arrest the prisoners. Before I had got up to where the Magistrate was, I heard a single gun discharged, and a few seconds about half a dozen more were discharged in succession. The coolies then began to run away in all directions, leaving the ground clear. I saw one dead and two wounded men lying upon the road, and they were taken to the hospital. One was quite dead, another had his leg broken, and the third was breathing hard. I have lived thirteen years on this coast, and I have never witnessed anything of this sort before, or anything approaching to it. The coolies were very much excited, and appeared to be bent on mischief. They left the court-room yelling and threatening.

The Coroner.—Suppose those rifles had not gone off, do you not think that something serious would have occurred?

Witness.—I think that the explosion of that first rifle saved our lives. I did not expect to see another moment.

The enquiry was here, at 5-50, adjourned till 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Thursday, Oct. 10.

The inquest touching the death of the five coolies who were shot during the disturbance on plantation Devonshire Castle on the 30th ultimo was resumed to-day, pursuant to adjournment, at the Bush Lot court-room, before Mr. Sheriff Humphreys. Mr. Stipendiary Justice Loughran, Acting Inspector-General Hill, and Mr. Inspector Griffin were again in attendance.

The first witness examined to-day was Keffatolah (Police Constable 109) who said: I am stationed at Suddie. I am a Calcutta coolie, and understand the language. I was one of the force that was marched down from Daniel's Town to Devonshire Castle on Monday, the 30th September. When I got there I saw about a hundred coolies standing across the road that leads into the estate, so that nobody could pass. They all had hackia, and some had shovels besides. I did not notice any cutlasses. We stood up before them, and I heard them making a great noise, and saying that they were going to make a great war; that they were going to kill some; but that some of them were going to die too. We waited there until the inspector came up. He soon came and then the Magistrate, who had come also, told them through the interpreter that he would give them one hour to go away. Mr. Muir, Mr. Abel, and one or two other gentlemen came with the Magistrate. The interpreter told the coolies what the Magistrate had said, and they said they would not move: the Magistrate must hold court there. The Magistrate told them to leave the road and go on the estate, and he would go there and keep court. They said they would not move. Then the Magistrate said he would give them half an hour more to clear off the road, and if they did not move they would get punished. After that Mr. Griffin gave the order to load, and we loaded. He then gave the order to fix swords and half-cock our rifles. During all this time the Magistrate was telling the coolies to leave the road or they would be punished, and they said they would not move; they did not care a d——n. The inspector pointed out two men named Peraag and Pertaub, and told us to charge and arrest them, but he said we were to point at the legs and not the body of the coolies. We advanced about six paces, at a walk, with our guns sloped, and went up to the coolies. They did not advance towards us, but raised their sticks and knocked down police constable Tull, who was in the front rank I think. We raised our guns to keep off their sticks, and some of them went off. On turning round I saw a man in the act of giving me a blow on the head with a stick, and I caught hold of him. Police constable Smart then knocked him down and arrested him. I heard the Magistrate at first tell the men to send away the women and children, but they would not go. The women said they would not go until the matter was settled. I saw one old woman come out and speak to the Magistrate and then go back, and tell the others to go into the estate and the Magistrate would settle the matter. They said they were not going into the estate; the Magistrate must settle the matter there.

By Inspector Griffin.—When the Magistrate came, he read to the coolies from a piece of paper. Before he took the paper out of his pocket, he asked them through the interpreter to go away. The interpreter told them to go away several times. They said that they were not going; they were going to make a great war. When the Magistrate had read the paper, the interpreter said to them: "This is a public road, and you are all to keep clear; if you don't move, the Magistrate will punish you." They said "what can Magistrate do." I heard the interpreter say something about the Queen and the Queen's road. When we had loaded our rifles, you went round to all the men to see if they were half-cocked. I saw you take some of the rifles in your own hands and put them upon half-cock. My own rifle was full-cocked, and you put it right. You expressly gave an order, more than once, that no man was to fire unless you gave the order to do so.

Lutchman (Police Constable 340) said: I am stationed at Daniel's Town. I am one of the men who were marched down to Devonshire Castle on Monday, the 30th September, and had no rifle. I had only my baton and pair of handcuffs. When we got to Devonshire Castle I saw a great many coolies shouting across the road with big hackia sticks in their hands. They were all Calcutta fighting men, and some were sepoys, or other people. There were some six or seven sepoys among them, and the whole numbered about two hundred. Only one man had a cutlass, and he was in the front rank of the coolies. His name is Ramful. They were making a great noise, and striking their sticks together as they do in taja time. Peraag, when leaving the Magistrate's court that day, said to the Magistrate, "come to Devonshire Castle, and we will show you something." At Devonshire Castle they said they wanted to fight. When the Magistrate and the interpreter came, the Magistrate and his interpreter went unto them, and told them to leave the road and go into the estate, and allow people to pass. I heard the interpreter tell them over and over that the Magistrate said they must go away quietly, and they said each time that they would not go. I heard the Magistrate read a notice from a paper, saying it was the Queen's order not to stop up the road, and they must clear off. They said "Queen no here; Queen in England." The Magistrate then told them that he would give them one hour to go away. They said the Magistrate must remove the policemen and keep court on the road. An hour and a half passed, and the Magistrate told them to remove the women, whereupon the women came to the front, and one of them, who was very violent, commenced to abuse in the coolie language. The Magistrate pointed out to Mr. Griffin, Peraag, Pertaub, and Ooderman, Gopaul, and Conhuysingh, and told him to tell his men to arrest them. The Inspector told us to fix bayonets and advance, but not to hurt the people. As soon as we advanced the coolies began to beat us with their sticks. I saw police constable Tull fall from a blow he received. I was taking prisoners in the rear when I received a blow from Conhuysingh, which bent the handcuffs which I had in my hands. I then heard some guns go off; but I don't know how they went off. I do not know in what rank Tull was. There were several men in the rear rank struck; but I only saw Tull fall. When the Magistrate asked the black people to assist in removing the wounded people to the hospital, they refused. The Magistrate then got vexed, and some of them came and assisted. I heard the Magistrate and Inspector Griffin tell the men not to fire, but to keep their guns low down.

The enquiry was here adjourned for ten minutes.

Madaree, the interpreter who accompanied Mr. Stipendiary Justice Loughran on the occasion, was called. He is not the official interpreter of the court, but his services were made available by Mr. Loughran in the absence of the official interpreter. He said: I am an indentured coolie to plantation Land of Plenty, and I was sent by the manager to the Magistrate on Monday, the 30th of last month, when the cases of Peraag and Pertaub were called. The cases were called three times, and they did not answer. A great many coolies came to the court that morning, but they all went away before the case was called. The Magistrate waited some time, and then sent me to call back Peraag and Pertaub. I went and told them that the Magistrate was waiting for them, and they said that they did not want to have the cases tried, because the Magistrate was not going to give them their rights, but would give the manager and overseer theirs. They then went away, saying that they were to wait on the road for the manager, the overseer and the Magistrate, and that they would not allow them to go into the estate. They also added that if they got their rights they would allow them to go into the estate; but if they did not, they would not allow them. I went back and told the Magistrate all this, and the Magistrate swore me and put my statement into writing. He then took down the evidence of Mr. Abel, the overseer, and the constable, and after that the inspector sent the policemen down to Devonshire Castle, and afterwards followed in a waggon with the Magistrate. Mr. Abel, the manager, the Magistrate's clerk, and the overseer also went down. When we got to Devonshire Castle, the Magistrate told me to tell them to go home, and I did so. They said they were not going home; that soldiers had been brought there to fight them. I told the Magistrate this, and he told me to tell them that no one had come to fight them, but they must clear the road and go home. They again said that they were not going anywhere; that the court must be kept there, that they might get their rights. Some time after this the Magistrate took a paper out of his pocket and read to me, and I interpreted it to them. At the end of it the Magistrate said "God save the Queen," and I repeated the words to them, three times. They understood all I told them; but still they said they were not going home. At this time a woman came out from among the men and commenced to beat her breast and curse the Magistrate, telling him that he brought people there to make a row and a fight. The Magistrate told me to tell the women to go home to their houses, and I did so; but they said they were not going home; they must all be killed. An old man brought out a child in his arms, and said that he was not going home. The Magistrate told him to take the child home; but he would not. I told them several times by the Magistrate's order to go home, and they would not. Sometimes I went to them myself and sometimes with the Magistrate. The people were very noisy, and said that as they had come to fight, they would fight. They were violent, making a noise and abusing. The Magistrate pointed out Pertaub, Peraag, Conhuy, Ooderman, Gopaul, and the inspector ordered men to arrest them. I heard the inspector give an order to fix bayonets; but I did not hear him give any order to load. I heard the Magistrate and the inspector tell the men to keep their guns low down, and not to fire until they received orders to do so. When the policemen advanced to arrest the prisoners, the coolies advanced too, and commenced to use their sticks. The policemen kept off blows with their guns; and one of them went off in consequence of being struck by a stick on the nipple. I saw this myself. Other guns went off immediately, but I don't know the man who gave the blow, but I believe he is in custody. He was taken into custody by Lutchman. After this they all ran away. The man who had the child was then coming back again, when he was arrested and given over by the Magistrate to Lutchman. The dead and wounded people were all taken up afterwards by order of the Magistrate, and the doctor was sent for.

Inspector Griffin was then examined. He said: I am an inspector of police, stationed at Suddie, and I have under my charge a body of men who are trained to the use of arms. There is no such thing as an armed force. On Friday, the 27th of September, at about 9 o'clock in the evening, I received a communication from the Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, through Mr. Straker, requesting me to bring down a body of armed men to Queenstown, as he was going down to Devonshire Castle to investigate some complaints the next day. At about half-past 10, I despatched a corporal and eighteen men to Daniel's Town, with orders to march all night. I followed myself before day-light the next (Saturday) morning, and on arriving at Daniel's Town I found my men there. As I was passing the manager's house at Three Friends, I called in to see him, and he told me he thought it would be better if I remained with my men at the Daniel's Town station, and that should he require me on the estate, he would send for me. I remained at the station until the Magistrate returned from the estate, which was between two and three o'clock in the afternoon. He told me that the people on the estate were noisy, that he had granted some of them free summonses, and that he was going to investigate their complaints on Monday at the Daniel's Town court-room. On Monday, the 30th, I attended at the Daniel's Town court-room, and saw upwards of three hundred immigrants sitting about the road and court-yard, and I was informed that they belonged to plantation Devonshire Castle. They had all hackia sticks with them, but they seemed pretty quiet at that time. Shortly after I arrived, the Magistrate drove up, accompained by his interpreter and Mr. Blake, his clerk. There were present in the court-room Mr. Abel, the manager of Devonshire Castle, a Mr. Robertson, an overseer, I believe, who resides at Wakenham. Before the court was opened, I placed a sentry on each of the entrances into the station-yard, in order to keep people out of the yard. The Magistrate called his interpreter, and desired him to throw the doors open, and declare the court open, which he did three times at least, at the top of his voice, in the Hindustani language. Instantly on hearing this the coolies, who had been before walking in knots of two and three on the road, all headed by three or four men, started off in the direction of plantation Devonshire Castle. They made a great noise, talking and yelling and waving their sticks in the air, and crying out "No court; no court." Headed by three or four, and urged and pushed on by those who were behind, they went on their way. Previously to their going away, the Magistrate desired the interpreter to call out a man named Peraag, who had a complaint against the manager, which he did three times; also one named Pertaub. They paid no attention to this, and the Magistrate told the interpreter to go and try and turn them back; but they took no notice of that either; they only continued to yell and wave their sticks. The Magistrate then took the evidence on oath of the defendant, Mr. Abel, the overseer, Mr. Robertson, and also of a rural constable, whose name I think is Pompey Reid, with reference to Peraag having been rescued from Reid's custody on the Friday previous. He then examined the interpreter to prove that he had called the men and that they did not appear, and he dismissed the cases. About this time a messenger to Mr. Abel arrived, stating that the coolies had returned to the estate; had driven black people out of the buildings, and had in fact taken possession of the estate. Several messages came one after the other to the same effect. Hearing all this I went up to the Magistrate who was sitting on the bench, and I informed him of it. He told me to send the men on to the estate in advance, and we would catch them before they got there. I did so, and when we got there we found the men drawn up in front of the coolies, who were drawn up in a body to the number of over two hundred right across the entrance to the estate, with a number of them on the public road. They were all armed with hackia sticks. I noticed one man in particular. On arriving at the spot the Magistrate got out of his waggon and went up to the coolies and told them it was wrong to make this noise, and to disperse and go home quietly to their houses. This he repeated several times, begging them to go away, but the only answer he got that I could understand was shouting, and yelling, and derisive laughter. I heard the interpreter tell the Magistrate that they had said they would not go away, but that they must fight. After talking to them for some time to no effect, the Magistrate said, "there is nothing else for it," and he took a piece of paper out of his pocket and went up close to them with his interpreter, and read it. It was the Riot Proclamation, and he told the interpreter to be very careful how he interpreted it, in order that the people might understand what it was. After reading it he told them that he would give them one hour to disperse, and if at the expiration of the time, they still continued there, any accident that might happen would be upon their own heads. He told them he was the Magistrate sent there to administer the law, and he must do his duty. They did not seem to pay any attention to this, but danced and yelled and waved their sticks in a most violent manner. About a quarter of an hour after the Riot Act had been read, a number of women, about 50 or 60, some with babies in their arms, formed themselves up at the right of the men, opposite our left, and commenced to gesticulate in a most violent manner. Seeing the women, the Magistrate sent the interpreter to tell them to go to their homes, as he did not wish them to get hurt. On hearing this instead of retiring they got more violent than ever, some of them screaming and waving their arms in the air. One woman in particular came forward, striking her breast with her hands, and going towards the Magistrate, screamed at him and became quite furious. All this time the men were stamping, and yelling, and making the greatest noise possible. Time was rapidly passing on, and every now and then the Magistrate would go to them with his interpreter and advise them to go home; but they would not. I heard several of them say in broken English "No; you bring soldierman; must fight." The hour was nearly up when the Magistrate ordered me to make the men load their rifles, at the same time telling me to warn the men not on any account to fire unless ordered to do so. I ordered the men to load their arms, and I went round to every man myself and examined his rifle to see that his rifle was at half-cock, in order that no accident might occur. I found several at full cock, and I took them into my own hands and put them at half-cock, and then returned them to the men. At the time there were a number of black people near us on our left. The Magistrate spoke to them and asked them what they were doing there, and requested them to assist the police in keeping order. Immediately on hearing this they took to their heels and bolted in all directions. The Magistrate then called upon Mr. Muir, Mr. Bunbury, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Abel, and one or two others who were there, to assist, as far as they were able, in the arrest of the ringleaders. By this time it was considerably past the hour, and the Magistrate ordered me to give the order to fix swords, which I did. He then went himself in front of the police, and warned them on no account to fire unless they got positive orders from me to do so. He at the same time pointed out the ringleaders whom he wished to have arrested, telling them to use their bayonets as little as possible, and if they did, to use them about the legs. He pointed out the men and told them that he wished them arrested. He told me the same thing. I had then under my command a lance corporal and twenty-four men, besides three men with handcuffs and only their batons, who belong to Daniel's Town Station. Seeing that the coolies were edging round the Portuguese shop on the right where my men were drawn up, I caused the right half of the small body of men (6 files) to fall back, forming nearly a semi-circle, resting my left on a mule cart on the road, so as to prevent being taken in flank. The coolies who had gone to the left on seeing this at once closed up together in a body. During all this time the coolies in front of me were laughing, and yelling, and ridiculing us, and making such a noise that I could not hear myself. The Magistrate then called upon me and said, "Mr. Inspector time is up. Advance your men at the charge, and arrest those ringleaders; but mind, warn the men that they must not fire," which I did. I then brought the men to the charge, the rear rank sloping arms, and the front rank coming to the charge. I gave the men the order, and they had scarcely advanced more than from two to three paces, before the coolies came on with a rush, rattling their sticks together in the air. The sticks came right down on the men's heads, striking some in the rear rank. The front rank men brought their rifles to the head parry to defend their hands, although they were at the charge. At the first onslaught I saw a stick fall on P. C. Tull, and he dropped at once; he was struck on the right shoulder, and when he received the blow he had his rifle on the slope. As he fell, fearing that they might break through us, I jumped over him and rushed into the middle of them myself. As I was rushing through the ranks I heard a shot; but there was such a noise made by the rifles and sticks that I could not tell where it came from. Almost immediately afterwards I heard several other shots.

It being now 5-15, the enquiry was adjourned till 12 o'clock to-morrow (11th October), when Mr. Griffin's examination will be resumed.

Friday, 11th October.—The inquest touching the death of the coolies who were shot during the disturbance on Devonshire Castle on the 30th ultimo was resumed at Bush Lot court-room to-day. Mr. Inspector Griffin resumed his evidence, and said: Shortly after the first report I heard several others—about seven or eight—but not in a volley; they followed each. I turned with my sword in my hand and said to the men, "what do you mean by firing"? I held my sword up in the air, and with my left hand before me, I rushed among them, and asked them what they meant by firing. I seized one of the men's rifle by the muzzle near the bayonet and uplifted it in the air, and as I did so it went off, the bullet passing close to my head. It went clear up into the air, and could not have hurt any person. After my calling out to the men, there were no more shots fired. I turned round and saw three or four coolies lying down upon the ground apparently injured. On turning round after hearing the first shot, I saw the coolies still fighting, but they almost instantly disappeared on hearing the other shot. I saw some of them running in the direction of the hospital, several of whom picked up large pieces of burnt brick which had recently been laid down, and threw them at the police. One piece nearly came down upon my own head. I saw several of the men engaged—especially P. C. Lutchman (340) and P. C. Smart (62) in arresting prisoners. Smart had arrested one of the ringleaders named Gopaul, whom I had especially pointed out to him. I then heard a cry that the coolies had gone for their shovels, and that we were to look out. Seeing that my men were scattered, I ordered the bugler to sound the "retire," which he did, and the men at once formed up. I then asked who it was that fired the first shot, and P. C. 303 Archer, who was the right hand man of the rear rank, at once said: "Me sir; a cooly struck me on my right hand and almost broke it, and my gun went off. How it went off I don't know." I then went to see how many men were injured, and I heard the Magistrate, Mr. Loughran, call upon some black people to come and assist in removing the wounded; but they walked away without attempting to assist. I heard him say something about "a lot of great big men not coming to assist," and one or two came back and assisted in taking the men to the hospital. I then in company examined the rifles of all the men, and the manager took down the numbers of those whose rifles had exploded. We found that ten of the rifles had exploded.

The Coroner—Have you got the names and number of the men?

Witness—Yes Sir. They are 303, Archer; 487, John Nichols; 180, R. Williams; 518, Gibbs; 176, Pitinary; 576, Henry; 507, Tom Nimble; 481, Roberts; 588, Sargeant; and 231, Wood. Seeing that all was now quiet, and the wounded people were all taken to the hospital, I left lance corporal Plummer and ten men on the road, whilst I took the Magistrate, Mr. Abel, Mr. Muir, Mr. Bunbury, Mr. Blake, Mr. Robertson, one of the overseers, and one or two others up to the manager's house. As everything still seemed quiet, I called up the ten on the road to the house also, posting one on sentry downstairs. I remained there until nine o'clock at night, when Mr. Hill, the Acting Inspector General of Police, and Mr. Trotter of the Immigration Department arrived and I reported the circumstances to Mr. Hill. That night I was taken ill with fever, and I went home to Suddie the next morning. The Magistrate remained on the estate for some time, and when he left, he left me in charge. During the attack of the coolies upon the police, their aim seemed to be to take off the bayonets and wrest the rifles from the police. I saw several of them deliberately grasp the bayonets and try to take them off. From the determined manner in which they attacked the police, I feel certain that had the first gun not gone off, and the rest of them followed, which made them imagine that the order had been given to fire, they not only would have broken through us and surrounded us, but they would not have left one of us alive. I have seen coolies at taja times excited and making a noise, but I have never seen them so wildly excited as they were on this occasion: they seemed to be perfectly mad.

Mr. Stipendiary Justice Loughran was next examined. He said: I am the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace for the North Coast Judicial District, in the county of Essequebo. On Friday afternoon, the 27th September, I met Mr. Abel, the manager of plantation Devonshire Castle, near Henrietta village. He stopped my waggon and applied to me for some warrants against some coolies who had refused to work, and had threatened him with violence. I informed him that I was very chary about issuing warrants against immigrants, and advised to summon the men to Daniel's Town the next court day. He agreed to do so. I went into plantation Anna Regina to see the Sub-Immigration Agent, when, on passing Bush Lot station, I met Mr. Blake, the Magistrate's clerk, who informed me that some two or three hundred of the Devonshire Castle coolies had passed Bush Lot station going towards Airy Hall, marching in a compact body. That he and Sergeant Eveleyn had endeavoured to stop them, but were unable to do so, as they threatened to break up the station house. I drove him to procure an interpreter, and after having obtained one, I followed them. Shortly after I saw Mr. Inspector Griffin at Three Friends, and I told him about the large body of coolies who were marching down the coast. He replied that he would drive on to Suddie and stop them there. I determined to endeavour to stop them before they got there. I overtook them near Queen's Town. I drove into the midst of them and called for the chief man. The coolies gathered round my waggon, and two of them, whose names I have since learnt, Peraag and Ooderman, were spokesmen. I asked them what this marching up the coast meant, and told them that it could not be permitted. I asked them what they wanted, and where they were going to. They said that they wanted to see the Governor, and were going to Georgetown: that the manager and overseers had assaulted them, and that their wages were not sufficient. I told them that those matters could be settled here without troubling His Excellency; that they must summon the manager and overseer before me, and they would get justice done to them; that I was a servant of the Queen, and not of the planters; that if I was unable to do them justice, I would go with two or three of them to the Governor myself, rather than any wrong should be done to them; but that I could not permit them to walk in large bodies along the public roads, and that they must at once return to their estate. And to show that I was most anxious to do them justice, I told them I would attend the next morning at plantation Devonshire Castle to hold an enquiry on the spot. Some of them appeared willing to obey me, but the majority did not. After much loud and angry talk among themselves, they agreed to return to the estate, to meet me the next morning. I drove to Queenstown, and they went in the opposite direction. Seeing so much disaffection and disturbance among the immigrants, and having learned only a short time previously that the whole coast from Suddie to where the plantations end was entirely protected by the staff of policemen only (not even the Capoey Jail having any means of defence), I requested Mr. Inspector Straker to send a special messenger to Suddie for as many of the armed police as could be spared, with instructions that they should be taken to Daniel's Town during the night if possible, in order that no public display of force should be made. This order was carried out with admirable promptness by Mr. Inspector Griffin. The police passed my house at Three Friends at about one o'clock on Saturday morning, and arrived in Daniel's Town before daybreak. I myself arrived at home at seven o'clock that evening, when the propriety of sending for the armed force was made manifest, as the road leading into my house was completely blocked up by coolies belonging to Anna Regina. My horse could not pass through them, and I had to come out of my waggon and go amongst them. They were extremely excited and turbulent. They demanded vengeance on the manager, Mr. Shaw, who, they stated, had threatened to shoot some of their body a few hours previously. I had great difficulty in appeasing them. I told them that Mr. Shaw had no right to do anything of the kind, and that if he did, he would be dealt with according to law. I offered to give them free summonses against him. I brought three of the ringleaders into my house and gave them an order to the Magistrate's clerk to grant them free summonses against Mr. Shaw without delay. Being extremely surprised at the allegation made by the coolies against Mr. Shaw, I visited him the next morning, to see whether there was any truth in it. I found that he had been very severely beaten on the previous evening by a number of coolies quite near to the estate's hospital. He had two severe bruises on the back of his head, and was beaten severely about the body. He informed me that he had preserved his life by pulling a revolver out of his pocket and pushing the coolies away with it, until some persons arrived and rescued him. I asked him what he intended to do, and he said he only wished to prosecute the ringleader of those coolies who had assaulted him, as he was a bad man, just returned from Massaruni. I am diverging a little, and stating those circumstances in order to show the state of the coast at the time. Mr. Shaw said that as the other men appeared to be intoxicated he would forgive them; but he made application for a warrant against an immigrant named Tacoorah. I granted the warrant and asked Mr. Shaw what was the best time to have it executed. He recommended next day (Sunday) about 11 o'clock. The warrant was handed to Sergeant Evelyn at Bush Lot, to proceed with it next morning and arrest the man. I was informed by the Sergeant himself that the man had been arrested and rescued, and I went the next morning to have him re-arrested. As the law was still being set at defiance, I requested Inspector Griffin to remove the armed force from Daniel's Town to Anna Regina. About two o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, Mr. Inspector Griffin, I, and about fourteen or fifteen of the armed police went to Tacoorah's house to re-arrest him. His house was searched, but he could not be found. It was raining very heavily at the time, and the coolies jeered at me and the police. They laughed at our failure and the plight we were in from the rain, and I felt my dignity very much lowered, to say the least of it. We retired in good order, having got nothing by the interprise but a wet coat. We went towards the manager's house, where there were a number of coolies armed with hackia sticks. One drunken coolie came forward and said he was Tacoorah, and that we must arrest him. Sergeant Evelyn said he would not.

The man was very boisteruos and troublesome, and in my opinion wished to be arrested for the purpose of bringing about a riot. If we had arrested this man I am perfectly certain that the coolies would have rushed out and murdered every man of us. I shortly afterwards left the estate. Next morning (Monday), about eight o'clock, when writing an official letter to the Government Secretary, some three hundred of the Anna Regina coolies surrounded my house, again crying for vengeance on Mr. Shaw. I told them that their case must he tried first, and that that would be on Tuesday. I further said that Mr. Shaw had a complaint against one of their number, and that he must also appear on that day; that they had defied the law and rescued a prisoner. I asked where Tacoorah was and to produce him. I told Tacoorah he had better deliver himself up to me as a prisoner, and I would drive him to the Bush Lot station and let him remain there until the next day, when his case would be heard. They appeared to think this a joke on my part, and laughed and shouted, and took Tacoorah away with them. On Saturday morning, the 28th ultimo, I held an enquiry at Devonshire Castle at half past seven o'clock. When I arrived there, I requested the manager to summon the immigrants on the estate and inform them that I was there. In a few moments the grass plot in front of the manager's house was covered. I told the interpreter to call out in a loud voice that the Magistrate was there, and ready to hear any complaints they had to make. Several coolies came up the stairs and several under the gallery where I was. There was a good deal of loud talk; and addressing the men, I told them that if any of them had any complaints against the manager or overseers to come forward and make them. Two immigrants called Peraag and Pertaub came to the table at which I was sitting. I thought it best to take preliminary depositions, to see exactly how matters stood. Paraag was sworn, and he stated that Mr. Abel, the manager, had struck him on Friday, the 27th ultimo, and that upon his being given in charge, the coolies interfered, and would not allow him to go to the lock-up when the manager charged him with disorderly conduct in the buildings. Pertaub was next sworn, and he stated that he was assaulted likewise by the head-boilerman called Sundersingh, a coolie. Afterwards a coolie named Ooderman made a general complaint about the insufficiency of wages for shovel work on behalf of the shovel gang. I was about to inspect the work, when Mr. King, the Sub-Immigration Agent, advised me not to do so, and I confined myself to the other part of the business. I may state that Paraag stated to me on oath that he was getting two shillings a day in the buildings.

The Coroner.—He stated as a grievance that he got two shillings a day?

Witness.—Yes; but he said that he had to work from three o'clock in the morning till 11 at night. He further stated that he used to receive two shillings a day without any night work. I told them that they should have summonses without charge for alleged assaults committed upon them by Mr. Abel, an overseer named Fraser, and a coolie head-boilerman named Sundersingh. I called Mr. Abel, Mr. Fraser, and Sundersingh to the front of the gallery and made them promise before the assembled coolies to attend Daniel's Town on Monday at 11 o'clock to answer charges brought against them. They promised to do so. Everything was fully interpreted to the coolies by an indentured immigrant named Madaree. I left the estate at about four o'clock, the coolies appearing to be quite satisfied. On Monday, the 30th ultimo, I attended at Daniel's Town. When I arrived at the court-room the road was filled, as far as I could see, with coolies with hackia sticks. The court was duly opened, both in English and Hindustani. The case of Paraag v. Able, Fraser, and Sundersingh was called three times in English and Hindustani. The three defendants were in attendance, but the complainant did not appear. The case of Pertaub v. Sundersingh was then called three times, and the complainant did not appear. For fear of any misconception arising in the minds of any of the coolies, I told my interpreter to go out among the crowd and inform Pertaub and Peraag that I was waiting upon them to proceed with their cases. Instead of returning they went off in a body in the direction of Devonshire Castle. They made loud shouts, beat their sticks together, and yelled as they left the court-room. I then proceeded to take upon oath the statements of Mr. Abel and his witness regarding the alleged assault. Mr. Abel denied that he had assaulted any coolie, and a rural constable called Pompey Reid also denied any assault. Just as Pompey Reid was finishing his statement, Mr. Inspector Griffin informed me that the coolies had returned to Devonshire Castle, had taken possession of the estate, and were about to wreck it. The armed force was ordered to proceed to the plantation, and we immediately followed. Before leaving the court-room I read over Ordinance No. 23 of the year 1846, and caused my clerk to copy the Riot Proclamation out of it. I may here state that I was engaged as a special constable in quelling the Belfast riots of 1864. Thirty people were then killed. I was afterwards examined as a witness before a Royal Commission concerning those riots. The result was that the constabulary, armed with Snider rifles, were introduced as the town police, and the local force disbanded. When I arrived at Devonshire Castle at about one o'clock, the interpreter and I got out of my waggon. I had great difficulty in getting a black man to hold my horse; and I proceeded at once to the coolies who were drawn up across the entrance to the estate in battle array. They were all armed with hackia sticks which they knocked against each other, and yelled and shouted in a most horrible manner. Twenty-four armed policemen and three unarmed were drawn up in front of them at the space of about twelve yards. I immediately went with my interpreter to this riotous mob of coolies—some 150 strong I should say—, and asked them what was the meaning of this demonstration. They said Mr. Abel and the overseers must be removed, and that no one should pass there. I told them that I had no power to remove Mr. Abel; that I was certain that if they had just complaint against him it would be attended to in the proper court. I told them that they were breaking the law, and that they should disperse and go quietly home. They treated my advice with contempt and menace. I retired then for a few minutes to where the police were standing. For half an hour I went frequently to them with my interpreter, and tried by every means in my power to prevail upon them to disperse. They ordered me to go away, and to take the "soldiermen," as they called the police, away with me. I told them I was not there to take orders; I was there to carry out the law. They said I came there with these "soldiers" to kill them. I told them that was untrue, and that not a hair of their heads would be hurt if they dispersed quietly. I said the law had been defied by them, and that force was merely brought there to show that it could not be trampled upon. They then shouted out that they must fight. The interpreter then called upon them frequently to disperse, in the name of the Queen, and they replied that they would not move an inch; that the Queen was not there. I said the Queen's law was there, and that I represented it. I retired again to where the police were. The immigrants then assumed a most defiant attitude. Their conduct was such as only a person who has been accustomed to see excited Hindoos can imagine. The men were actually foaming with rage, and the women assumed the appearance of regular demons. I saw that parleying with them any further was useless, and I determined to read the Riot Act. I went up to within a foot of them, and caused the proclamation to be interpreted word for word. I commenced ordering silence, and concluded by saying "God save the Queen"! I afterwards explained it to them, and the meaning was conveyed to them through the interpreter. I told them that at the expiration of one hour from that time the law must be obeyed, the mob dispersed by force, and the ringleaders arrested. During the hour and twenty minutes that elapsed from making of the proclamation and the unsuccessful efforts which were made to disperse them, I made at least a dozen efforts to induce them to go away to their homes. During the interval about 50 women came to the front of the rioters and screamed and cursed in a most diabolical manner. One woman in particular, apparently their leader, went through the most extraordinary gesticulations I ever beheld. Knowing that legally women are rioters, and rioters of the very worst description from my own knowledge, I sent the interpreter to request them to retire and leave the fray to the men; their reply was a coolie curse which is too horrible for translation. They said they would kill us or they would die with their husbands. One quiet looking woman, not joined with this band of desperate females, came up to me and spoke about wages for weeding. I told her it was no time to talk about the wages or the weeding either, but to go among the women and let them persuade the men to go about their business peaceably. She disappeared among the women. By this time an old man appeared with a young child right in front of the rioters. He came there to deter me from acting, I presume, and the interpreter went and told him that that was not a place for children, and that if he was determined to remain there, he must put the child in some place of safety, as very soon strong measures would be taken. He refused to move. At this time I requested Inspector Griffin to order the men to load, thinking it might have a deterrent effect on the coolies. It had the opposite effect, for they became more frantic than ever. In about an hour and twenty minutes from the time the proclamation was read, the police fixed swords. I went over to my interpreter right in front of the coolies, and told him to say that I called upon them for the last time in the name of the Queen to disperse quietly; that nearly an hour and a half had elapsed, and that force must now be used to maintain the law. They then assumed a most threatening and defiant aspect: they ground their teeth and struck their sticks together. I told them that it was my last appeal, and that if anything happened after, it would be on their own heads; and at all hazards the ringleaders must be arrested. The situation was one of immense peril. There were 27 policemen armed and unarmed, who with some seven or eight other maintainers of law and order were confronted by a horde of coolies numbering some 250, all determined in my opinion to ruthlessly murder all who opposed them. I felt myself to be in a position of the utmost responsibility. I determined to protect fully those about me, and to use no unnecessary force, if possible, to arrest the ringleaders.

It being now five o'clock, the Coroner adjourned the enquiry till Monday next at eleven o'clock, when the evidence of Mr. Loughran will be concluded, and when it is expected the whole matter will be closed.

Monday, 10th October.—The inquest touching the death of the five coolies who were shot during the late disturbance on Plantation Devonshire Castle was concluded to-day before Mr. Sheriff Humphreys, as Coroner, at the Bush Lot Police Station.

Mr. Stipendiary Justice Loughran resumed his evidence, and went on to say—I addressed the gentlemen about me, consisting of Mr. Blake, Mr. Abel, Mr. Bunbury, Mr. Muir, Mr. Robertson, and I think about two more white people, who had come there. I told them that I was forced to take strong measures to disperse the rioters and arrest the ringleaders. I called upon them in the name of the Queen to render assistance to the police, and they cheerfully did so. Great praise is due to each and every one of these gentlemen for their manly and courageous conduct in suppressing the riot. There were some black people in the neighbourhood—about twenty—and I called upon them also. They merely grinned at me and ran away. Every one of the black people refused to render any assistance. Two coloured men, connected, I believe, with the building of Devonshire Castle, gave their services, both at the time of the riot and afterwards in taking the wounded to the hospital. I believe that the black people refused to render any aid because they thought the coolies would immediately crush the police. I told Inspecter Griffin that the time had arrived for putting the law into motion: that he should fix swords, advance his men, and arrest the ringleaders—some six or seven of whom I had pointed out to him. I heard him give the order to his men, and heard him say to them: "Until I give the order, not a shot is to be fired." I saw him examining the locks of the rifles, to see, as I believed, that they were half-cocked. They were Snider rifles, and that I believe is the safest condition in which to keep them. The men in the front rank were ordered to bring their rifles to the charge, and those in the rear rank to slope theirs. A few seconds before the men advanced, and after the Inspector had given his orders, I went in front of them, pointed out the ringleaders that were to be arrested, and stated to the police in a loud voice that on no emergency whatever should a trigger be pulled without my order; if they were obliged to use their swords, to do it in the gentlest manner possible, to strike low, and avoid wounding any vital part. The men advanced about three paces, when the coolies charged upon them with terrific force. They struck their hackia sticks one against the other, screamed out in their loudest tones, "mahr, mahr," "kill 'em, kill 'em." At this moment a coolie came up with a hackia stick and struck me on the leg. I managed to take this [holding up a long hackia stick] from him, and I knocked him down. At that moment I heard the single report of a firearm, and I thought we were all lost. I gave up our case as hopeless. I believed the coolies had obtained guns. This idea was immediately dispelled by my hearing some seven or eight reports of rifles and seeing the coolies scattering and disappearing in all directions. The police chased them and made some prisoners. I also followed in pursuit, and arrested among others the old coolie who had stood in front of the rioters bearing a young child. He had still the child, and was sneaking away, when I arrested him. An overseer took charge of the infant, and he was handcuffed. I saw three men lying dead, and one nearly so; and there were some five or six wounded. I sent off a special messenger for the doctor, who arrived in about half an hour. I had the dead and wounded conveyed to the hospital, and I directed the sick nurse to render every assistance he could to them until the doctor should arrive. I went to Inspector Griffin and asked him if he gave the order to the police to fire. He replied, no; that he believed the matter to be an accident. I said we must examine the rifles of the men at once to see whose had been discharged. The bugle was sounded, and the men were collected. The Inspector and I examined the 24 Snider rifles, and found that ten had exploded. I took down the numbers and names of the persons to whom these rifles belonged. I told the police that the matter must be strictly enquired into, as no order had been given to fire. Some men came up and told the Inspector that the Hampton Court coolies were coming from aback. The Inspector, the police, and myself remained on the ground, waiting to see what further might occur. After a short delay I found the report to be groundless. The men were then marched into the yard. I went into the manager's house and sat down, and thought over the events of the last few minutes. I felt deeply grieved at the sad catastrophe, which resulted in the death of five misguided and unfortunate coolies. I believed then, as I sincerely believe now, that the firing of the rifles saved, not only the few supporters of law and order that were present at the riot at Plantation Devonshire Castle from immediate destruction, but I further believe that if the coolies had overcome the police, the county of Essequebo would have become a scene of murder, rapine, and pillage. After the lapse of an hour, I walked down to the estate's hospital, where I found Dr. Goring and the sick nurse attending with great assiduity to the wounded. I visited the dead-house, and saw three dead coolies lying there, surrounded by some female immigrants. I sent off a special despatch to Mr. Sheriff Humpreys, requesting him to attend at his earliest convenience and hold an inquest on the bodies of the rioters who had been shot. I left the estate in charge of Mr. Acting Inspector-General Hill, and returned home. I at once communicated to His Excellency the Governor an account of the deplorable occurrence.

By the Foreman of the Jury.—Do you believe that if the rifles had not been discharged, that from the excited and violent state of the coolies it would have become necessary to give the order to fire?

Witness.—If I had seen the police, as it has been proved, being overpowered, I would certainly have given an order for some of them at least to fire. But I could not see at the time, for I was engaged myself.

The Foreman of the Jury.—But do you think it must have come to that?

Witness.—I think it must eventually have come to that, because the coolies treated the swords with contempt. I would have given the order for some of the men to fire if I had seen the police were being overcome; but I would not have ordered a volley to be fired.

Dr. Goring, who made post-mortem examinations of the bodies of the coolies who had been shot, described the nature of the wounds, and proved that they were made by rifle bullets, and not by revolvers or fowling pieces loaded with small shot.

This concluded the evidence, and after a short sitting with what may be called closed doors, the Coroner announced the following

VERDICT OF THE JURY.

British Guiana,
County of Essequebo. } To wit.

An inquisition taken at Devonshire Castle, in the County of Essequebo, Colony of British Guiana, on the 1st of October, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, and adjourned to the Bush Lot Court Room, County aforesaid, to the 4th, 7th, 9th, 10th, 11th, and 14th days of October in the year aforesaid, before me, one of the Coroners of our Lady the Queen, in and for the Colony aforesaid, in view of the bodies of Maxidally, Kaulica, Baldeo, Beecarroo, and Auckloo, which were on the first day of October, then and there lying dead, upon the oaths of Philip Smith, Jas. Alex. Bascom, Wm. Shields, Peter John Rohler, good and lawful men, who being then and there duly sworn and charged to enquire for our Lady the Queen when, where, how, and after what manner the said Maxidally, Kaulica, Baldeo, Beecarroo, Auckloo, and divers other persons to the jurors aforesaid, as yet unknown, on the 30th day of September being violently, tumultuously, and unlawfully assembled together in open breach of the public peace and terror of Her Majesty's good subjects, and having violently, tumultuously, and unlawfully assaulted, beaten, and otherwise ill-treated the persons of David Tull, Joseph Smart, J. Archer, R. Nicholas, H. Williams, and others, all police constables, and Peter Abel, manager of Plantation Devonshire Castle, and divers other persons, then being, with cutlasses and hackia sticks; and thereby put them the said David Tull, Joseph Smart, J. Archer, R. Nicholas, H. Williams, Peter Abel, then being in great peril of their lives, and Henry Joseph Loughran, Stipendiary Justice of the Peace for the Colony of British Guiana then being, having read the proclamation appointed by Ordinance No. 23 of 1846, entitled "An Ordinance to introduce into the colony of British Guiana the Laws of England with respect to riots, route, and unlawful and tumultuous assemblies," and the said Maxidally, Kaulica, Baldeo, Beecarroo, Auckloo, and the other persons unknown, so tumultuously, riotously, seditiously, and unlawfully then and there assembled and gathered together, not dispersing themselves according to the tenor of the said proclamation, but riotously, tumultuously, seditiously, and unlawfully continuing together in contempt of the said law, likewise continuing to assault the said David Tull, Joseph Smart, J. Archer, R. Nicholas, H. Williams, Peter Abel, and others with hackia sticks and cutlasses; and J. Archer J. Nicholas, R. Williams, and J. Gibbs, J. Pitinary, George Henry, Tom Nimble, Charles Roberts, F. A. Sargent, J. Wood, being police constables, and being then and there armed with Snider rifles, did in defence of themselves, and for the preservation of their own lives, and of the lives of the said several other persons, then and there being, and also for the preservation of the public peace, certain guns called Snider rifles, charged with gunpowder and leaden bullets, at, to, and against the said Maxidally, Kaulica, Baldeo, Becarroo, Auckloo, and the said other persons unknown so riotously, tumultuously, seditiously, and unlawfully, then and there assembled together, did discharge and shoot off, and that it so happened that five of the said bullets so discharged and shot of the said rifles by the police constables aforesaid did give unto the said Maxidally, him the said Kaulica, him the said Baldeo, him the said Beecarroo, and him the said Auckloo each one mortal wound, of which said mortal wound he the said Maxidally, he the said Kaulica, he the said Baldeo, he the said Beecarroo, and he the said Auckloo then and there instantly died; and so the jurors aforesaid, on their oaths aforesaid, do say that the said police constables aforesaid, in defence of their lives and in defence of the lives of the said several other persons then and there being, and also for the preservation of the public peace, in the manner and by the means aforesaid, Maxidally, Kaulica, Baldeo, Beecarroo, and Auckloo did kill; and the jurors on their oaths do further say, that but for the accidental explosion of one rifle from the blow of a hackia stick, which caused the police constables to believe that the order to fire had been given, and so discharged several other rifles, which caused the deaths of five coolies aforesaid. And the jurors do further say that from the evidence before them they are of opinion that the riot which was confined to one estate (Devonshire Castle) would, but for the fortunate explosion of those rifles, have become a wide-spread rebellion, most disastrous in its consequences.

In witness whereof, as well as the said Coroner as the jurors aforesaid, have hereunto set their hands, this fourteenth day of October, and the year above written.

(Sd.) WM. HUMPHREYS, J. P., Coroner.
PHILIP SMITH, Foreman.
J. A. BASCOM.
P. J. ROHLER.

The Coroner, before discharging the jury, thanked them for the patience with which they had listened to the evidence, and trusted that all concerned would be satisfied that they had done their duty to the best of their ability, and endeavoured to elucidate every circumstance connected with this unfortunate occurrence. It had been a most tiresome business, but happily they had arrived at the end of it.

No. 387, dated Downing Street, London, the 16th November 1872.

From—The Earl of KIMBERLEY,

To—GOVERNOR SCOTT, British Guiana.

I HAVE received with much regret your despatch No. 132, of the 7th ultimo, reporting the riotous proceedings on the part of the Indian immigants on Devonshire Castle, and the killing of five and wounding of six immigrants by the discharge of the rifles of the police.

I have also received your despatch No. 138 of the 25th ultimo, enclosing the report of the inquest on the bodies of the coolies who were killed.

Your despatches afford me but little information upon the point which it is most important to have explained, namely, what were the grievances under which the coolies on the Estates of Devonshire Castle and Anna Regina conceived that they were labouring. The absence of any detailed reference to this matter in either of your communications would seem to indicate that you had satisfied yourself that this serious outbreak was not referable to any special cause. But I am unable to conclude that dissatisfaction so strongly expressed can have been without foundation, and the statement made by the cooly Peraag, as reported by Mr. Loughran at the inquest, "that he was getting two shillings a day; that he had to work from 3 A. M. to 11 P. M., and that he was to receive two shillings per diem without any night work," would appear to point to the cause of discontent. I am inclined to apprehend that the discontent amongst the coolies may have arisen either from the long hours of work imposed upon them in the buildings, or from the absence or insufficiency of their pay for the extra hours, or from their having been in some way compelled (as unfortunately appears to be possible under the existing law) to perform work which was not within their contract, and against which they may have protested.

I have already by telegraph instructed you at once to cause a strict and searching investigation to be made into the complaints of the coolies on this estate, and I have to request that you will take care that in this investigation the points to which I have referred above, and any other matters pending to explain the origin of the discontent which culminated in a defiance of the law are fully elucidated. I further desire to be informed what visits of inspection have recently been made to the estates concerned in the late disturbances; whether the managers and others employed on those estates have previously on any recent occasions had differences with those under their employ, and what has been the general condition of these estates and the laborers upon them.

The trial of the ringleaders will afford their counsel an opportunity of going more fully into the alleged grounds of complaint on the part of the coolies; and as it is of the greatest importance that their case should be completely and fairly stated, I request that you will provide the prisoners, if necessary, at the public expense, with the best counsel procurable, who is not engaged ex-officio by the Government.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 14th January 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.

PANJÁB APPEALS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE introduced the Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a month. He had explained the reasons for the introduction of this Bill fully when he moved for leave to introduce it, and he need not explain them again. Besides the immediate object for which the Bill was introduced, the Bill further provided for the indefinite extension of the existing Act, and introduced two amendments suggested by the Chief Court of the Panjáb. Although both those amendments were of a verbal character, they were for the purpose of removing judicial doubts which existed and seemed proper to be introduced. They would be carefully considered in Committee, and the Committee would also consider whether it was more desirable to repeal the present Act, and have a new Act with the amendments suggested, or simply to pass an amending Act. That, also, was a point raised by the Chief Court of the Panjáb, and which they desired to leave to the discretion of the Legislative Department.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA FERRIES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Ferries in British Burma. He said, the Bill was sent to the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, and had been received back with his opinion and also that of the Judicial Commissioner of the Province; and, in accordance with their suggestions, the Committee had made one or two alterations: they were little more than verbal, but served to explain more clearly the intention of the Bill.

BURMA PORT-DUES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE introduced the Bill for the levy of Port-dues in British Burma, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a month. He had explained the object of this Bill when he obtained leave to introduce it, and he need not explain it again. The Bill was of a simple character, the principle being that it empowered the Local Government and the Governor General in Council, acting in concert, whenever they made a declaration bringing a port within the general Port-dues Act, also to append to that declaration a tariff of Port-dues to be levied in the port, and the conditions under which the dues were to be levied. There was no unlimited power given to the executive, because the last section of the Bill provided that the dues so authorized should not exceed the rate of four annas for every ton of burden, and should only be levied on sea-going vessels of at least ten tons' burden. That was the maximum charge which hitherto it had been found expedient to make in the Burma ports, and it had therefore been fixed as the maximum in this Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTHERN INDIA IRRIGATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON presented the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India. He said, the Bill had been considered by the Select Committee at Simla, and a Report had been presented. The Bill had again been published in the Gazette, and the opinions of the Local Governments had been called for. These had now been received and considered, and the Report which he presented was the final Report of the Committee after consideration of those communications.

The following Select Committees were named:—

On the Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb—The Hon'ble Mr. Egerton and the Mover.

On the Bill for the levy of Port-dues in British Burma—Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley and the Mover.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 21st January 1873.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE FORTNIGHT ENDING THE 16th JANUARY 1873.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Prospects continue, on the whole, good. In Madras they are pronounced "very satisfactory," except in Karnul, where the crops have suffered from previous heavy rain. In Bombay cotton and some cold weather crops have suffered from excessive cold, and prices seem to have reached their minimum, or even to show a slight upward revulsion. Sind, the Upper Punjab, and Behar have had favorable rain. But it still holds off in the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and the south-east of the Punjab, its absence causing some anxiety for the rabi crops. The most noteworthy meteorological fact of the fortnight is the unusually severe cold so generally reported. Frosts, severe cold, and cold winds are reported from Sind, Gujrat and Kattiawar, the Deccan, Central India, and the North-Western Provinces, and even in Behar and Lower Bengal the temperature seems to have been abnormally low, at least for a part of the fortnight. At Indor one morning the thermometer is said to have registered 8 degrees (Fahrenheit) of frost. No report has been received from British Burma.

EXTRADITION.

Order in Council, dated October 15, 1872, for carrying into effect a Treaty between Her Majesty and the King of the Belgians, for the Mutual Surrender of Criminals, signed at Brussels, July 31, 1872.

At the Court at Balmoral, the 15th Day of October, 1872.

Present:

THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

Whereas by an Act of Parliament made and passed in the Session of Parliament holden in the thirty-third and thirty-fourth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for Amending the Law relating to the Extradition of Criminals," it was, amongst other things enacted, that where an arrangement has been made with any Foreign State with respect to the surrender to such State of any fugitive criminals, Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct that the said Act shall apply in the case of such Foreign State; and that Her Majesty may, by the same or any subsequent Order, limit the operation of the Order, and restrict the same to fugitive criminals who are in or suspected of being in the part of Her Majesty's dominions specified in the Order, and render the operation thereof subject to such conditions, exceptions, and qualifications as may be deemed expedient:

And whereas a Treaty was concluded on the thirty-first day of July last between Her Majesty and the King of the Belgians, for the Mutual Extradition of Fugitive Criminals, which Treaty is in the terms following:—

TREATY BETWEEN HER MAJESTY AND THE KING OF THE BELGIANS, FOR THE MUTUAL SURRENDER OF FUGITIVE CRIMINALS.

SIGNED AT BRUSSELS, JULY 31, 1872.

[Ratifications exchanged at Brussels, August 29, 1872.]

HER Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and His Majesty the King of the Belgians, having judged it expedient, with a view to the more complete prevention of crime within their respective territories, that persons charged with or convicted of the crimes hereinafter enumerated, and being fugitives from the justice of their country, should, under certain circumstances, be reciprocally delivered up: Their said Majesties have named as their Plenipotentiaries to conclude a Treaty for this purpose, that is to say:

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, John Savile Lumley, Esquire, Her Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to His Majesty the King of the Belgians;

And His Majesty the King of the Belgians, the Count d'Aspremont Lynden, Officer of His Order of Leopold, Commander of the Order of the Ernestine Branch of the House of Saxony, Grand Cross of the Orders of Charles III, of the Medjidie, and of the Saviour, Member of the Senate, His Minister of Foreign Affairs;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good

SA Majesté la Reine du Royaume Uni de Grande Bretagne et d'Irlande, et Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges, ayant jugé opportun, afin de mieux assurer la répression des crimes dans leurs territoires respectifs, de se livrer réciproquement, sous certaines conditions, les personnes accusées ou condamnées du chef des crimes ci-après énumérés et qui auraient fui la justice de leur pays; les dites Majestés ont nommé pour leurs Plénipotentiaires, à l'effet de conclure un Traité dans ce but, savoir:

Sa Majesté la Reine du Royaume Uni de Grande Bretagne et d'Irlande, John Savile Lumley, Esquire, Son Envoyé Extraordinaire et Ministre Plénipotentiaire près Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges;

Et Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges, le Comte d'Aspremont Lynden, Officier de Son Ordre de Léopold, Commandeur de l'Ordre de la Branche Ernestine de la Maison de Saxe, Grand Cordon des Ordres de Charles III, du Medjidié, et du Sauveur, Sénateur, Son Ministre des Affaires Etrangères;

Lesquels, après s'être communiqué réciproquement leurs pleins pouvoirs, reconnus and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:—

ARTICLE I.

It is agreed that Her Britannic Majesty and His Majesty the King of the Belgians shall, on requisition made in their name by their respective Diplomatic Agents, deliver up to each other, reciprocally, any persons, except as regards Great Britain, native born and naturalized subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, and except as regards Belgium, those who are by birth or who may have become citizens of Belgium, who, being accused or convicted as principals or accessories before the fact, of any of the crimes hereinafter specified, committed within the territories of the requiring Party, shall be found within the territories of the other Party:

1. Murder (including assassination, parricide, infanticide, and poisoning), or attempt to murder.
2. Manslaughter.

3. Counterfeiting or altering money, or uttering counterfeit or altered money.

13. Arson.
14. Robbery with violence (including intimidation).
15. Threats by letter or otherwise with intent to extort.
16. Piracy by law of nations.

17. Sinking or destroying a vessel at sea, or attempting or conspiring to do so.

18. Assaults on board a ship on the high seas, with intent to destroy life or to do grievous bodily harm.

19. Revolt or conspiracy to revolt by two or more persons on board a ship on the high seas against the authority of the master.

Provided that the surrender shall be made only when, in the case of a person accused, the commission of the crime shall be so established as that the laws of the country where en bonne et due forme, sont convenus des Articles suivants:—

ARTICLE I.

Il est convenu que Sa Majesté Britannique et Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges, sur la demande faite en leur nom par leurs Agents Diplomatiques respectifs, se livreront réciproquement tous les individus, sauf relativement à l'Angleterre les sujets de Sa Majesté Britannique par naissance ou naturalisation, et relativement à la Belgique ceux qui sont nés ou naturalisés citoyens Belges, qui étant accusés ou condamnés comme auteurs ou complices avant l'acte, pour l'un des crimes ci-après spécifiés, commis sur le territoire de la Partie requérante, seront trouvés sur le territoire de l'autre Partie:

1. Meurtre (y compris l'assassinat, le parricide, l'infanticide et l'empoisonnement) ou tentative de meurtre.
2. Homicide commis sans préméditation ou guet-apens.
3. Contrefaçon ou altération de monnaie, ainsi que mise en circulation de la monnaie contrefait ou altérée.
4. Faux, contrefaçon, ou altération, ou mise en circulation de ce qui est falsifié, contrefait ou altéré.
5. Soustraction frauduleuse ou vol.
6. Escroquerie d'argent, valeurs, ou marchandises sous de faux prétextes.
7. Crimes des banqueroutiers frauduleux prévus par la loi.
8. Détournement ou dissipation frauduleux au préjudice d'autrui, des effets, deniers, marchandises, quittances, écrits de toute nature, contenant ou opérant obligation ou décharge, et qui avaient été remis à la condition de les rendre et d'en faire un usage ou un emploi déterminé.
9. Viol.
10. Enlèvement de mineurs.
11. Enlèvement d'enfant.
12. Vol avec effraction ou escalade.
13. Incendie.
14. Vol avec violence (comprenant intimidation).
15. Menaces d'attentat punissable d'une peine criminelle.
16. Prise d'un navire par les marins ou passagers par fraude ou violence envers le capitaine.
17. Echouement, perte, destruction, ou tentative d'échouement, de perte, ou de destruction d'un navire à la mer par le capitaine ou les officiers et gens de l'équipage.
18. Attaque ou résistance à bord d'un navire en haute mer avec violence et voies de fait envers le capitaine par plus du tiers de l'équipage.
19. Révolte ou complot de révolte par deux ou plusieurs personnes à bord d'un navire en haute mer, contre l'autorité du capitaine.

Toutefois, l'extradition ne sera accordée, dans le cas d'une personne accusée, que si la perpétration du crime est établie de telle façon que les lois du pays où le fugitif the fugitive or person accused shall be found would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime had been there committed; and, in the case of a person alleged to have been convicted, on such evidence as, according to the laws of the country where he is found, would prove that he had been convicted.

In no case can the surrender be made unless the crime shall be punishable according to the laws in force in both countries with regard to extradition.

ARTICLE II.

In the dominions of Her Britannic Majesty, other than the Colonies or Foreign Possessions of Her Majesty, the manner of proceeding shall be as follows:—

I. In the case of a person accused—

The requisition for the surrender shall be made to Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs by the Minister or other Diplomatic Agent of His Majesty the King of the Belgians, accompanied by a warrant of arrest or other equivalent judicial document, issued by a Judge or Magistrate duly authorized to take cognizance of the acts charged against the accused in Belgium, together with duly authenticated depositions or statements taken on oath before such Judge or Magistrate, clearly setting forth the said acts, and containing a description of the person claimed, and any particulars which may serve to identify him. The said Secretary of State shall transmit such documents to Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, who shall then, by order under his hand and seal, signify to some Police Magistrate in London that such requisition has been made, and require him, if there be due cause, to issue his warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive.

On the receipt of such order from the Secretary of State, and on the production of such evidence as would, in the opinion of the Magistrate, justify the issue of the warrant if the crime had been committed in the United Kingdom, he shall issue his warrant accordingly.

When the fugitive shall have been apprehended, he shall be brought before the Police Magistrate who issued the warrant, or some other Police Magistrate in London. If the evidence to be then produced shall be such as to justify, according to the law of England, the committal for trial of the prisoner, if the crime of which he is accused had been committed in England, the Police Magistrate shall commit him to prison to await the warrant of the Secretary of State for his surrender; sending immediately to the Secretary of State a certificate of the committal and a report upon the case.

After the expiration of a period from the committal of the prisoner, which shall never be less than fifteen days, the Secretary of State shall, by order under his hand and seal, order the fugitive criminal to be surrendered to such person as may be duly authorized to receive him accusé sera trouvé justifieraient son arrestation et son emprisonnement si le crime avait été commis dans ce pays; et dans le cas d'une personne prétenduement condamnée, que sur la production d'une preuve qui, d'après les lois du pays où le fugitif a été trouvé, établirait suffisamment qu'il a été condamné.

En aucun cas l'extradition ne pourra avoir lieu que lorsque le crime sera prévu par la législation sur l'extradition en vigueur dans les deux pays.

ARTICLE II.

Dans les États de Sa Majesté Britannique, autres que les Colonies ou les possessions étrangères de Sa Majesté, la manière de procéder sera la suivante:—

I. S'il s'agit d'une personne accusée—

La demande d'extradition sera adressée au Premier Secrétaire d'Etat de Sa Majesté pour les Affaires Etrangères par le Ministre ou autre Agent Diplomatique de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges. A cette demande seront joints un mandat d'arrêt ou autre document judiciaire équivalent, délivré par un Juge ou Magistrat dûment autorisé à prendre connaissance des actes imputés à l'accusé en Belgique, ainsi que les dépositions authentiques ou les déclarations faites sous serment devant ce Juge ou Magistrat, énonçant clairement les dits actes, et contenant, outre le signalement de la personne réclamée, toutes les particularités qui pourraient servir à établir son identité.

Le dit Secrétaire d'Etat transmettra ces documents au Premier Secrétaire d'Etat de Sa Majesté Britannique pour les Affaires Intérieures, qui, par un ordre de sa main et muni de son sceau, signifiera à l'un ou l'autre Magistrat de Police à Londres que la demand d'extradition a été faite, et le requerra, s'il y a lieu, de délivrer un mandat pour l'arrestation du fugitif.

A la réception d'un semblable ordre du Secrétaire d'Etat, et sur la production de telle preuve qui, dans l'opinion de ce Magistrat, justifierait l'émission du mandat si le crime avait été commis dans le Royaume Uni, il délivrera le mandat requis.

Lorsqu'alors le fugitif aura été arrêté, il sera amené devant le Magistrat de Police qui a lancé le mandat, ou devant un autre Magistrat de Police à Londres. Si la preuve qu'on produira est de nature à justifier, selon la loi Anglaise, la mise en jugement du prisonnier dans le cas où le crime dont il est accusé aurait été commis en Angleterre, le Magistrat de Police l'enverra en prison pour attendre le mandat du Secrétaire d'Etat, nécessaire à l'extradition, et il adressera immédiatement au Secrétaire d'Etat une attestation de l'emprisonnement avec un rapport sur l'affaire.

Après l'expiration d'un certain temps, qui ne pourra jamais être moindre de quinze jours depuis l'emprisonnement de l'accusé, le Secrétaire d'Etat, par un ordre de sa main et muni de son sceau, ordonnera que le criminel fugitif soit livré à telle personne qui on the part of the Government of His Majesty the King of the Belgians.

II. In the case of a person convicted—

The course of proceeding shall be the same as in the case of a person accused, except that the warrant to be transmitted by the Minister or other Diplomatic Agent in support of his requisition shall clearly set forth the crime of which the person claimed has been convicted, and state the fact, place, and date of his conviction. The evidence to be produced before the Police Magistrate shall be such as would, according to the law of England, prove that the prisoner was convicted of the crime charged.

After the Police Magistrate shall have committed the accused or convicted person to prison to await the order of a Secretary of State for his surrender, such person shall have the right to apply for a writ of habeas corpus; if he should so apply, his surrender must be deferred until after the decision of the Court upon the return to the writ, and even then can only take place if the decision is adverse to the applicant. In the latter case, the Court may at once order his delivery to the person authorized to receive him, without the order of a Secretary of State for his surrender, or commit him to prison to await such order.

ARTICLE III.

In the dominions of His Majesty the King of the Belgians, other than the Colonies or Foreign Possessions of His said Majesty, the manner of proceeding shall be as follows:—

I. In the case of a person accused—

The requisition for the surrender shall be made to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the King of the Belgians by the Minister or other Diplomatic Agent of Her Britannic Majesty, accompanied by a warrant of arrest issued by a Judge or Magistrate duly authorized to take cognizance of the acts charged against the accused in Great Britain, together with duly authenticated depositions or statements taken on oath before such Judge or Magistrate, clearly setting forth the said acts, and containing a description of the person claimed, and any other particulars which may serve to identify him.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs shall transmit the warrant of arrest, with the documents thereto annexed, to the Minister of Justice, who shall forward the same to the proper judicial authority, in order that the warrant of arrest may be put in course of execution by the Chamber of the Council (Chambre du Conseil) of the Court of First Instance of the place of residence of the accused, or of the place where he may be found.

After issue of the order for arrest, and on exhibition of the warrant of arrest, the foreigner may be provisionally arrested, and the Juge d'Instruction is authorized to proceed according to the rules prescribed by the Code d'Instruction Criminelle.

sera dûment autorisée à le recevoir au nom du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges.

II. S'il s'agit d'une personne condamnée—

La marche de la procédure sera la même que dans le cas d'une personne accusée, sauf que le mandat à transmettre par le Ministre ou autre Agent Diplomatique, à l'appui de la demande d'extradition, énoncera clairement le crime pour lequel la personne réclamée aura été condamnée, et mentionnera le fait, le lieu, et la date du jugement. La preuve à produire devant le Magistrat de Police sera telle, que d'après la loi Anglaise, elle établirait que le prisonnier a été condamné pour le crime dont on l'accuse.

Après que le Magistrat de Police aura envoyé la personne accusée ou condamnée en prison pour attendre l'ordre d'extradition du Secrétaire d'Etat, cette personne aura le droit de réclamer une ordonnance d'habeas corpus; l'extradition doit alors être différée jusqu'après la décision de la Cour sur le renvoi de l'ordonnance, et elle ne pourra avoir lieu que si la décision est contraire au demandeur. Dans ce dernier cas, la Cour peut immédiatement ordonner la remise de celui-ci à la personne qui est autorisée à le recevoir, sans qu'il soit besoin d'attendre l'ordre d'extradition du Secrétaire d'Etat, ou bien l'envoyer en prison pour attendre cet ordre.

ARTICLE III.

Dans les Etats de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges, autres que les Colonies ou possessions étrangères de Sa dite Majesté, on procédera de la façon suivante:—

I. S'il s'agit d'une personne accusée—

La demande d'extradition sera adressée au Ministre des Affaires Etrangères de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges par le Ministre ou autre Agent Diplomatique de Sa Majesté Britannique; à cette demande seront joints un mandat d'arrêt délivré par un Juge ou Magistrat dûment autorisé à prendre connaissance des actes imputés à l'accusé dans la Grande Bretagne, ainsi que les dépositions authentiques ou les déclarations faites sous serment devant ce Juge ou Magistrat, énonçant clairement les dits actes, et contenant, outre le signalement de la personne réclamée toutes les particularités qui pourraient servir à établir son identité.

Le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères transmettra le mandat d'arrêt, avec les pièces annexées, au Ministre de la Justice, qui fera parvenir les documents à l'autorité judiciaire, à l'effet de voir rendre le dit mandat d'arrêt exécutoire par la Chambre du Conseil du Tribunal de Première Instance du lieu de la résidence de l'inculpé, ou du lieu où il pourra être trouvé.

Après l'ordonnance d'arrestation et sur l'exhibition du mandat d'arrêt, l'étranger pourra être provisoirement arrêté, et le Juge d'Instruction est autorisé à procéder suivant les règles prescrites par le Code d'Instruction Criminelle.

The foreigner may claim to be provisionally set at liberty in any case in which a Belgian enjoys that right, and under the same conditions. The application shall be submitted to the Chamber of the Council (Chambre du Conseil).

The surrender shall not be granted unless on production of the order of the Chamber of the Council (Chambre du Conseil), of the decree of the Chamber of Indictments or Investigation (Chambre des Mises en Accusation), or of the act of criminal procedure (acte de procédure criminelle), issued by the competent Judge, formally decreeing or necessarily involving the sending of the accused before a criminal court (la juridiction répressive) delivered in original or in an authenticated copy, and after having taken the opinion of the Chamber of Indictments or Investigation (Chambre des Mises en Accusation) of the Court of Appeal, within whose jurisdiction the foreigner shall have been arrested.

The hearing of the case shall be public, unless the foreigner should demand that it should be with closed doors.

The public authorities and the foreigner shall be heard. The latter may obtain the assistance of Counsel.

Within a fortnight from the receipt of the documents, they shall be returned, with a reasoned opinion, to the Minister of Justice, who shall decide, and may order that the accused be delivered to the person duly authorised on the part of the Government of Her Britannic Majesty.

II. In the case of a person convicted—

The course of proceeding shall be the same as in the case of a person accused, except that the conviction or sentence of condemnation issued in original or in an authenticated copy, to be transmitted by the Minister or other Diplomatic Agent in support of his requisition, shall clearly set forth the crime of which the person claimed has been convicted, and state the fact, place, and date of his conviction. The evidence to be produced before the Magistrate charged with the investigation of the case shall be such as would, according to the Belgian laws, prove that the prisoner was convicted of the crime charged.

L'étranger pourra réclamer la liberté provisoire dans le cas où un Belge jouit de cette faculté, et dans les mêmes conditions. La demande sera soumise à la Chambre du Conseil.

L'extradition ne sera accordée que sur la production de l'ordonnance de la Chambre du Conseil, de l'arrêt de la Chambre des Mises en Accusation, ou de l'acte de procédure criminelle émané du Juge compétent, décrétant formellement ou opérant de plein droit le renvoi du prévenu ou de l'accusé devant la juridiction répressive, délivrés en original ou en expédition authentique, et après avoir pris l'avis de la Chambre des Mises en Accusation de la Cour d'Appel dans le ressort de laquelle l'étranger aura été arrêté.

L'audience sera publique, à moins que l'étranger ne réclame le huis-clos.

Le Ministère public et l'étranger seront entendus. Celui-ci pourra se faire assister d'un Conseil.

Dans la quinzaine à dater de la réception des pièces, elles seront renvoyées avec l'avis motivé au Ministre de la Justice, qui statuera et pourra ordonner que l'inculpé soit livré à la personne qui sera dûment autorisée au nom du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique.

II. S'il s'agit d'une personne condamnée—

Le cours de la procédure sera le même que dans le cas d'une personne accusée, sauf que le jugement ou l'arrêt de condamnation délivré en original ou en expédition authentique, à transmettre par le Ministre ou l'Agent Diplomatique à l'appui de la demande d'extradition, énoncera clairement le crime pour lequel la personne réclamée aura été condamnée, et mentionnera le fait, le lieu, et la date du jugement. La preuve à produire devant le Magistrat chargé de l'investigation du cas sera telle que, conformément aux lois Belges, elle etablirait que le prisonnier a été condamné pour le crime dont on l'accuse.

ARTICLE IV.

A fugitive criminal may, however, be apprehended under a warrant issued by any Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other competent authority in either country, on such information or complaint, and such evidence, or after such proceedings as would, in the opinion of the person issuing the warrant, justify the issue of a warrant, if the crime had been committed or the prisoner convicted, in that part of the dominions of the two Contracting Parties in which he exercises jurisdiction: Provided, however, that, in the United Kingdom, the accused shall, in such case, be sent as speedily as possible before a Police Magistrate in London. He shall be discharged, as well in the United Kingdom as in Belgium, if within fourteen days a requisition shall not have been made for his surrender by the Diplo-

ARTICLE IV.

Un criminel fugitif peut, cependant, être arrêté sur un mandat délivré par tout Magistrat de Police, Juge de Paix, ou autre autorité compétente dans chaque pays, à la suite d'un avis, d'une plainte, d'une preuve, ou de tout autre acte de procédure qui, dans l'opinion de la personne délivrant le mandat, justifierait ce mandat, si le crime avait été commis ou la personne condamnée dans la partie des Etats des deux Contractants où il exerce juridiction: pourvu que, cependant, s'il s'agit du Royaume Uni, l'accusé soit, dans un pareil cas, envoyé aussi promptement que possible devant un Magistrat de Police à Londres. Il sera relâché, tant dans le Royaume Uni qu'en Belgique, si dans les quatorze jours une demande d'extradition n'a pas été faite par l'Agent Diplomatique de matic Agent of his country, in the manner directed by Articles II and III of this Treaty.

The same rule shall apply to the cases of persons accused or convicted of any of the crimes specified in this Treaty, committed on the high seas, on board any vessel of either country which may come into a port of the other.

ARTICLE V.

If the fugitive criminal who has been committed to prison be not surrendered and conveyed away within two months after such committal (or within two months after the decision of the Court upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus in the United Kingdom), he shall be discharged from custody, unless sufficient cause be shown to the contrary.

ARTICLE VI.

When any person shall have been surrendered by either of the High Contracting Parties to the other, such person shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to the country from whence he was surrendered, be triable or tried for any offence committed in the other country prior to the surrender, other than the particular offence on account of which he was surrendered.

ARTICLE VII.

No accused or convicted person shall be surrendered, if the offence in respect of which his surrender is demanded shall be deemed by the Party upon which it is made to be a political offence, or to be an act connected with (connexe à) such an offence, or if he prove to the satisfaction of the Police Magistrate, or of the Court before which he is brought on habeas corpus, or to the Secretary of State, that the requisition for his surrender has in fact been made with a view to try or to punish him for an offence of a political character.

ARTICLE VIII.

Warrants, depositions, or statements on oath, issued or taken in the dominions of either of the two High Contracting Parties, and copies thereof, and certificates of or judicial documents stating the fact of conviction, shall be received in evidence in proceedings in the dominions of the other, if purporting to be signed or certified by a Judge, Magistrate, or officer of the country where they were issued or taken.

Provided such warrants, depositions, statements, copies, certificates, and judicial documents are authenticated by the oath of some witness, or by being sealed with the official seal of the Minister of Justice, or some other Minister of State.

ARTICLE IX.

The surrender shall not take place if, since the commission of the acts charged, the accusation, or the conviction, exemption from prosecution or punishment has been acquired by lapse of time, according to the laws of the country where the accused shall have taken refuge.

son pays, suivant le mode indiqué par les Articles II et III de ce Traité.

La même règle s'appliquera aux cas de personnes accusées ou condamnées du chef de l'un des crimes spécifiés dans ce Traité et commis en pleine mer, à bord d'un navire de l'un des deux pays, et qui viendrait dans un port de l'autre.

ARTICLE V.

Si le criminel fugitif qui a été arrêté n'est pas livré et emmené dans les deux mois après son arrestation (ou dans les deux mois après la décision de la Cour sur le renvoi d'une ordonnance d'habeas corpus dans le Royaume Uni), il sera mis en liberté, à moins qu'il n'y ait un motif suffisant de le retenir en prison.

ARTICLE VI.

Lorsqu'une personne aura été extradée par l'une des Hautes Parties Contractantes, cette personne, jusqu'à ce qu'elle soit rentrée dans le pays d'où elle a été extradée, ou qu'elle ait eu occasion de le faire, ne sera poursuivie pour aucun délit commis dans l'autre pays avant l'extradition, autre que celui pour lequel l'extradition a eu lieu.

ARTICLE VII.

Aucune personne accusée ou condamnée ne sera extradée, si le délit pour lequel l'extradition est demandée est considéré par la Partie requise comme un délit politique ou un fait connexe à un semblable délit, ou si la personne prouve, à la satisfaction du Magistrat de Police ou de la Cour devant laquelle elle est amené pour l'habeas corpus, ou du Secrétaire d'Etat, que la demande d'extradition a été faite, en réalité, dans le but de la poursuivre ou de la punir pour un délit d'un caractère politique.

ARTICLE VIII.

Les mandats, dépositions, déclarations sous serment, délivrés ou recueillis dans les Etats de l'une des deux Hautes Parties Contractantes, les copies de ces pièces, ainsi que les certificats ou les documents judiciaires établissant le fait de la condamnation, seront reçus comme preuve dans la procédure des Etats de l'autre Partie, s'ils sont revêtus de la signature ou accompagnés de l'attestation d'un Juge, Magistrat, ou fonctionnaire du pays où ils ont été délivrés ou recueillis.

Pourvu que ces mandats, dépositions, déclarations, copies, certificats, et documents judiciaires soient rendus authentiques par le serment d'un témoin, ou par le sceau officiel du Ministre de la Justice ou d'un autre Ministre d'Etat.

ARTICLE IX.

L'extradition n'aura pas lieu si, depuis les faits imputés, les poursuites, ou la condamnation, la prescription de l'action ou de la peine est acquise d'après les lois du pays où le prévenu s'est réfugié.

ARTICLE X.

If the individual claimed by one of the two High Contracting Parties in pursuance of the present Treaty should be also claimed by one or several other Powers, on account of other crimes committed upon their respective territories, his surrender shall be granted to that State whose demand is earliest in date; unless any other arrangement should be made between the Governments which have claimed him, either on account of the gravity of the crimes committed, or for any other reasons.

ARTICLE XI.

If the individual claimed should be under prosecution, or condemned for a crime or offence committed in the country where he may have taken refuge, his surrender may be deferred until he shall have been set at liberty in due course of law.

In case he should be proceeded against or detained in such country, on account of obligations contracted towards private individuals, his surrender shall nevertheless take place, the injured party retaining his right to prosecute his claims before the competent authority.

ARTICLE XII.

Every article found in the possession of the individual claimed at the time of his arrest, shall, if the competent authority so decide, be seized, in order to be delivered up with his person at the time when the surrender shall be made. Such delivery shall not be limited to the property or articles obtained by stealing or by fraudulent bankruptcy, but shall extend to everything that may serve as proof of the crime. It shall take place even when the surrender, after having been ordered, shall be prevented from taking place by reason of the escape or death of the individual claimed.

The rights of third parties with regard to the said property or articles are nevertheless reserved.

ARTICLE XIII.

Each of the High Contracting Parties shall defray the expenses occasioned by the arrest within its territories, the detention, and the conveyance to its frontier, of the persons whom it may consent to surrender in pursuance of the present Treaty.

ARTICLE XIV.

The stipulations of the present Treaty shall be applicable to the Colonies and Foreign Possessions of the two High Contracting Parties.

The requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal, who has taken refuge in a Colony or Foreign Possession of either Party, shall be made to the Governor or Chief Authority of such Colony or Possession by the Chief Consular Officer of the other in such Colony or Possession; or if the fugitive has escaped from a Colony or Foreign Possession of the Party on whose behalf the requisition is made, by the Governor or Chief Authority of such Colony or Possession.

ARTICLE X.

Si l'individu réclamé par l'une des Hautes Parties Contractantes, en exécution du présent Traité, est aussi réclamé par une ou plusieurs autres Puissances, du chef d'autres crimes commis sur leurs territoires respectifs, son extradition sera accordée à l'Etat dont la demande est la plus ancienne en date, à moins qu'il n'existe entre les Gouvernements qui l'ont réclamé un arrangement qui déciderait de la préférence, soit à raison de la gravité des crimes commis, soit à raison de tout autre motif.

ARTICLE XI.

Si l'individu réclamé est poursuivi ou condamné pour un crime ou un délit commis dans le pays où il s'est réfugié, son extradition pourra être différée jusqu'à ce qu'il ait été mis en liberté selon le cours régulier de la loi.

Dans le cas où il serait poursuivi ou détenu dans le même pays à raison d'obligations par lui contractées envers des particuliers, son extradition n'en aura pas moins lieu, sauf à la partie lésée à faire valoir ses droits devant l'autorité compétente.

ARTICLE XII.

Tout objet trouvé en la possession de l'individu réclamé au moment de son arrestation sera, si l'autorité compétente en a ainsi ordonné, saisi pour être livré avec sa personne lorsque l'extradition aura lieu. Cette remise ne sera pas limitée aux objets acquis par vol ou banqueroute frauduleuse, mais elle s'étendra à toute chose qui pourrait servir de pièce de conviction. Elle se fera même si l'extradition, après avoir été accordée, ne peut s'accomplir par suite de l'évasion ou de la mort de l'individu réclamé.

Sont, cependant, réservés les droits des tiers sur les objets susmentionnés.

ARTICLE XIII.

Chacune des Hautes Parties Contractantes supportera les frais occasionnés par l'arrestation sur son territoire, la détention, et le transport à la frontière des personnes qu'elle consentirait à extrader en exécution du présent Traité.

ARTICLE XIV.

Les stipulations du présent Traité seront applicables aux Colonies et Possessions étrangères des deux Hautes Parties Contractantes.

La demande d'extradition d'un criminel fugitif qui s'est réfugié dans une Colonie ou Possession étrangère de l'une des Parties sera faite au Gouverneur ou au fonctionnaire principal de cette Colonie ou Possession par le principal Agent Consulaire de l'autre dans cette Colonie ou Possession; ou, si le fugitif s'est échappé d'une Colonie ou Possession étrangère de la Partie au nom de laquelle l'extradition est demandée, par le Gouverneur ou le fonctionnaire principal de cette Colonie ou Possession.

Such requisitions may be disposed of, subject always, as nearly as may be, to the provisions of this Treaty, by the respective Governors or Chief Authorities, who, however, shall be at liberty either to grant the surrender, or to refer the matter to their Government.

Her Britannic Majesty shall, however, be at liberty to make special arrangements in the British Colonies and Foreign Possessions for the surrender of Belgian criminals who may there take refuge, on the basis, as nearly as may be, of the provisions of the present Treaty.

Ces demandes seront faites ou accueillies en suivant toujours, aussi exactement que possible, les stipulations de ce Traité par les Gouverneurs ou premiers fonctionnaires, qui, cependant, auront la faculté ou d'accorder l'extradition ou d'en référer à leur Gouvernement.

Sa Majesté Britannique se réserve, cependant, le droit de faire des arrangements spéciaux dans les Colonies Anglaises ou Possessions étrangères pour l'extradition de criminels Belges qui y auraient cherché refuge, en se conformant, aussi exactement que possible, aux stipulations du présent Traité.

ARTICLE XV.

The present Treaty shall come into operation ten days after its publication in conformity with the laws of the respective countries.

Either Party may at any time terminate the Treaty on giving to the other six months' notice of its intention.

ARTICLE XV.

Le présent Traité entrera en vigueur dix jours après sa publication dans les formes prescrites par la législation des pays respectifs.

Chaque Partie peut en tout temps mettre fin au Traité, en donnant à l'autre, six mois à l'avance, avis de son intention.

ARTICLE XVI.

The present Treaty shall be ratified, and the Ratifications shall be exchanged at Brussels as soon as may be within six weeks from the date of signature.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at Brussels, the thirty-first day of July, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

J. SAVILE LUMLEY.
(L.S.)

ARTICLE XVI.

Le présent Traité sera ratifié, et les ratifications seront échangées à Bruxelles le plus tôt possible dans les six semaines de la date de la signature.

En foi de quoi les Plénipotentiaires respectifs ont signé ce même Traité, et y ont apposé le sceau de leurs armes.

Fait à Bruxelles, le trentième et unième jour de Juillet, dans l'année de grâce mil huit cent soixante-douze.

CTE. D'ASPREMONT-LYNDEN.

And whereas the ratifications of the said Treaty were exchanged at Brussels on the twenty-ninth day of August last:

Now, therefore, Her Majesty, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, and in virtue of the authority committed to Her by the said recited Act, doth order, and it is hereby ordered, that from and after the twenty-eighth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, the said Act shall apply in the case of the said Treaty with the King of the Belgians

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

The 21st January 1873.

No. 508.—The Governor General in Council directs that the following additions be made to the Civil Leave Code:—

ADD THE WORDS:—

NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ.

under each of the under-mentioned rules:—

Rule 2 under Section 4 (d).
Rules 2 and 3 „ „ 9 (b).
„ 2 and 4 „ „ 15.
Sections 18, 19, 20, and 21.
Rules 3, 7, and 8 under Section 18.
Rule 1 „ „ 19.
Rules 1, 3, 4, and 5 „ „ 21 in Chapter VI.
Sections 23 (a) and 24.
Rules 4, 9, and 10 under Section 24.

UNDER SECTION 10 (a), ADD RULE 1 AS FOLLOWS:—

1. In the case of a Commissioned Military Officer in Civil employ who takes subsidiary or preparatory leave before furlough, the words "prior to his proceeding on furlough" in Section V of the military furlough regulations of the 10th November 1868 shall be understood to mean prior to his being relieved of his duties.

UNDER SECTION 15, ADD THE FOLLOWING AS RULE 1 AND ALTER THE NUMBER OF THE PRESENT RULE 1 TO 1 (a):—

1. For the interval between giving up charge of office and commencement of furlough out of India, and between the end of furlough out of India and the resumption of charge of office, a Commissioned Military Officer in Civil employ is allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days.

UNDER SECTION 15, ADD RULE 3 (b) AS FOLLOWS:—

3 (b). In the case of Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, days of embarkation and debarkation are parts of furlough, and furlough allowances only are admissible for such periods.

In such cases, furlough cannot be extended on the ground that the vessel in which an officer leaves India, or returns to it, touches at some other port in India after the first embarkation or before the final debarkation.

UNDER THE EXPLANATION IN SECTION 15, ADD TO RULE 1 AS FOLLOWS:—

NOTE.—A similar rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ who remain in India after the end of subsidiary leave prefixed to furlough.

UNDER SECTION 17, ADD TO RULE 2 AS FOLLOWS:—

NOTE.—A similar rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ taking subsidiary leave before furlough.

UNDER SECTION 17, ADD RULE 3 AS FOLLOWS:—

3. The allowances of every Commissioned Military Officer in Civil employ during subsidiary leave shall be calculated as in the case of general leave taken in India. Provided always that if an officer shall, under the action of the leave rules, have lost his lien on his appointment, he shall, during subsidiary leave, draw allowances under the rules of the Military Department applicable to his case.

[NOTE.—This rule regulates allowances during leave subsidiary to furlough of any description.]

UNDER SECTION 18, ADD RULE 9 AS FOLLOWS:—

9. With regard to the privilege leave of Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, no distinction is made between officers who have substantive Civil appointments, and those who are merely officiating in the Civil Department. The leave is earned by uninterrupted duty in either the Civil or the Military Department.

UNDER SECTION 22, ADD RULE 1 (a) AS FOLLOWS:—

1 (a). In the case of Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, leave may be retrospectively commuted, by the authority which granted it, to any other kind of leave which the said authority would have been competent to allow when the original leave was sanctioned.

ADD THE FOLLOWING TO RULE 3 UNDER SECTION 22:—

NOTE.—A similar rule applies in the case of Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ.

UNDER SECTION 23 (a), RULE 2, ADD THE FOLLOWING:—

NOTE.—So much of this rule as relates to allowances being drawn by an agent applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ.

UNDER SECTION 23 (b), ADD THE FOLLOWING WORDS:—

NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, and to all officers who take leave under the Supplements to the Code.

ADD THE FOLLOWING TO RULE 5 UNDER SECTION 24 :—

NOTE.—A similar rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ.

ADD THE FOLLOWING TO SECTION 25-1 (a) :—

NOTE.—A similar rule holds in the case of a Commissioned Military Officer in Civil employ.

UNDER SECTION 25, ADD RULE 5 AS FOLLOWS :—

5. Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, going on leave from the Public Works Department, are required to produce no-demand certificates from account officers of that Department.

No. 586.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to sanction the following addition to Section 25 of the Acting Allowance Code :—

(d). An Executive Engineer, holding charge of two divisions, will receive an acting allowance of Rs. 100 a month. This, however, is only to be allowed under special circumstances, and as a temporary arrangement, and must be reported to the Government of India for confirmation.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Calcutta, the 22nd January 1873.

Notice is hereby given that correspondence for Zanzibar forwarded viâ Bombay to Aden by the Mail Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company and thence by the British India Steam Navigation Company's vessels, is chargeable at the same rates as correspondence for Aden: but all such correspondence must be fully prepaid.

2. A continuation of the same line of communication from Zanzibar to Mozambique, Delagoa Bay, Natál and the Cape of Good Hope, will come into force in March next, and correspondence may be sent thereby viâ Bombay, commencing with the Mail Steamer leaving Bombay on the 17th February. Correspondence for these places is subject to the same rates and conditions as prescribed above for correspondence for Zanzibar.

3. The dates of departure of Mails from Bombay for the above-mentioned places have been included in the Mail Steamer Calendar published this day under separate notice.

In anticipation of the publication of the next edition of the "Indian Postal Guide," the following calendar of mail steamer departures from Bombay is published :—

Mail Steamer Calendar for Bombay.

N. B.—Where Galle is mentioned, mails may also be sent for the Island of Ceylon generally.

Where Singapore is mentioned, mails may also be sent for places in Netherlands India, Labuan, Bankok (Siam) and Phillippine Islands.

Where Hong-Kong and Shanghai are mentioned, mails may also be sent for other places in China, e. g., for Amoy, Canton, Foochow, Swatow and Whampoa through Hong-Kong and Ningpo through Shanghai.

Where Yokohama is mentioned, mails may also be sent for Nagasaki, Hiogo and other places in Japan.

When the mails from Europe do not reach Bombay in time for the Kurrachee or Kurrachee and Persian Gulf steamers, these vessels are detained for one day.

Where Mozambique is mentioned, mails may also be sent for Delagoa Bay, but as the call at Delagoa Bay is optional with the contractors for the service, the delivery of correspondence for that place cannot be guaranteed.

"P. and O." stand for Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company: and "B. I." stand for British India Steam Navigation Company.

Mail steamers and places for which mails are sent. See also N. B. above.

Besides the information given above, the following particulars may be useful :—

Dates on which the fortnightly Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company are timed to leave the Sandheads (Calcutta).

Friday	the 3rd	January	1873.	Friday	the 28th	March	1873.
„	the 17th	„	„	„	the 11th	April	„
„	the 31st	„	„	„	the 25th	„	„
„	the 14th	February	„	Wednesday	the 7th	May	„
„	the 28th	„	„	„	the 21st	„	„
„	the 14th	March	„	„	the 4th	June	„

Mails for the above-mentioned Steamers are made up in Calcutta on days notified locally from time to time (ordinarily in the evening, two days prior to the date of starting from the Sandheads) for Ceylon.

The French Mail Steamers starting from Calcutta once every four weeks commencing with 21st January (during the monsoon season 2 days earlier, commencing with 11th May) proceed to Madras, Pondicherry, Galle, Singapore, Batavia, Saigon, Hong-Kong, Shanghai, Yokohama, Aden, Suez, Europe, Mahé (Seychelles), Réunion and Mauritius. The British India Steam Navigation Company have also contract lines from Calcutta fortnightly to Chittagong and Akyab, fortnightly to Akyab, Rangoon and Moulmein, fortnightly to Rangoon and Moulmein (with a continuation once every four weeks to the Straits), once in every four weeks to Port Blair, and fortnightly to Bombay and ports on the East and West Coasts. The same Company have a line once every four weeks between Madras and Rangoon, and a weekly line of Steamers from Bombay to Kurrachee, with a continuation once a fortnight to the Persian Gulf.

The Opium Steamers, which leave Calcutta monthly for Penang, Singapore and Hong-Kong, have not been included, as the dates of starting are not fixed. They leave ordinarily about 12 days after each Government opium sale, and these sales have been advertised for the current year as about 6th January, 5th February, 3rd March, 3rd April, 5th May, 4th June, 3rd July, 4th August, 4th September, 9th October, 6th November, and 4th December. These Steamers proceed direct to the Straits and China, thus avoiding the circuit viâ Galle, and reaching Hong-Kong in about 15 days from Calcutta. Correspondence for the United States of America, when marked viâ Hong-Kong, can be sent by these Steamers.

Letter Mails forwarded viâ Bombay for transmission by Peninsular and Oriental Company's Steamers are closed in Calcutta 3 days earlier than in Bombay. Those forwarded viâ Bombay for transmission by British India Steam Navigation Company's vessels to the Persian Gulf, &c., are closed in Calcutta 4 days earlier, as in these cases the Steamers leave Bombay earlier in the day.

The 23rd January 1873.

Consequent upon an alteration of the rates of postage chargeable upon letters passing between the United Kingdom and Newfoundland, the rates chargeable in India on letters for Newfoundland have been reduced from 12 to 10 annas per ½ oz. (viâ Brindisi) and from 10 to 8 annas per ½ oz. (viâ Southampton), the reduced rates being the same as those already prescribed for letters to Canada.

OVERLAND MONEY ORDERS.

The following revised Tariff for Overland Money Orders will have effect from the 1st February 1873. The charge for Overland Money Orders will, from the above-mentioned date and until further notice, be regulated by Schedule 6 of the Tariff.

Annexed to the Tariff will be found illustrations of the mode of calculation therefrom, and also a summary of information respecting the obtainment of Overland Money Orders by the public.

SUMMARY OF INFORMATION RESPECTING OBTAINMENT OF OVERLAND MONEY ORDERS BY THE PUBLIC.

Overland Money Orders can be obtained at any Government Treasury.

The application should be accompanied by payment of the cost, and by the following information, viz.:—

OVERLAND MONEY ORDER APPLICATION.

Residing at _____

Name of Remitter _____

Address of Remitter _____

Date, the _____ 187 .

N. B.—The name of the payee or person to whom the order is made payable should include the surname and at least the initial of one Christian name. If the payee be a Firm or Company, the name of the Firm or Company will suffice.

The address of the payee should be full and precise, as on it depends the determination by the British Office of the particular Money Order Office at which the order is made payable.

As respects the name of the remitter, the same instructions apply; and if the remitter be a native, his name, tribe or caste, and father's name should be given.

Blank forms of application can be obtained by intending remitters from a Government Treasury, with the necessary instructions printed on the back.

For each remittance the remitter will be furnished with a receipt, with all needful information printed on the back. This receipt will be retained by the remitter: all that he has to do being to write to the payee in England, informing him of his (the remitter's) name as entered in the receipt. The payee in England will receive the Money Order direct from the London Post Office.

Power to distribute business.

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, section six, every Deputy Commissioner may direct suits to be instituted in the Courts subordinate to him, according to such rules as to the description of the suits and the amount or value of their subject-matter as he shall from time to time, with the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner, prescribe in this behalf, and may also, with the like sanction, direct the business of the said Courts to be distributed among them in such way as he thinks fit:

provided that no Court shall try any suit where the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds its proper jurisdiction.

Language of plaints and record of evidence.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, sections twenty-six and one hundred and seventy-two, plaints may be written and evidence may be taken down in such language or languages as the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time direct in this behalf.

Appeals to lie from Courts of original jurisdiction.

5. Notwithstanding anything contained in the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and subject to any express provision to the contrary contained in any other Act for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees and orders of the Courts of original jurisdiction in British Burma to the Courts empowered by the said Act, section eight and section sixty-nine, respectively, to hear appeals from decrees and orders.

All such appeals presented between the fifth day of April 1872 and the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to have been presented under this section.

Appeals to Special Court.

6. In the interval between the presentation of an appeal, under section sixty-nine of the said Burma Courts' Act, 1872, and the hearing thereof by the Special Court, the appeal and all applications relating thereto shall be dealt with by the Judicial Commissioner as if it were an appeal presented in his own Court.

Special Court to be deemed a High Court under Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871.

7. For the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, the said Special Court shall be deemed to be a High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal or as a Court of Reference, as the case may be.

For the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, appeals and applications to the said Special Court shall be deemed to be, respectively, appeals and applications to a High Court under the Code of Civil Procedure or under the Code of Criminal Procedure, as the case may be.

Application of Acts VII of 1870 and IX of 1871 to certain petitions to Judicial Commissioner.

8. When the civil appellate jurisdiction of any Commissioner has, under section twenty-nine of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, been transferred to the Judicial Commissioner,

(a.) all petitions and other documents presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Court Fees' Act, 1870, be deemed to have been presented to the Commissioner:

(b.) and all appeals and applications presented to the Judicial Commissioner in the exercise of the jurisdiction so transferred shall, for the purposes of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, be deemed to have been presented to him in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction.

Power to call for record.

9. In any case in which a Court of first appeal has, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, wrongly refused to submit a statement under section thirty-five of the Burma Courts' Act, 1872, the Judicial Commissioner may call for the record of the case, and may, on receipt of such record, proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

And in any case in which a Court of first appeal has submitted such a statement, but, in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner, the statement is unduly limited, or justice cannot be done without re-hearing the case, the Judicial Commissioner may proceed to try the case as if it were an appeal instituted in his own Court.

The Judicial Commissioner shall send the Court of first appeal a copy of his judgment in any case tried under this section, and the said Court shall dispose of the case in conformity with such judgment.

Amendment of Act VII of 1872, section 35.

10. To section thirty-five of the said Act, the following words shall be added: "and a certified copy of such reasons shall, on application to the Court, be furnished to any party to the suit."

Licensing of advocates.

11. No person shall be permitted to appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor, or of any appellant, complainant or accused person, in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, or in any Court, whether civil or criminal, subordinate thereto, unless such person is licensed thereto by the Judicial Commissioner, either generally or specially.

Rules for their qualification and admission.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules for the qualification, admission and enrolment of proper persons to appear, plead or act as aforesaid;

and for the suspension or dismissal of any such persons who are guilty of fraudulent or grossly improper conduct.

All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette.

Any person appearing, pleading or acting in contravention of any such rule, shall be liable, by order of the Court, to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Saving of agents of Government, suitors, co-suitors, and advocates of High Courts.

12. Notwithstanding anything contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder, any person may appear, plead or act as the agent for the Crown or for the Secretary of State for India in Council, and any suitor may appear, plead or act on behalf of himself or a co-suitor;

and any person who for the time being is an advocate, vakíl or attorney-at-law of any High Court may appear, plead or act as the advocate of any suitor in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or any Court subordinate thereto.

And nothing contained in section eleven or in any rule made thereunder shall be deemed to affect the second clause of section 186 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Fees liable to taxation.

13. The fees to be received by any advocate, for business done in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner or in any Court subordinate thereto, shall at all times be subject to the control and taxation of the presiding Judge; and no such fees shall be recoverable unless they have been allowed on taxation by the said Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

The Judicial Commissioner may from time to time make rules regulating the control and taxation of costs in such subordinate Courts.

Saving of certain trials at Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab.

14. No trial had by the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner at Courts of Session in the towns of Maulmain, Rangoon and Akyab, shall be deemed to have been invalid merely on the ground that such trial was not by jury.

16. Officers by whom offences are triable.

An Act for regulating Ferries in British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate the public ferries within the Province of British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Ferries' Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

II.—Public Ferries.

Power to declare and establish public ferries.

2. The Chief Commissioner may declare what ferries within any part of British Burma shall be deemed public ferries, and the district in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate, and may at any time hereafter establish new ferries, where, in his opinion, they are needed, and may, from time to time, change the course of any public ferry, or discontinue any public ferry which he deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette.

Superintendence of ferries.

3. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as hereinafter provided, be vested in the Deputy Commissioner of the district in which they are situate, and he shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

Management may be vested in local Municipality;

4. The Chief Commissioner may direct that any public ferry situated within the limits of a town may be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town, and proceeds paid into Municipal Fund.

and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry shall be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town, and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

Letting ferry-tolls by auction.

5. The tolls of any public ferry may be put up to public auction for such term not exceeding three years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry, and may be called upon by the officer putting the tolls of the ferry up to auction to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer may deem fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason duly recorded in writing, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

Power to make rules.

6. Subject to the revision and confirmation of the Chief Commissioner, the Commissioner of each Division shall have power to make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division;

for regulating the time and manner in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries;

and for fixing the limits of the same:

and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, he shall have power (subject as aforesaid) to make additional rules—for regulating the number and kinds of boats and their dimensions, and the number of crew for each boat, which the lessee of the tolls will be required to keep;

the hours during which he shall be bound to ply, and the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip;

and for the keeping of such boats continually in good condition for the safe conveyance of passengers and property.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

Private ferry not to ply within certain distance of public ferry without sanction.

7. No person shall, except with the sanction of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry-boat for the purpose of plying for hire within the limits of such public ferry.

Nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, or apply to boats which the Chief Commissioner expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

III.—Tolls.

Tolls.

8. Tolls, according to such rates as are from time to time fixed by the Chief Commissioner, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things carried by means of any public ferry:

Provided that the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Chief Commissioner.

Table of tolls.

9. The lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Deputy Commissioner or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

Tolls or rents to be credited to district fund.

10. All tolls or rents received under this Act shall, except in the cases provided for by section four, be credited to the district fund.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty for failing to affix, or for removing, &c., table of tolls.

11. Every lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of a public ferry, who neglects to affix and keep in good order and repair the table of tolls mentioned in section nine, or who wilfully removes, alters or defaces such table, or allows it to become illegible, or who fails to produce, on demand, the list of the tolls mentioned in section nine,

shall be liable to fine not exceeding twenty rupees.

Penalty for taking unauthorized toll, and for causing delay.

12. Every such lessee or other person as aforesaid asking or taking other than the lawful toll, or without due cause delaying any person, animal or other thing,

shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees.

Cancelment of lease on breach of rules.

13. In the event of any breach by a lessee of the tolls of a ferry, of the rules for the management of such ferry made under section six,

the Deputy Commissioner may impose upon him a fine not exceeding twenty rupees, and in that event, or in the event of repeated liability to the penalties respectively provided by sections eleven and twelve,

the Deputy Commissioner may also, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, cancel the lease of the tolls of such ferry and make other arrangements for its management during the whole or any part of the term for which the tolls were let.

Penalties on passengers offending.

14. Every person crossing at any public ferry who refuses to pay the proper toll, or who, with intent of avoiding payment thereof, fraudulently or forcibly crosses any ferry-station without paying the toll, or who obstructs any toll-collector or lessee of the tolls of a public ferry, or any of his assistants, in any way in the execution of their duty under this Act, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees over and above the value of the damage, if any, which he has done.

Penalty for plying within public ferry-course without license.

15. Whoever conveys for hire any passenger, animal, cart, carriage or other vehicle, or any goods or merchandise, to or from any point within the limits assigned to each public ferry, in contravention of the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees.

Where the tolls of such ferry have been let under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the whole or any portion of any penalty realized under this section or section fourteen may, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, be paid to the lessee.

Officers by whom offences are triable.

16. All offences against this Act shall be heard and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates; and any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates trying offences under this section may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (if any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned, and shall order the amount of such value to be paid by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

SCHEDULE.—Enactments repealed.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Civil Courts of the Madras Presidency subordinate to the High Court.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Civil Courts of the Madras Presidency subordinate to the High Court; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Madras Civil Courts' Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to all the territories for the time being under the government of the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, except the Tracts respectively under the jurisdiction of the Agents for Ganjam and Vizagapatam;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Repeal of enactments.

2. On and from that day the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column of such schedule.

PART II.

ESTABLISHMENT AND CONSTITUTION OF CIVIL COURTS.

Number of District Courts.

3. The number of District (heretofore designated Zila) Courts to be established or continued under this Act, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no increase to the number of such Courts shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs.

4. The number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs to be appointed under this Act for each District, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no addition to the number of such officers shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Court's locality.

5. The place at which any Court under this Act shall be held may be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, in the case of a District Court or a Subordinate Judge's Court, by the Local Government, in the case of a District Munsif's Court, by the High Court.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Judge or Subordinate Judge.

6. Whenever the office of the Judge of a District Court (hereinafter called a 'District Judge') or of a Subordinate Judge under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges under the provisions of section three or section four,

the Local Government shall appoint to the office such duly qualified person as it thinks proper.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

7. Whenever the office of a District Munsif under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Munsifs under the provisions of section four,

the High Court shall appoint to the office such person as it thinks fit:

Provided that he possesses the qualifications for the time being required by the rules in this behalf which the High Court, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, are hereby empowered to make and alter.

Publication of appointments.

Every appointment made under this section shall be published in the same manner as appointments made by the Local Government.

Annulment of appointments.

The Local Government may, for good and sufficient reason, annul any appointment made under this section.

District Courts, Subordinate Judges, and District Munsifs.

8. The present Zila Courts, Principal Sadr Amíns, and District Munsifs, shall be respectively the first "District Courts," "Subordinate Judges," and "District Munsifs" under this Act.

Seal of Court.

9. Every Court under this Act shall use a seal of such form and dimensions as are, for the time being, prescribed by the Local Government.

PART III.

JURISDICTION.

Local limits of jurisdiction of District Court or Subordinate Judge.

10. The Local Government shall fix, and may from time to time vary, the local limits of the jurisdiction of any District Judge or Subordinate Judge under this Act:

Local limits of jurisdiction of each of several Subordinate Judges.

Provided that, where more than one Subordinate Judge is appointed to any district, the District Judge may assign to each such Subordinate Judge the local limits of his particular jurisdiction within such district.

The present local limits of the jurisdiction of every Civil Court (other than the High Court) shall be deemed to have been fixed under this Act.

Local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

11. The High Court shall fix, and may from time to time modify, the local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

Jurisdiction of District Judge or Subordinate Judge in original suits.

12. The jurisdiction of a District Judge or a Subordinate Judge extends, subject to the rules contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, to all original suits and proceedings of a civil nature.

Jurisdiction of District Munsif.

The jurisdiction of a District Munsif extends to all like suits and proceedings, not otherwise exempted from his cognizance, of which the amount or value of the subject-matter does not exceed two thousand five hundred rupees.

Appeals from decrees of District Courts.

13. Regular or special appeals, or appeals under Madras Regulation XI of 1832, section nine, shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie from the decrees and orders of a District Court to the High Court.

Appellate jurisdiction of District Court.

Appeals from the decrees and orders of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie to the District Court, except when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds rupees five thousand, in which case the appeal shall lie to the High Court:

Appellate jurisdiction of Subordinate Judge.

Provided that, whenever a Subordinate Judge's Court is established in any District at a place remote from the station of the District Court, the High Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that appeals from the decrees or orders of District Munsifs within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Subordinate Judge be preferred in the Court of the latter:

Disposal of appeal by District Judge.

Provided also, that the District Judge may remove to his own Court, from time to time, appeals so preferred, and dispose of them himself, or may, subject to the orders of the High Court, refer any appeals from the decrees and orders of District Munsifs, preferred in the District Court, to any Subordinate Judge within the District.

Valuation of suits for immovable property.

14. When the subject-matter of any suit or proceeding is land, a house or a garden, its value shall, for the purposes of the jurisdiction conferred by this Act, be fixed in manner provided by the Court Fees' Act, 1870, section seven, clause v.

Power to require witness or party to make oath or affirmation.

15. Every Court under this Act may require a witness or party to any suit or other proceeding pending in such Court to make such oath or affirmation as is prescribed by the law for the time being in force.

Law administered by Courts to Natives.

16. Where, in any suit or proceeding, it is necessary for any Court under this Act to decide any question regarding succession, inheritance, marriage or caste, or any religious usage or institution,

(a.) the Muhammadan law in cases where the parties are Muhammadans, and the Hindú law in cases where the parties are Hindús, or

(b.) any custom (if such there be) having the force of law and governing the parties or property concerned, shall form the rule of decision, unless such law or custom has, by legislative enactment, been altered or abolished.

(c.) In cases where no specific rule exists, the Court shall act according to justice, equity and good conscience.

Judges not to try suits in which they are interested;

17. No District Judge, Subordinate Judge or District Munsif, shall try any suit to or in which he is a party or personally interested, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with, or arising out of, such suit.

nor to try appeals from decrees passed by them in other capacities.

No District Judge or Subordinate Judge, shall try any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself in another capacity.

Mode of disposing of such suits and appeals.

When any such suit, proceeding or appeal comes before any such officer, he shall report the circumstances to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate.

The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, section six.

Nothing in the last preceding clause of this section shall be deemed to affect the extraordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court.

PART IV.

MISCONDUCT OF JUDGES.

Suspension of Judge by Local Government.

18. Any District Judge, Subordinate Judge, or District Munsif may, for any misconduct, be suspended or removed by the Local Government.

Suspension of Subordinate Judge by High Court.

19. The High Court may, whenever it sees urgent necessity for so doing, suspend a Subordinate Judge pending the orders of the Local Government.

The High Court shall immediately report the circumstances of such suspension, and the Local Government shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

Suspension of District Munsif by High Court. Commission of Inquiry.

20. The High Court may suspend any District Munsif who is alleged to have misconducted himself, or may appoint a commission for enquiring into his alleged misconduct.

Exercise by High Court of powers conferred on Government by Act XXXVII of 1850.

The provisions of Act No. XXXVII of 1850 (for regulating enquiries into the behaviour of public servants) shall apply to enquiries under this section, the powers conferred by that Act on the Government being exercised by the High Court.

On receiving the report of the result of any such enquiry, the High Court may, if it think fit, remove the Munsif from office, or suspend him, or reduce him to a lower grade.

Suspension of District Munsif by District Judge.

21. The District Judge may suspend from office, whenever he sees urgent necessity for so doing, any District Munsif under his control.

Report to High Court.

Whenever a District Judge exercises the power conferred by this section, he shall forthwith send to the High Court a full report of the circumstances of the case, together with the evidence, if any, and the High Court shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

PART V.

MINISTERIAL OFFICERS.

Appointment, suspension or removal of Ministerial Officers of District Courts.

22. The Ministerial Officers of the District Courts shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed, by the Judges of such Courts, whose orders in such matters shall be final.

Appointment, &c., of Ministerial Officers of Subordinate Courts.

23. The Ministerial Officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed from office, by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, respectively, subject to the approval or confirmation of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction such Courts are situate.

Rules regulating such appointments.

24. Every appointment under this Part shall be made subject to such rules as the Local Government from time to time prescribes on this behalf.

Duties of Ministerial Officers.

Every person appointed under this Part shall perform such duties as may from time to time be imposed upon him by the presiding officer of the Court to which he belongs.

Present Ministerial Officers.

The present Ministerial Officers of the Courts under this Act shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Part.

PART VI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Temporary discharge of duties of District Judge.

25. In the event of the death of the District Judge, or of his being incapacitated by illness or otherwise for the performance of his duties, or of his absence from the station in which his Court is held,

the senior Subordinate Judge of the District shall, without interruption to his ordinary duties, assume charge of the District Judge's office, and shall discharge such of the current duties thereof as are connected with the filing of suits and appeals, the execution of processes and the like, and shall continue in charge of the office until the same is resumed or assumed by an officer duly appointed thereto.

District Judge may nominate to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

26. The District Judge, on the occurrence within his district of any vacancy in the office of District Munsif, may, pending the orders of the High Court thereon, appoint such person as he thinks fit to act in such office;

and he shall at once report to the High Court the occurrence of every such vacancy and such appointment.

District Judge to control Civil Courts of District.

27. Subject to the other provisions of this Act and to the rules for the time being in force and prescribed by the High Court in this behalf, the general control over all the Civil Courts under this Act in any District is vested in the District Judge.

Investiture of Subordinate Judge with Small Cause jurisdiction.

28. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest, within such local limits as it shall from time to time appoint, any Subordinate Judge with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the amount of rupees five hundred, and any District Munsif with the same jurisdiction up to the amount of rupees fifty, and may, by like notification, whenever it thinks fit, withdraw such jurisdiction from the Subordinate Judge or Munsif so invested.

Investiture of District Munsif with similar jurisdiction.

Power to invest Small Cause Court Judge with powers of Subordinate Judge.

29. Section fifty-one of Act No. XI of 1865 shall be read as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words "Subordinate Judge" were substituted.

Amendment of Madras Act I of 1868.

Sections one, eight, nine, ten and twelve of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of civil and criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) shall be read as if, for the words 'Civil' and 'Zillah', used therein with reference to a Civil or Zillah Judge or Court, the word 'District' was substituted, and as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words 'Subordinate Judge' were substituted.

But save as provided in this section nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the said Madras Act.

Vacation.

30. The High Court may permit the Civil Courts under its control to adjourn from time to time for periods not exceeding in the aggregate two months in each year.

An Act to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in towns in the Panjáb, and for police, conservancy, local improvements, and education in such towns, and for the levying of rates and taxes therein; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Acts.

2. Act No. XV of 1867 (to make better provision for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes) and Act No. II of 1872 (to revive and continue the operation of Act XV of 1867) are repealed; and Act No. XXVI of 1850 (to enable improvements to be made in towns), is repealed so far as it affects the Panjáb.

Existing extensions and appointments.

But all extensions and appointments made, and all limits defined, under the said Act No. XV of 1867, shall be deemed to be, respectively, made and defined under this Act. And an extension of any particular provision of Act No. XV of 1867 shall be deemed to be an extension of the corresponding provision of this Act.

Existing assessments and bye-laws.

And all assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations of any kind, relating to matters provided for by this Act, which may heretofore have been made or approved by the Local Government, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act.

Former proceedings.

And all proceedings taken under any such assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations shall be deemed to be as valid as if they had been taken under this Act.

"Committee" defined.

3. In this Act "Committee" means a Municipal Committee under this Act.

Power to extend Act to towns.

4. The Local Government may, by notification published in the Panjáb Gazette, declare its intention to extend this Act, or any of its provisions, to any town in the said territories.

Objection to such extension.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such extension may, within six weeks from the said publication, send his objection in writing to the Secretary to the Local Government, and the Local Government shall take such objection into consideration.

Procedure thereon.

When six weeks from the said publication have expired, the Local Government, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been so sent in) if, in its opinion, they are insufficient, may, by like notification, effect the proposed extension.

Power to define limits of towns to which Act extends.

5. For the purposes of this Act, the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the Panjáb Gazette, declare what shall be deemed to be a town for the purposes of this Act, and define the limits of any town to which this Act has been extended.

II.—Appointment, Duties and Powers of Committees.

Appointment of Committee.

6. In every town to which this Act is extended, the Local Government shall appoint, or cause to be appointed, a Committee consisting of not less than five members.

Such members may be appointed as the Local Government from time to time directs, either ex-officio, or by nomination, or by election, or some by one and some by any other of such methods:

Provided that (except with the approval of the Governor General in Council) not less than two-fifths of the members of a Committee shall be persons other than salaried officers of Government.

The Local Government may—

(a) from time to time remove any of the members of any Committee, add to their number, and fill up vacancies occurring among them;

(b) determine the time and manner of the election of those members whom it may direct to be appointed by election, and the persons by whom they shall be elected, and generally make such rules as it thinks fit for regulating such election;

(c) appoint the President and Vice-President, or either of them, of any Committee, or authorise any Committee to appoint, by election from their number, such President, or Vice-President, or both.

No appointment under this section, other than the appointment by election of a Vice-President, shall be valid unless and until it is notified in the Panjáb Gazette.

Power to levy rates or make assessments.

7. Subject to any general rules or special orders which the Governor General in Council may from time to time make in this behalf, every Committee intending to impose taxes for the purposes of this Act shall, from time to time, give public notice of such intention, and shall in such notice define the persons or property within the town to be taxed for the purposes of this Act, and the amount or rate of the taxes to be imposed hereunder.

Objection to rates.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such notice may, within a fortnight from the date of the said notice, send his objection in writing to the President of the Committee, and the Committee shall take such objection into consideration and report their opinion thereon to the Local Government.

Procedure thereon.

When a fortnight from the date of the said notice has expired, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been sent in) if, in the opinion of the Committee, they are insufficient, the Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to be notified in the Panjáb Gazette, define the persons or property and the amount or rate of the taxes aforesaid, and may then impose such taxes accordingly.

Power to make rules for collection and application of rates.

8. The Local Government may from time to time make rules—

as to the persons by whom, and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed, and for the collection of such taxes;

and for the safety and due application of them when collected;

and for the rendering and publishing of such estimates and accounts relating to the expenditure of the Municipal Funds, in such form as it may think fit.

No tax shall be collected under this Act, until the assessment thereof has been confirmed by the persons and in manner for the time being prescribed by such rules.

Recovery of rates.

9. Rates and arrears of rates imposed under this Act may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

Municipal Fund.

10. All sums received by the Committee of any town to which this Act extends, and all fines levied under this Act, shall constitute a fund, which shall be called the Municipal Fund of such town, and shall, together with all property which may become vested in such Committee, be under their control, and shall be applied by them as trustees for the purposes of this Act.

Duties and powers of Committees.

11. Every Committee, so far as the Municipal Fund at their disposal permits, shall, after providing out of such Fund for a police establishment in manner hereinafter mentioned, keep the public streets, roads, drains, tanks and water-courses of the town for which they are appointed clean and repaired;

and, generally, may do all acts and things necessary for the construction, repair and maintenance of local public works of general utility;

and may also make provision, by the establishment of new schools or the aiding of already existing schools or otherwise, for the promotion of education;

and may also make provision for promoting the public health, safety, comfort and convenience.

Provision for police.

12. Every Committee shall set apart out of the Municipal Fund such sum as the Local Government from time to time requires for the maintenance of the police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed.

Power to make rules as to business and officers.

13. Every Committee may make rules for regulating—the time and place of their meeting;

the conduct of their business;

the division of duties among the members of the Committee;

the duties, salaries, appointment, suspension and removal of the officers and servants of the Committee;

and other similar matters.

Power to make bye-laws.

14. Any Committee may make bye-laws—

(a) for defining, prohibiting and abating nuisances which are not public or common nuisances under the Indian Penal Code, or under Act No. V of 1861 (for the regulation of Police):

(b) for defining the cases, manner and times in and at which the officers of the Committee may enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances:

(c) for securing a proper registration of births and deaths;

(d) and for carrying out all or any of the purposes of this Act.

The Committee may, from time to time, repeal, alter or add to any bye-laws made under this section.

Bye-laws to be confirmed and published.

15. No bye-law, and no alteration or repeal of or addition to a bye-law, shall have effect until it has been confirmed by the Local Government.

All bye-laws made under this Act, and all rules made under section thirteen, and all alterations and repeals of and additions to such bye-laws and rules shall, before coming into force, be published for such length of time, and in such manner, as the Local Government from time to time directs.

Power to enter on private property.

16. The officers of the Committee shall have power to enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances when the Committee shall, under section fourteen, clause (b), have made bye-laws regulating the exercise of such power.

Power to suspend or limit powers of Committees.

17. The Local Government may, by order, suspend or limit all or any of the powers of any Committee, and may also cancel any of their proceedings, rules or bye-laws, and remit or reduce any tax which they have imposed.

III.—Suits by and against Committees.

Suits by and against Committees.

18. Every Committee shall sue and be sued in the name of their President.

Contracts of Committees.

Every contract made on behalf of any Committee in respect of any sum or property exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value, shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the President or Vice-President (if any) and at least two other members of the Committee.

No contract, unless so executed, shall be binding on the Committee on whose behalf it is made.

Liability of members of Committees.

No member of a Committee shall be personally liable for any contract made or expense incurred by or on behalf of the Committee; but the funds from time to time in the hands of the Committee shall be liable for, and chargeable with, contracts duly made as aforesaid.

Every member of a Committee shall be liable for any misapplication of money entrusted to the Committee, to which he has been a party, or which happens through, or is facilitated by, his neglect of his duty;

and he shall be liable to be sued for the same in such Court as the Local Government directs as for money due to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Bar of suit in absence of one month's notice of cause of suit.

19. No suit shall be brought against a Committee or any of their officers, or any person acting under their direction, for anything done, or purporting to be done, under this Act, until the expiration of one month next after notice in writing has been delivered or left at the office of the Committee, or at the place of abode of such person, stating the cause of suit and the name and place of abode of the intended plaintiff.

Unless such notice be proved, the Court shall find for the defendant.

Every such suit shall be commenced within three months next after the accrual of the right to sue, and not afterwards.

And if any person to whom any such notice of suit is given shall, before suit brought, tender sufficient amends to the plaintiff, such plaintiff shall not recover.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty on member or servant of Committee being interested in contracts made with Committee.

20. No member or servant of a Committee shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract made with the Committee, and if any such person be so interested, he shall thereby become incapable of continuing in office or in employment as such member or servant, and shall be liable to a fine of five hundred rupees:

Provided that no person, by being a shareholder in, or member of, any incorporated or registered Company, shall be disqualified from acting as a member or servant of a Committee by reason of any contract entered into between such Company and the Committee.

Nevertheless it shall not be lawful for such shareholder or member to act as a member of the Committee in any matter relating to any contract entered into between the Committee and such Company.

Penalty for infringement of bye-laws or non-payment of fines.

21. Whoever infringes any bye-law made and confirmed as directed in this Act, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, and, in the case of a continuing infringement, to a fine not exceeding five rupees for every day after notice from the Committee of such infringement.

In default of payment of any fine imposed under this section, the defaulter shall be liable to simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding eight days.

Prosecutions.

22. Prosecutions under this Act for infringements of bye-laws may be instituted before any Magistrate by the Committee, or by any person authorised by the Committee in this behalf.

Recovery of fines.

23. Fines imposed under this Act may be recovered in manner provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 19.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 1 OF 1873.

A Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb.

Preamble.

WHEREAS the law relating to appeals and reviews of judgment in the Courts established in the Panjáb has been amended by an Act of which the second section provides that it shall continue in force to the thirtieth day of April 1873: And whereas it is expedient to repeal that Act and to re-enact it without prescribing any period for its continuance; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Appeals' Act, 1873:"

Extent.

It extends to the territories for the time being under the government of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force at once.

Repeal of Act VII of 1868.

2. Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is repealed.

Appeals when to lie.

3. An appeal shall lie from the decrees of the Courts of original and appellate jurisdiction to the Courts authorized under Act No. XIX of 1865 (The Panjáb Courts' Act) and Act No. IV of 1866 (The Panjáb Chief Court Act) to hear appeals, except where such decrees are by law declared final.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply to appeals.

4. All appeals falling within the jurisdiction of the Courts established in conformity with the said Acts shall, save as in the said Acts and in this Act is otherwise provided, be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, with the modifications subject to which it was extended to the Panjáb, by notification of Government, dated the twelfth day of September 1866.

Second regular appeals.

5. If the decision of a Deputy Commissioner or of a Commissioner passed in regular appeal reverse or modify the decision of the Court of original jurisdiction on a point material to the merits of the case, the Commissioner, where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Deputy Commissioner, and the Chief Court where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Commissioner, may receive a second appeal, if, on a perusal of the grounds of appeal and of copies of the judgments of the Courts below, a further consideration of the case appear to the Commissioner or the Chief Court (as the case may be) requisite for the ends of justice.

Time for presenting appeal.

6. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, accompanied by copies of the judgments of the lower Courts, shall be presented in the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shows sufficient cause to the satisfaction of such Court for not having presented the memorandum of appeal within such period, that is to say, within sixty days if the appeal lie to the Court of a Deputy Commissioner or Commissioner, and within ninety days if the appeal lie to the Chief Court.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the judgment and decree appealed against was pronounced and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment and decree from which the appeal is made.

Confirmation of decision of lower Court.

7. When a memorandum of appeal, or an application for the admission of a special appeal, has been registered, the Appellate Court may, if it sees fit, after fixing a time for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and hearing him accordingly if he appears at such time, confirm the decision of the lower Court, without sending intimation of the appeal to such Court and without issuing notice to the respondent.

Chief Court may remove appeals.

8. The Chief Court of the Panjáb may, whenever it thinks proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect or for purposes of justice, remove and try any appeal falling within the jurisdiction of any Court subject to its superintendence.

Review of judgment.

9. Any person considering himself aggrieved by a decree of a Court of original jurisdiction from which no appeal shall have been preferred to a superior Court, or by a decree of a District or Divisional Court from which no regular or special appeal shall have been admitted by the Chief Court, or by a decree of the Chief Court from which either no appeal may have been preferred to Her Majesty in Council, or, an appeal having been preferred, no proceedings in the suit have been transmitted to Her Majesty in Council;

and who, from the discovery of new matter or evidence which was not within his knowledge, or could not have been adduced by him, at the time when such decree was passed, or from any other good or sufficient reason, may be desirous of obtaining a review of the judgment passed against him,

may apply for a review of judgment by the Civil Court which passed the decree, or by any Court to which the business of the former Court has been transferred.

Judgments of Civil Courts subject to revision only as provided by Act.

10. Except as hereinbefore provided, the judgments of the Civil Courts established in conformity with the said Acts and with Act No. III of 1868 (to authorize the Local Government of the Panjáb to invest any person with the powers of an Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár) shall not be subject to revision.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is a temporary measure, and (as it stands) will expire on the 30th April 1873. The object of this Bill (which has been prepared at the request of the Local Government) is to prolong the provisions of the Act indefinitely.

It has been thought better to repeal and re-enact the substance of Act VII of 1868 than to increase the number of laws in the Statute-book. The opportunity has been taken to make two verbal amendments (suggested by the learned Judges of the Chief Court of the Panjáb) in sections 3 and 4 of the present Act.

[Second Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 2 OF 1873.

A Bill for the levy of Port-dues in the Ports of British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient from time to time to bring Ports in British Burma under the provisions of Act No. XXII of 1855 (for the regulation of Ports and Port-dues) and to make regulations for the levy of dues in such Ports without the necessity of passing a new Act for each occasion; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Port-dues Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends only to the ports of British Burma which shall have been declared subject to the said Act No. XXII of 1855 :

To be read with Act XXII of 1855.

It shall be read with and taken as part of the same Act;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Power to declare maximum amount of port-dues leviable in Burma.

2. In every case in which the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, has declared or hereafter declares any port in British Burma to be subject to the said Act, he may, with the like sanction, by the same or any subsequent declaration, and notwithstanding anything contained in section forty-one of the said Act, further declare—

(a.) the maximum amount of dues to be levied in such port,

(b.) the conditions and modifications under which such dues shall be levied, and may also from time to time, with the like sanction, vary such maximum amount, conditions and modifications.

What vessels chargeable.

Limitation of rate.

3. Provided that the dues so authorized shall be charged only on sea-going vessels of the burden of ten tons and upwards, and shall not exceed the rate of four annas for every ton of burden.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to regulate the levy of Port-dues in Mergui, and any other port of British Burma to which Act XXII of 1855 may be extended. Legislation in this direction has already taken place respecting Rangoon, Maulmain, Bassein, Kyuk Phyu and Akyâb. The Bill is so framed as to render it henceforward unnecessary to pass a special Act for every port.

The maximum fee leviable will be four annas per ton.

The Bill has been prepared at the desire of the Local Government and the Marine Department of the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

TRIAL OF MR. GREIG'S MACHINE FOR PREPARING RHEA FIBRE.

No. 782, dated 4th October 1872.

From—LIEUTENANT-COLONEL H. HYDE, R. E., Master of Her Majesty's Mint, Calcutta.

To—The Secretary to the Govt. of India, DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

IN obedience to the instructions contained in your letter No. 150 of the 24th July 1872, I proceeded to Saharunpore to examine certain machines for the preparation of rhea fibre, and I have the honor to submit herewith a report on the same.

Machines present.

2. One machine only was presented to compete for the prize offered by Government in the advertisement of 26th January 1871.

3. There was, on the ground, a machine brought over from America, but it was the property of Government and did not compete.

Rhea crop.

4. The whole of the first crop of rhea plant had been cut early in the season, and the crop now ready was the second. It was large and sufficient to have supplied the wants of many competitors. The plant was stated by the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens to be of an average full growth, and as near as possible as would be found in an estate producing fibre for the market; the stems being, as far as the present knowledge of the subject enables a judgment to be formed, in the state when they would produce the best fibre. There were, of course, small patches of the plant both somewhat more forward and somewhat more backward than the mass; but the crop seemed on inspection to be very uniform.

5. The cutting the stems began on the 7th August and ceased only on the 20th, a period of fourteen days, which, at this season of the year (August), of necessity rendered so quick growing a plant uniformly somewhat older at the end of the trial than it was at the commencement.

Competing machine.

6. The machine that was presented to compete for the prize was the property of, and designed by, Mr. John Greig, Junior. It had been made in the factory of Mr. Greig, Senior, of Edinburgh, and was patented in England in 1870. The Patent Office specification No. 1690 of 11th June 1870 is annexed, and added to the specification is a statement of the alterations and additions subsequently made.

Appendices 1 and 2.

7. The machine is constructed for working up green stems, and its action is described in the specification. The speeds of the several parts are—

First motion, number of revolutions			a =	65	per minute.
Fluted roller	"	"	$\frac{1}{6}$ a =	$10\frac{5}{8}$	"
Scraping cylinders	"	"	8 a =	520	"
Blower	"	"	8 a =	520	"

The travelling webs, both feed and delivery, have a speed of one foot for three revolutions of a, equal to 21⅔rd feet per minute.

8. The weight of the machine is 1½ tons; the weight of the heaviest part, viz., the fly wheel, is 4 cwt.

9. The Patent Office specification leads the reader to understand that the machine patented was intended to turn out fibre clean and fit for sale in one operation. The machine does not succeed in effecting this, and there is, attached to the machine, but not included in the patent, a scutcher (of the ordinary construction used in flax mills) of 5 feet diameter, having five blades and making 260 revolutions per minute.

10. All the fibre, after having passed through the patented machine, has also to be cleaned by the scutcher to remove the small portions of the stalk and green bark not taken off by the first process and found adhering to the fibre after it has left the first machine. The fibre is turned out very wet from the machine, and it is necessary to dry it in a free current of air. If the fibre is scutched wet, a second scutching becomes necessary when it is dried.

Arrangements.

11. The machine was fixed in the new masonry stables belonging to the stud. It was worked from a shaft which was driven by a portable engine (two cylinders 8 inch diameter and 12 inch stroke) belonging to Government.

12. A portion of the rhea crop was pointed out to me by the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens as being a fair average of the whole plantation, and in the best condition for cutting. Thereon I requested that the cutting should be confined to this portion, and that it should be cut regularly through as requisitions for stems were made.

13. The following is the diary of the trial :—

Trial.

6th August.—The machine was started to enable an estimate to be formed of its capabilities, to exhibit its working, and to admit of its revolving parts being examined in motion. A small quantity of rhea stems was worked up to enable the fibre to be traced and followed through the machine.

14. The exhibitor was then requested to prepare for the trial of the machine on the head of out-turn, and to be ready to start at 6-30 A. M. on the following morning.*

The exhibitor himself and four natives working.

* The stems of the rhea plant were cut and sent on to the ground by the Superintendent, Botanical Gardens. They were stacked close to the machine. Water-carriers were supplied to give water to the machine, as the well was at some distance from the stable. Sweepers were provided for cleaning away all refuse.

The proper complement of men and sufficient fuel were provided for the engine, the speed of which was regulated, as the exhibitor gave instructions.

16. The break down was caused by the fracture of the flange of the left plummer block that carried the lower scraping cylinder. This put the wheel on the cylinder spindle out of gear, and caused the stripping of a total of twelve teeth, out of the several wheels working in connection with the one displaced. In some places three teeth, and in others only one, were stripped; two spindles were bent. The plummer block had evidently been cast from an old pattern; it was weak in the flange by reason of a bolt hole. There was also a bad flaw in the iron at the bolt hole where it parted. The trial was of necessity stopped, and the exhibitor set to work to repair the machine. The wet fibre produced was set out to dry.

Break down.

17. The exhibitor having inserted new teeth into all the broken wheels, and, on the 14th August, the repairs being sufficiently advanced to admit of the scutcher being used, the trial was resumed, and the following is the diary :—

14th August.—The fibre turned out of the machine on the 7th August was scutched by the exhibitor himself, which operation completed, and the fibre declared finished, it was weighed and found to produce—

Trial continued.

Out-turn dry.

Good fibre	...	...	...	45¾ lbs.
Somewhat shorter	...	...	...	3 „
Waste	...	...	...	10½ „

I admitted 48¾ lbs. in 4¼ hours, giving, say, 11¼ lbs. per hour.

The large amount, 10½lbs. of waste, is due to the bad form of the scutcher which tears away the fibre. If the scutcher had not torn the fibre, the out-turn would most probably have been 13 lbs. or more per hour.

Waste.

Production of sample.

15th August.—The machine having been repaired throughout, the exhibitor was requested to produce 2 cwt. of fibre for sample for valuation.

The supply—in amount about two tons—of rhea stems that remained on the ground when the machine broke down had dried somewhat. The exhibitor made an objection to these stems. I admitted the objection. Fresh stems were supplied and the machine was started. Number of hours' work—5.

16th August.—The machine was worked from 6-28 A. M. to 5-55 P. M., with an interval of one and a half hour for breakfast. Number of hours' work—say 10.

17th August.—The machine was worked from 6-30 A. M. to 6-30 P. M., with an interval of one and a half hour for breakfast. Number of hours' work—10½. Some fibre remained unscutched at the close of this day's work, the exhibitor who scutched all the fibre with his own hands being unable to complete the task. This fibre was left inside the building till Monday, when it was found spoiled, the mucilage having become thickened and glutinous, binding all the fibrous shreds very strongly together.*

Spoiled fibre.

18th August.—Sunday.

19th August.—The machine was worked from 6-30 A. M. to 6-30 P. M., with one and a half hour's interval for breakfast; a small quantity of fibre was (as on Saturday, 17th), left unscutched inside the house for the night. In the morning it was found spoiled as before. Number of hours' work—10½.

Spoiled fibre.

20th August.—The machine was worked from 6-30 A. M. till 7-30 A. M., one hour's work, by which time sufficient fibre had been turned out to produce 2 cwt. dry.

* If the fibre of these two days had been placed outside, as was suggested, in the free circulating air, it would have remained good.

During this trial, the exhibitor, Mr. Greig, scutched with his own hands all the fibre as it came from the machine. Two men were employed feeding stems, one collecting fibre. In addition, the Superintendent supplied the following labour :—

Labour supplied by Superintendent, Botanical Gardens.

Water-carriers to supply water to the machine and engine.
Two Sweepers to clear up and carry away refuse.
Two or more men to sort stems.

After 7-30 A. M. the machine was stopped, and the scutcher was driven alone. The exhibitor, Mr. Greig, commenced the final scutching out of the dry fibre of the previous four days' work. The work was continued till 6-30, with an interval of one and a half hours for breakfast. Number of hours' work on scutching—9 hours.

Scutchers.

21*st August*.—The scutcher was worked from 6-30 A. M. till 6-30 P. M., with an interval of one and a half hour for breakfast. Number of hours' work on scutching—10½.

22*nd August*.—The scutcher was worked from 6-30 A. M. till 4 P. M., with an interval of one and a half hour for breakfast. At this hour—4 P. M.—all the fibre was finished. Number of hours' work on scutching—8 hours.

Additional working on scutching.

18. The quantity of rhea stems sent to the ground subsequent to the 14th was 3½ tons, and was the produce of 1½ acres of land. Of this 3½ tons, 480 lbs. of short stems were left unworked as refuse, reducing the worked-up stems to 7,360 lbs.=3·28 tons. The fibre, when clean and dry, weighed 207 lbs., the result being 1½ acres of land produced 7,360 lbs. or 3·28 tons of stalk fit to be worked up by the exhibitor's machine, which machine turned out from that amount 207 lbs of fibre, which gives—

Out-turn per acre and ton.

About	63 lbs. per ton.
Or	138 „ „ acre.

19. On the 17th the exhibitor suddenly desired to have a special trial of out-turn for quantity for one hour, viz., the hour he was then commencing, as he was not satisfied with the trial of the 7th. I permitted him to keep the quantity turned out in the selected hour separate, solely for his own satisfaction. It produced 15½ lbs. of dry fibre, but I in no way bound myself by it, because the trial of the 7th was a much more extended trial, viz., over five hours' duration, and the stems were of average growth and size. I therefore informed the exhibitor that though I granted his request, the hour's result would not supersede the trial of five and a half hours on the 7th.*

Exhibitor selected an hour for work.

20. This closed the trial. I was present at the machine during all the hours it was at work, and saw all the fibre turned out. Two parcels of one cwt. each were separated, and after having been dried in a room in the museum of the Botanical Gardens, were, on 24th August, packed in two boxes lined with tin. One was deposited with the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens on the 24th August, and the other delivered into the Office of the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Agriculture, Revenue and Commerce, on the 4th September 1872.

Trial closed.

* See extract from letter, Appendix 3, showing time of most approved stems to hand was selected.

21. The machine, as a piece of mechanism, is good; it is well made, and well proportioned, the relative strength of the various parts having been well considered. It is calculated to wear well, and deserves commendation as far as being a good substantial piece of work.

Quality of the machine.

22. The break down, of which I have stated the cause, was entirely local, and cannot be considered as affecting the general quality of the workmanship.

Break down local.

23. The machine, however, as must always be the case with machines of this kind, i. e., contrived to do a work of which there is little or no experience available and without means of obtaining the natural material to work upon, is far from matured. Few, if any, of such machines are ever constructed at once able to do the work for which they are intended, most are generally perfected by degrees through numerous partial failures. Experience gained in the process of working alone enabling many defects to be seen and remedied, and a perfect machine to be produced, and such appears to be the case with this mill; for, independent of whether it is or is not the best description of machine for preparing the fibre, it is, on the one hand, in many points very deficient in the work the exhibitor sets it forward to perform, while, on the other hand, it is certain that it can be improved in much that is faulty.

Machine imperfect.

24. The exhibitor states that he designed the machine for a smaller stalk than that supplied: hence the pins fastening the fluted rollers to the spindles being too weak, gave, and the spindles were found to spring: for this reason, and on account of the temporary nature of the repairs, he was, during the latter portion of the trial, obliged to limit the machine in speed and quantity of stem fed. It will be easy to insert a larger spindle, and all the other parts being sufficiently strong, the machine will then work up any size of stem.

Machine designed for smaller stems.

25. The trials showed that a much larger supply, than was provided for, of water is desirable. The tank on the top of the machine has a capacity of 33¼ gallons, and it was obviously desirable to fill it every ¾ths of an hour, giving 41 gallons per hour. As a fact, however, during the trial, it was not quite so often filled, the supply was irregular; hence at times the fibre wound round the rollers and showed that 41 gallons per hour was too little, for the more freely the water is supplied, the better the machine works. This, of course, is a matter quite within control.

Supply of water.

26. The brushes had been removed, the fixed scrapers all gave way, or were removed, as being too slight, or of little use. All have to be altered; these are, however, adjuncts, and do not affect the main machine.

Brushes and scrapers.

27. In working, the machine breaks up the stems well without injuring the fibre, and the action of the fluted rollers seems good. On the other hand, the action of the cylindrical scrapers is deficient; when there is a plentiful supply of water, the fibre is to a certain extent cleaned, but always irregularly and never thoroughly freed from bark and stem.

Action of machine.

28. It is necessary here to explain the construction and working of the scraping cylinders, which is as follows:—On the cylinders are inserted radial blades running the whole length of the cylinder and in the line of its axis. They run in pairs, and in revolving, work into one another after the manner of ordinary cog wheels, the blades in these cylinders taking the place of the cogs in the gearing. Each cylinder is driven, and the steel blade of the one cylinder alternately travels through the flute between the blades of the other cylinder. The inventor explained that the curves of these flutes are intended to be so accurately struck, and the blades and cylinders so accurately adjusted, that each blade shall clear the opposite flute by the bare thickness of the fibre, and that the action is similar to the action of cleaning the fibre on a board with a knife that each flute taking the place of the board affords an unyielding support to the fibre during the period that the opposite blade scrapes its surface. Now, I have carefully measured a number of ribbons of fibre cleaned by the hand, and I find the average thickness to be—

1.	Measurement near root ...	... ...	·0046 of an inch.
2.	" middle	... ...	·004 "
3.	" upper end	... ...	·0025 "

If then the scrapers act as the inventor states they do, the curves of the flutes must be struck, and the cylinders geared and set to the $\frac{5}{1000}$ of an inch. It is needless to say that in such a machine this is not practicable, and that the scrapers cannot act in the manner described.

29. In the machine exhibited, the flutes are alternately wood and iron, the iron flutes being part of the cylinder, the wooden flutes removable for the purpose of inserting and holding in the knives. These flutes are wedge shape, having the apex towards the centre, while the knives, which are also wedge-shaped, have their base towards the centre. Hence in forcing home the wooden flutes with screws, the knives are retained in their place, but the construction must insure a far greater variation than $\frac{1}{200}$ in the surface of the wooden flutes. The upper scrapers then act simply on the fibre in a certain state of tension, and are not very efficient in their action. When the ends fall, there seems to be an inefficient action also in the blower, for the fibre is very often doubled up, and in that state delivered on to the travelling web, and only a few of the ends even reach the lower scraper. This will easily be understood, for if the blower is efficient in driving the first falling end of the fibre between the delivering rolls, it must, of necessity, interfere with the direct fall of the last end into the lower scrapers.

Imperfect action.

30. The separation of the broken wood stem and green bark from the fibre is imperfectly effected. The main portions of the wood and some fragments of the bark fall out at the bottom of the machine, but a very noticeable portion of the wood and an injurious amount of the green bark and refuse pass out with the fibre. The operation is imperfect in every way, and much of the green bark remains unremoved from the fibre. The amount of this, however, though always considerable, is perceptibly affected by the supply of water under which the machine is worked. Much of the detached bark passes over the upper roller, from whence it either falls among the fibre on the travelling web or has to be removed by hand—an awkward arrangement.

Conditions adverse to good work.

Machine not matured.

31. The working of the machine is irregular and uncertain, but in the trial there were so many affecting conditions, as hereafter noted, which could not be removed, that it is difficult to say if this fault can or cannot be entirely obviated. As far as I can judge, the machine is in its infancy, and the result of its working on this trial is certainly much below what it could even now be made to do both in quality and quantity, if properly worked and superintended, at the same time it did not do its work well or clean.

Reasons for bad work.

32. The reasons for the inferior and irregular work and quality of the fibre turned out are—

First.—The exhibitor had not ready an organized complete crew drilled to work the machine: he stated that his best men were sick and had left him, and that he was obliged to take any he could get. The result was that the machine was worked under great disadvantage throughout the entire trial.

Secondly.—The exhibitor had not any scutcher on the ground, the one man he had trained being sick. He therefore scutched the whole of the fibre with his own hands, and as the occupation, not only demanded the whole of his attention, but was also exceedingly laborious, he was entirely unable to superintend the working, or to look to the machine, for which superintendence there was the greater necessity on account of the raw hands employed.

Thirdly.—The exhibitor's arrangements for water-supply was absolutely nil. The tank placed on the top of the machine was some 8 feet from the ground, and had to be filled by hand (sometimes stopping the machine, sometimes not) from water brought by bheesties.

Fourthly.—The exhibitor had not made any arrangement for drying the fibre. To assist him, men were sent from the Botanical Gardens by the Superintendent, and lines of bamboo rails were put up for him as the trial proceeded, so that he might not be disturbed in his work or his attention taken from it. The drying and turning of the fibre on these rails was to a great extent similarly done for him.

Exhibitor solely responsible.

33. For all these difficulties the exhibitor was entirely and solely responsible; but seeing that the difficulties did exist, every legitimate assistance was given.

Reason for small out-turn.

34. In the first four and a quarter hours the machine turned out 11¼ lbs. per hour. This trial was very carefully carried out, and was fair in all conditions except those dependent on the exhibitor himself, viz., that he worked with too few men and with his own hands instead of with his intelligence in directing his men. If the exhibitor had provided a properly drilled crew, and had confined his exertions to directing in the place of working, the out-turn would have been much more.

In the exhibitor's own trial of one hour, he turned out 15½ lbs. of fibre, but the trial was too short, exceptional, and not admitted.

In the work of producing the 2 cwt. of fibre, 207 lbs. were turned out in 37 hours, which gives 5½ per hour. But this cannot be taken into account as to time, because the machine was obviously and of necessity, by reason of the repairs having only been temporarily made, and for other reasons before given, only worked at very partial power. It can, however, be taken into account under the head of quantity per ton and acre. This trial gave as before stated — while all available information gives the out-turn by hand to be 200 lbs. per ton.

63 lbs. per ton,
138 „ „ acre,

Loss from scutcher.

35. Some of the reasons for the deficiency of out-turn in this trial are the rejection of 480 lbs. of short stems, all of which could have been worked up; by rejecting this amount, the quantity of fibre produced was less, but an advantage was gained in quality. The machine, as before stated, was worked very imperfectly, and the waste of fibre was very large. Many hours' work was spoiled on the night of the 17th. There was in every case a great loss from the scutcher, the blades of which did not extend far enough in towards the centre, having been cut off short close to a ring put on to strengthen the arms that were too weak without it.

The fibre was caught in this and torn to shreds.* The scutcher is only an attempt to apply a machine found to answer to a certain extent with flax, which might also, if it were properly constructed, answer with rhea. But it was not properly constructed; on the contrary it was badly made, and a loss of fibre was the consequence.

36. Exhibitor's method of treating the fibre.—I have before pointed out that a very large quantity of water is required to be poured on the stems at the time of breaking them up; first, to keep the fibre free from the parts of the machine, secondly, to clean it, and it was palpable from first to last, that the more freely the water was supplied, the better the fibre turned out.

No settled system.

37. The exhibitor was not only labouring under the disadvantage of an undrilled set of workmen entertained for the day, but he did not, as far as I could see, appear to have worked on any settled system. Part of the fibre he scutched dry and part wet.† This he explained by stating, he had not time to scutch it all wet. There is, however, the fact, though he personally declares to give the wet fibre as it comes from the machine a preliminary scutching, that he did not carry out this practice

* This deficiency in this machine is well known, and many attempts have been made to provide a remedy; the extent of the evil, of course, depends much on the make of the scutcher.

† This wet scutching seems necessary to remove the green bark that remains on the fibre after it has left the machine, for if it is not so scutched, the bark dries on it.

throughout the trial, and whatever his own ideas may be, his action seemed to me to be very undecided, and he did not exhibit throughout the trial a definite and systematic process. On the contrary, his proceeding rather took the character of an anxious and sanguine inquirer, endeavouring to find the best method, of which there was still a large amount of uncertainty.

Irregular quality of fibre.

38. The other result of this kind of working was that the fibre turned out was of several different qualities, one portion differing very much in appearance from another. Some of it was spoiled and some of it injured, which might easily have been duly worked up by making proper arrangements.

Complaint by exhibitor.

39. After the 17th, the exhibitor complained that the stems are old* and knotty, and wanted to select portions in the plantation to be cut for him. I decided against this, because, first, the stems generally were not old and knotty, now and then a stalk with a small bud turned up, but generally the stems were good; and, secondly, what was necessary, was not a trial on stems selected from a large plantation, but a trial on a fair average cutting, and having seen that the area proposed by the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens was a fair average, I determined that without very good cause, all the stems for the trial should be cut fairly from one end to the other of this area, and the crop was so cut.

Fibre colored.

40. A portion of the fibre turned out of a brown color stained by the bark of older growth. This was not necessary, as some of the same lot of stems turned out of the ordinary tint, but it was entirely due to the irregular way in which the fibre was treated. When water was plentifully supplied, and the fibre worked and set out to dry quickly, the color was ordinary. When the water-supply was insufficient, and when there was delay in putting the fibre out to dry, it was tinged brown.

Uniformity of stems required.

41. I noticed that out of 3½ tons there were left 480 lbs. of short stems. The reason of this was, that the exhibitor stated his machine ought to be supplied during any given time with stems of uniform length that is either short or long, and not mixed short and long. Hence all the long stems were first worked off and the short stems from time to time rejected to accumulate. This was equivalent to a certain extent to giving selected stems, and was an advantage towards improving the fibre which could not be afforded in actual practice. But I admitted it, because it was evident that, on the whole, the sample turned out was in quality below what ought to have been and could have been, and for this reason I further permitted the exhibitor to withdraw from the total quantity turned out the inferior portion that was surplus over the 2 cwt. required as a sample.

Season against the trial.

Want of arrangements by exhibitor.

42. With the sole exception of the difficulties of drying the fibre in the rainy season (and even this difficulty could have been met by a little forethought and arrangement), all the difficulties in the way of turning out good fibre were of the exhibitor's creating, by his neglecting to make the obvious necessary arrangements and by his non-realization of the task he had to perform. Every possible assistance, even more than he was entitled to, was given him by the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens, because it was palpable that he did not meet the call upon him, and that he did not in any way obtain so good a result from his machine as it would certainly have given under proper management.

43. The engine consumed on an average 1,370 lbs. of good wood per diem throughout the trial. The power required to drive the machine was a little under 6-horse power indicated.

* All the plant was, as before noted, older on the 20th than on the 7th, and this was solely due to the extent to which the trial was delayed by the reason of the break down.

Estimate of the cost of working.

Appendix No. 4.

44. The original specification did not make any provision for a scutcher. One, however, was provided with the machine. During the progress of the trial, it became evident that even with the limited out-turn obtained, one scutcher was unequal to the work, and that to work the machine effectively several would be required. I therefore called on the exhibitor for an estimate of his complete machine and of the cost of working it. This I annex.

Scutchers.

It provides for one scutcher attached to the machine, and for four scutchers on a shaft independent from the machine.

Period of work.

45. The first question that arises is, for what portion of the year will the machines work, and for what portion will they stand idle? The plant yields from three to four crops during the year; say four crops. During the four cold months there will be little growth in the plants. It is necessary, therefore, that each crop should be quickly cut for the purpose of enabling that succeeding it to spring, and it seems certain that six weeks must be the maximum allowed for cutting any crop.* The mills will then work for 24 weeks, or 144 working days, which may be roundly set down as half the working year, and the entire expenses of the twelve months will have to be charged on the work turned out during this number of days.

46. Daily labour will not be affected by this. For such labourers as it may be desired to retain on the factory can be employed on the plantation work, but the interest chargeable for the money invested and calculated on the year will have to be doubled as a daily charge. The engine and machine will not be subject to wear and tear during the half-year of standing idle, but the rates I have taken in the table below are English rates, and must be doubled when applied to India on account of inferior labour, the extra cost and inferiority of repairs, &c. I have therefore calculated the cost for depreciation and wear and tear on English rates for the six months as in the case of interest.

Estimate of single mill.

47. The estimate for a single mill to be fitted with the exhibitor's machine and scutcher, with four detached scutchers, will be—

Permanent Building—

Shed for one mill and scutcher, with four detached scutchers ...	Rs.	3,000	0	0

Drying ground and shed fitted with rails	„	1,000	0	0
Shed for engine	„	1,000	0	0
Total cost of building for one mill ...	Rs.	5,250	0	0

Engine power required to drive one mill with scutcher and four scutchers detached—8-horse power in place, with shafting, pump, &c., to draw water from wells and to supply machine, boilers, &c.

Cost of boiler	Rs.	2,000	0	0
Engine, shafting, pumps, &c.	„	1,450	0	0
Mill with scutcher and four detached scutchers ...	„	2,000	0	0

The charge for interest for wear and tear, and for allowance for depreciation in value by English rates, will then be—

	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Permanent Building ...	5,250	2½	...	5	7½	394	144 being the number of working days, Rs. $\frac{1,164}{144}$ = say Rs. 8 will be the amount chargeable per day on each mill.
Boiler	2,000	7	3	5	15	300
Engine	1,450	3	3	5	11	160
Mill	2,000	5	3	5	13	260
Bands	100	...	45	5	50	50
Total charge per annum	...	...	...	...	...	1,164

* The first of the crop in this case will be half grown by the time the cutting is finished.

The cost of 8-horse power indicated by steam is, from Roorkee data, Rs. 3-10-0 per day of 10 hours.

The labour required to work the machine and four detached scutchers will be—

4 men to scutch, @ 6 annas each per day	Re.	1	8	0
4 men to tend machine, @ 4 annas each per day	„	1	0	0
4 men to carry dry fibre and to clean up, @ 3 annas per day ...	„	0	12	0
12 men costing per day	Rs.	3	4	0
1 native overlooker, @ 8 annas per day		0	8	0

Superintendence.

In estimating the superintendence, I propose to take a factory of 300 acres to yield two tons of stems per acre; this would give 600 tons of stem for a crop. Six weeks being allowed for working up, this would give 100 tons per week of six working days, or, say, 17 tons per day. I estimate that two machines, if properly worked, could consume three tons of stem per day, or, say, 10 machines for the 17 tons. The salary of a Superintendent could not be less than Rs. 400 per mensem, which on 25 working days in the month would give, say, Re. 1-9-0 per machine per day. This supposes that his services for the period the mills stand idle will be charged to the cultivation of the crop.

The estimate will then be if the mills only run for six months during the year—

For charges on house and machinery	Rs.	8	0	0
„ steam power	„	3	10	0
„ oil, &c....	„	0	2	0
„ labour	„	3	4	0
„ native overlooker	„	0	8	0
„ superintendence	„	1	9	0
„ office expenses	„	0	6	0
Total cost of working one mill for 10 hours	Rs.	17	7	0

Rs. 17-7-0 = £1-14-10.

The trial gives an out-turn of dry fibre 11¼ lbs. per hour = to 112½ lbs. per day of 10 hours.

Thus, say, 112 lbs. of fibre cost	£	1	14	10
*Or one ton	„	34	16	8

48. The cost of working the machine for a day of 10 hours being Rs. 17-7, the out-turn should be 260·7 lbs. during that period, or at the rate of 26 lbs.† per hour.

49. The machine consuming 1½ tons of stem should (on the known out-turn by hand of 224 lbs. per ton) yield 336 lbs. of fibre per day of 10 hours, or at the rate of 33½ lbs. per hour.

Temporary building.

50. If it be proposed to work the machines in temporary buildings, the estimate will be for the building about Rs. 1,300 per mill, and the charges for interest, wear and tear, and for allowance for depreciation in value, by English rates, will be—

Prize not awarded.

51. In this estimate the cost of the building and engines, &c., is calculated on the data of one mill. In erecting a factory for a number of mills there would be a saving both in the first cost of construction and in the labour for working. It is difficult to estimate what this would be, but in order to give the exhibitor the fullest advantage, say, deduct 25 per cent., which will far exceed any possible saving that could be effected from the cost of turning out a ton of fibre; this will bring the cost to the following :—

One ton per estimate in permanent building			...	...	£34	16 8

and I am therefore unable to award the prize.

52. I have now to deal with the machine under the second part of paragraph 2 of your letter No. 150 of 24th July 1872.

Flax machines of similar character.

Mr. Greig, in designing this machine for the rhea plant, has apparently followed to some extent the type of certain machines used in the preparation of flax. Thus grooved rollers, all driven, with an arrangement of weights or springs on the spindle to ensure the requisite uniform pressure, have long been in use in flax mills, the flutes of such rollers gearing into one another at fixed distances (vide Plummer's patent), as do those on Mr. Greig's machine. The four scutchers of five blades, each on one spindle, are exact copies of the arrangement of scutchers in Mr. MacAdam's flax machinery. I do not know if the scraping cylinders are a new application, but I am quite certain that they do not act as the exhibitor personally explained they were intended to. The machine, however, is a bonâ fide meritorious attempt to meet the want that the Government has set forth as existing. The amount of success it has achieved cannot be definitely determined until the fibre produced has been valued, but, as far as is in my province, I consider it entitled to a certain amount of reward.

Scutcher for flax.

Estimate of expense incurred by exhibitor.

53. I estimate that the inventor must have expended on it in money and time fully one thousand pounds. I do not think the machine is successful, or that it will continue in its present shape, but I believe that its construction and working cannot fail to advance the question, and to prove a considerable step towards solving the difficulty of producing a machine that will prepare the rhea fibre.

Difficulties attendant.

54. I would point out that few can be aware of the difficulties and expenses an inventor has to encounter in producing a machine of this kind in this country, and fewer still can know the amount of courage and determination * Taking out-turn of 15½ lbs. per hour, the cost per ton would be £23-6.

† Taking out-turn at 15¼ lbs. per hour, cost per ton would be £18-17-7.
‡ Taking out-turn at 15½ lbs. per hour, cost per ton would be £17-9-6.

that is required to face all difficulties and to bring it to a trial like the one now undertaken, and it therefore has been a matter of great regret both to the Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens and to me to see that Mr. Greig failed in exhibiting his machine to the best advantage.

Award.

55. Considering then the outlay and the decided advance that the exhibitor has made in the work, also the fact that he alone has had the perseverance to come to trial, I would propose, for the consideration of Government, an award of £1,500 (one thousand and five hundred), leaving for further consideration any additional award Government may feel disposed to make on the receipt from England of the report on the quality of the fibre.

56. I have now to enter on the general question of the machines and process for the preparation of the rhea fibre.

General question of machine.

57. Mr. Greig's machine is of a character more suited to a large spinning factory than to such an establishment as would prove economical at a rhea plantation. Independent of the first cost of such a machine (which is itself an objection), and the power required to drive it, the working and maintaining such machines in order would necessitate the establishment of a workshop far more extensive than is desirable. Hence, if it be possible to do the work required by a less expensive and more simple process, Mr. Greig's mill will certainly not be adopted.

58. I hold that the main object to be kept in view is simplicity in construction, and that all endeavours should tend towards working out a process in which the most simple machines can be worked by the unskilled labour of the country on the minimum outlay.

59. Mr. Greig's machine gives useful information on the action of the rollers on the stems, as well as in the failure in the action of the scrapers.

Roessel's Machine.

60. The American machine bearing the name of Roessel is simply an iron drum with knives and breaking bars arranged on its surface. The stems are delivered by hand against the drum, which revolves at about 100 revolutions per minute. The woody stems are broken by the breaking bars into short pieces which fall out below, while the fibre is separated into shreds by the knives. The separation of the fibre from the stem is effectual, and the machine turns out far more in quantity than Mr. Greig's machine does, but the work is done dry, and the fibre is not cleaned from the bark.*

Violent action to be avoided.

61. The woody stem of the rhea plant being remarkably brittle and the fibre exceedingly tough, the machine which acts with great violence on the stems is able to effect the separation without apparent injury to the fibre. There can be no doubt, however, that such violent action should be avoided, and that if an equal result can be effected in a less violent manner, it would be better both for the machine and for the fibre, and I am therefore inclined to think that the method of first breaking up the stems by rollers under water, as adopted by Mr. Greig, will stand, but that no other part of the machine will. From what I have observed, it appears to me that the action of the scutcher (even if it were properly made) is far too violent, and that it breaks up and injures the fibre to a very great extent. I do not think that any such violent action is necessary, but, on the contrary, that if the fibre is kept from the commencement of the process in an extended and unentangled condition (which is not the case in Mr. Greig's machine—see para. 32), it may be much more easily dealt with, and may be cleaned with less violence, and it seems very probable that the Roessel machine (the breaker being removed and some other modification effected), when driven at a less speed, may be effectually applied with water to clear out the broken wood and to clean the bark from the fibre softened by some process for dissolving the gum as hereafter treated of.

Fibre to be kept extended throughout process.

* There is no waste whatever with this machine.

Juice of the rhea plant.

62. After Mr. Greig's machine had ceased to work, all the rollers, scrapers, &c., were found coated with a strong brown varnish, which entirely protected the iron it covered from rust. This varnish was the dried insoluble portion of the juice of the plant, and, when scraped off, it had somewhat the appearance of fine shell-lac.

63. One of the difficulties* encountered in the preparation of the rhea fibre is this gum, and a knowledge of the constituent of the rhea juice is evidently necessary before any process can be entered on for its treatment. I therefore forwarded some of the gum, and afterwards some fresh stems of the plant, to Dr. Macnamara, Chemical Examiner to Government, and I solicited an analysis, with a view to ascertain if there were any solvents that could be practically applied to the plant to dissolve the gum out of the fibre.

Chemical Examiner's report.

64. The Chemical Examiner has replied:—"The juice contains 62 per cent. by weight of oxalate of lime, and besides this some alumina, oxide of iron, and other mineral matters which dissolve in hydrochloric acid. The residue, insoluble in dilute hydrochloric acid, consists of coloring and resinous matter, and forms 9·5 per cent. by weight of the juice dry."

65. The Chemical Examiner also pointed out that dilute hydrochloric acid would dissolve the gum, and suggested a trial of sea-water. Thereon some dilute† sea-water was procured, and the fibre steeped in it for twelve hours was found to have been deprived of its gum to a great extent.

66. The Chemical Examiner still has the matter under consideration, and it seems advisable that the process should be fully experimented on at leisure; ‡ meanwhile, it appears desirable to draw attention to the article on oxalate of lime, first in Watts' Chemical Dictionary, in Storer's Dictionary of Solubilities of Chemical Substances, and in Fresenius's Quantitative Analysis.

Watts' Chemical Dictionary.—Oxalate of Calcium.

"Oxalate of Calcium, $C^2 Ca'' O^4$. This salt is very widely diffused in the vegetable kingdom, being found "in the juice of most plants, whence it is deposited on the vascular tissue, towards the end of the growing "season, in microscopic crystals having the form of a square-based octahedron (P : P in the terminal edges of "the primary octahedron 46° 28'; in a more obtuse octahedron modifying the first = 119° 34'). According "to Braconnot (Ann. Ch. Phys. [2] xxviii, 318), it often constitutes about half the weight of lichens growing "on calcareous stones. The marble of the Parthenon at Athens is encrusted in some parts with a greyish, "warty, and somewhat opaline coating of calcic oxalate about a line thick, called Thierschite by Liebig, which "is supposed to have been deposited by lichens growing on the stone. Calcic oxalate has also been found by "Schmidt (Ann. Ch. Pharm., lxi, 304,) in beer-yeast. It is also of frequent occurrence in the animal body "(P. 250).

"Calcic oxalate is precipitated as a white powder whenever a soluble calcium-salt is mixed with oxalic acid "or an alkaline oxalate, provided there be no strong mineral acid present in large excess. It is insoluble in "water, acetic acid, and solution of salammoniac, nearly insoluble in free oxalic acid, and sparingly soluble in "lactic acid, but it dissolves with tolerable facility in hydrochloric or nitric acid, whence it is precipitated by "caustic alkalis or alkaline carbonates. Chloride of magnesium also renders it slightly soluble in water (Turner, "Pogg. Ann., xix, 148).

"Oxalate of calcium is insoluble in hot concentrated solutions of the chlorides of potassium, sodium, "ammonium, barium, strontium and calcium, but soluble to a considerable extent in hot solutions of the salts "of the metals belonging to the magnesian group, and is precipitated from these solutions by an excess of "alkaline oxalate (Souchay and Lenssen)."

It does not seem to be necessary to quote from the other two authorities, but the knowledge that oxalate of lime is so largely found in plants growing on calcareous soils, and is developed at the time of their maturity, may perhaps be deserving the attention of the grower with

* I pointed out in para. 17 how the juice of some fibre left for the night glued the whole mass of the bundles of fibre together, so that it appeared like shreds in thick isinglass.

† The water procurable at the mouth of the Hooghly at this season is not very salt.

‡ It will be advisable to send one of the Roessel's machines to Calcutta to assist in this.

From—A. O. HUME, Esq., Secretary to the Govt. of India, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE,

To—The Master of Her Majesty's Mint, Calcutta.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 782, dated the 4th October last, and in reply to convey to you the thanks of the Government of India for your careful and complete report on the trial held at Saharanpur of the working of Mr. Greig's machine for the preparation of rhea fibre.

2. The Government of India has accepted the conclusions arrived at by you, and authorized the payment of the proposed award of £1,500 to Mr. Greig.

No. 21.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue and Commerce, dated Calcutta, the 18th January 1873.

(FIBRES AND SILK).

Read a letter from Colonel H. Hyde, R. E., Master of the Mint at Calcutta, No. 782, dated 4th October 1872, submitting a report on the trial held at Saharanpur of the working of Mr. J. Greig's machine for the preparation of rhea fibre.

Read also the reply of the Government of India to Colonel Hyde, No. 16, dated 13th January 1873.

ORDER,—Ordered that the papers read be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 30th January 1873.

No. 377.—The services of Mr. H. W. Wellesley, of the Madras Civil Service, Officiating Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, are placed at the disposal of the Foreign Department.

The 31st January 1873.

No. 389.—The under-mentioned Covenanted Civil Servant has been granted by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India extension of leave for the period specified against his name:—

Mr. W. M. Clay, six months (furlough).

ECCLESIASTICAL.

The 28th January 1873.

No. 32.—The Reverend J. M. Thomson, M. A., Senior Chaplain of the Church of Scotland, on the Bengal Establishment, reported his return from the furlough granted him in the Notification of this Department, No. 172, dated the 17th May last, and resumed charge of his duties from the Reverend J. Williamson, M. A., on the forenoon of the 23rd instant.

No. 33.—The services of the Reverend J. Williamson, M. A., are replaced at the disposal of the Government of the North-Western Provinces.

No. 38.—The Reverend James Lillie, Assistant Chaplain, Church of Scotland at Allahabad, is appointed to be Chaplain of the 26th Cameronians at Morar.

The 31st January 1873.

No. 46.—The services of the Reverend A. Ramsay, Chaplain of Nowgong (Bundelcund), are placed at the disposal of the Government of the North-Western Provinces.

H. L. DAMPIER,
Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of India.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

COMMERCE AND TRADE.

Fort William, the 31st January 1873.

No. 15.—THE following regulations for assessing the tonnage of foreign vessels for payment of tonnage dues at British Indian ports have been sanctioned by His Excellency the Governor General in Council, and are published for general information :—

1. Where fees are charged for measuring British ships, fees may be charged for the measurement of foreign ships.

2. Where the difficulties of measuring are great, an estimated equivalent or approximate measurement for the purpose of levying dues at the port may be taken from the particulars shown in the ship's papers or otherwise.

If this approximation be objected to, the objector (whether ship-owner or receiver of dues) may demand measurement, but, in such case, he must pay the fees and expenses.

3. A measurement certificate, if issued by the authorised measurers in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, United Kingdom or abroad, upon actual measurement, to remain in force for two years from the date of its issue, and will, while it is in force, be valid in all parts of the British dominions; provided (1) that the vessel to which it relates is not altered during the period to an extent interfering with her original capacity; and (2) that stores, cargo, or passengers are not carried in any spaces which have not been included in, or which have been deducted from, the gross tonnage. A measurement certificate thus given to be renewable at the end of the two years without re-measurement, if the vessel, upon survey, is found to have been unaltered, and if stores, cargo, or passengers have not been carried in any unmeasured or exempted spaces.

4. The tonnage of ships belonging to nations who have adopted the rules in force in the United Kingdom, to be accepted as on their national papers in so far as the arrangement goes.

The only country at present whose Government has adopted the British rules in their entirety is Denmark, but the following countries (videlicet, America and the Austro-Hungarian Empire) have accepted the principle of the gross tonnage. To arrive at the registered tonnage in ships of these countries, it will only be necessary to make such deduction from the gross tonnage as is allowed on compliance with British law. It will of course be open to any local Government to decline to accept the statement of tonnage given on any papers, if it should appear that any part of the ship—notably closed-in freight-earning spaces in the uppermost decks—has been omitted from measurement in the national papers.

5. The local Governments to provide and remunerate proper measuring surveyors, and no other surveyors to be recognised.

6. Travelling expenses incurred by the surveyors through vessels lying at a distance from the head port, to be borne by the ship.

SURVEYS.

The 30th January 1873.

No. 71.—Lieutenant A. H. Macintire, M. S. C., Assistant Superintendent, Mysore Revenue Survey, has been granted leave for one month on medical certificate, with effect from the 4th ultimo.

No. 73.—Mr. F. B. Clerk, Assistant Superintendent, Revenue Survey, Mysore, is promoted from the 4th to the 3rd Grade of Assistant Superintendents, with effect from the 26th November 1872.

The 31st January 1873.

No. 75.—Captain W. G. Murray, S. C., Deputy Superintendent, Topographical Survey, 2nd Grade, is allowed subsidiary leave from 8th February to 1st March 1873, inclusive.

MUNICIPALITIES.

The 31st January 1873.

No. 6.—Under Section 2 of Act XXII of 1865, the Governor General in Council is pleased to extend Act XVIII of 1864 to the under-mentioned towns in the Province of Coorg :—

Fraserpett.
Somwarpett.
Kodlipett.

and under Section 2 of Act XXII of 1865 aforesaid, to declare that the Municipal Committee of each of the above-mentioned towns shall consist of nine members, three of whom shall be Ex-Officio Members, viz.:—

For Fraserpett.

The Subedar of the Nunjrajputten Taluk.
The Parputtigar of the Nunjrajputten Taluk.
The School Master at Fraserpett.

For Somwarpett.

The Subedar of the Nunjrajputten Taluk.

No. 252G, dated the 30th January 1873.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, FOREIGN DEPT.

Read again the following correspondence relative to the grant of rewards to Civil Officers serving on the Punjab Frontier for proficiency in the Vernacular languages spoken in their districts :—

Proceedings, Political A, November 1870, No. 56.
" Revenue A, August 1871, No. 38.
" General B, January 1872, Nos. 43—48.

Read also letter from the Punjab Government, No. 839, dated 27th June 1872.

RESOLUTION.—In the course of the correspondence relating to the outrages committed in the Bunnoo District by the Mahomed Kheyl Wuzeerees in 1870, and also in the course of the discussions relating to the Revenue Settlement of the Peshawur District, the attention of the Government of India was drawn to the fact that very few of the officers in civil employ on the Punjab Frontier are acquainted with the language spoken in their districts. With a view to remedy this very serious evil, the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab proposed that it should in future be rendered obligatory on every officer newly posted to the frontier to pass an examination in the Vernacular of his district, and that on passing the required tests an extra allowance of Rs. 100 a month should be granted so long as an officer remained in a Frontier District, no promotions being given until the prescribed examination had been passed. In proposing the above rewards the Lieutenant Governor represented the difficult nature of the Frontier Vernaculars, and the absence of books and teachers to facilitate their acquirement. He urged, moreover, the expediency of holding out special inducements to attract good officers to the Frontier service which is at present attended with some disadvantages.

2. The anxiety expressed by the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab at the weakness to the administration and the positive danger caused by the fact that very few of the Frontier Officers are able to converse with the people of their district, in the Vernacular dialects commonly in use, was fully shared by the Government of India.

3. Accordingly His Excellency in Council expressed his readiness to raise from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000 the rewards given under G. O. No. 734, dated 9th September 1864, for passing the Higher Standard examination in Pushtoo; and to grant this increased reward to every Civil Officer who should pass the prescribed tests within two years of his joining the Punjab Commission, whether his duties lay on the Frontier or elsewhere. It was also suggested that all officers sent to the Frontier should, for the first year, be relieved as much as possible from judicial work, and required to devote their time to the acquisition of the Vernaculars, and that every such officer under the grade of Commissioner should be given distinctly to understand that he would receive no promotion till he passed the examination laid down. The attention of the Lieutenant Governor was also drawn to the necessity of exercising special care in the selection of officers for Frontier service.

4. The Lieutenant Governor, having fully considered these suggestions, has submitted revised proposals to meet the end in view, and His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council, concurring generally in the Lieutenant Governor's views, is pleased to prescribe the following rules :—

(1). All Assistant Commissioners (including Assistant Commissioners acting as Deputy Commissioners) and European Extra Assistant Commissioners now employed in the districts of Peshawur, Kohat, Bunnoo, Dera Ismael Khan, and Dera Ghazee Khan shall be required to pass an examination in Pushtoo or Beloochee, whichever is the Vernacular of his district.

(2). The tests prescribed for examination in Pushtoo or Beloochee will correspond, as nearly as may be, with those laid down in Section VI of G. O. No. 734, dated 9th September 1864, for the Higher Standard in Hindoostanee.

(3). The Lieutenant Governor will prescribe a reasonable time within which the officers referred to in Rule 1 shall present themselves for examination. Officers failing to pass shall be allowed such further period as the Lieutenant Governor may think proper within which to qualify themselves.

(4). The officers referred to in Rule 1, who pass the prescribed tests, shall receive an increase of pay of Rs. 100 per mensem, so long as they remain in any of the Frontier Districts named in Rule 1, in grades lower than the substantive appointment of Deputy Commissioner.

(5). Officers who fail to pass the first examination in Rule 3 shall not be promoted during their further probationary period. Failing to pass the examination at the end of the further probationary period, they shall, if Military Officers, be removed from civil employment, and if Civilians, Covenanted or Uncovenanted, be reduced in their grade, and, if necessary, to a lower grade, or transferred to such other inferior appointments in the Punjab as His Honor the Lieutenant Governor may direct.

(6). A reward of Rs. 1,000 shall be allowed to European Police Officers now serving in, or hereafter appointed to, Hazara or any of the other Frontier districts mentioned in Rule 1 who pass the required examination.

(7). A similar reward shall be allowed to Assistant Commissioners and European Extra Assistant Commissioners now serving in, or hereafter appointed to, other parts of the Punjab, who shall pass the examination in Pushtoo or Beloochee; and such officers, if hereafter appointed to be Assistant or Extra Assistant Commissioners in any of the districts named in Rule 1, shall receive the additional pay provided in Rule 4. Both rewards of Rs. 1,000 under this rule, i. e., the reward of Rs. 1,000 for Pushtoo and the reward of Rs. 1,000 for Beloochee, may be earned by the same officer.

(8). Rules 1 to 5 shall apply to all Assistant Commissioners and European Extra Assistant Commissioners hereafter appointed to any of the districts named in Rule 1 who may not, before such appointment, have passed in Pushtoo or Beloochee.

5. His Excellency in Council desires to be furnished, on the 31st December of each year, with a return giving the names, rank, date of appointment, and salary of all officers serving in the Civil Department on the Punjab Frontier, and showing which of them have passed in their district vernaculars.

6. A copy of this Resolution will be published in the Gazette of India.

No. 103 of 1873.—The following Notification, issued by the Financial Department, No. 372, dated the 16th January 1873, is republished for general information:—

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

The 16th January 1873.

No. 372.—The following Financial Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, No. 513, dated 4th December 1872, is published for general information:—

I have considered in Council your Financial letter, dated the 26th September last, No. 359, forwarding papers relating to a request by * * * * that on resigning Civil employment and accepting the Military pension to which he is entitled, he may be re-appointed to be a Deputy Commissioner of the grade in which he at present serves.

"When an Officer, who has retired on a pension obtained, not on medical certificate but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, he shall be permitted to draw the pension in addition to the salary of the Office to which he may be appointed; but in the event of a Military Officer resigning the service after he has been appointed to a Civil Office, he must at the same time vacate that Office. He may, however, be re-appointed to the Office, not as a matter of course, but only in the event of your considering it decidedly for the benefit of the public service."

3. You also state that the principle of that rule, which was at first applicable to Commissioned Military Officers in Civil employ, has been extended to all Civil Officers, and that Section 96 of the Civil Pension Code provides that "no Officer can be permitted to retire with the view of being re-employed, whether in the general service or at the charge of local funds, and drawing pension in addition to pay," and you propose that that rule should now be extended to Military Officers in Civil employ.

4. Previous to the receipt by you of the Financial despatch, dated the 9th July 1868, No. 290, it was the invariable rule that a Military pension should merge in Civil salary, and it was only on "your strong recommendation" that any modification of that rule was authorized.

5. Under the terms of the modification sanctioned in 1868, you have full power to guard against the abuse of the concession granted by declining to re-appoint any Officer to a Civil appointment who may resign the service for the purpose of obtaining Military pension in addition to Civil salary; and I am of opinion that you should do so, except under exceptional circumstances, when it is decidedly for the benefit of the public service. I see no objection, however, to your proposition to extend to Military Officers in Civil employ the rule on the subject which you have laid down as regards Civil Officers.

6. * * * request should accordingly be negatived.

No. 104 of 1873.—The following temporary promotions are made in the Warrant Grades of the Ordnance Commissariat Department from the date specified:—

An Act for regulating Ferries in British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate the public ferries within the Province of British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Ferries' Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

II.—Public Ferries.

Power to declare and establish public ferries.

2. The Chief Commissioner may declare what ferries within any part of British Burma shall be deemed public ferries, and the district in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate, and may at any time hereafter establish new ferries, where, in his opinion, they are needed, and may, from time to time, change the course of any public ferry, or discontinue any public ferry which he deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette.

Superintendence of ferries.

3. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as hereinafter provided, be vested in the Deputy Commissioner of the district in which they are situate, and he shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

Management may be vested in local Municipality;

4. The Chief Commissioner may direct that any public ferry situated within the limits of a town may be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town, and proceeds paid into Municipal Fund.

and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry shall be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town, and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

Letting ferry-tolls by auction.

5. The tolls of any public ferry may be put up to public auction for such term not exceeding three years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry, and may be called upon by the officer putting the tolls of the ferry up to auction to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer may deem fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason duly recorded in writing, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

Power to make rules.

6. Subject to the revision and confirmation of the Chief Commissioner, the Commissioner of each Division shall have power to make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division;

for regulating the time and manner in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries;

and for fixing the limits of the same:

and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, he shall have power (subject as aforesaid) to make additional rules—

for regulating the number and kinds of boats and their dimensions, and the number of crew for each boat, which the lessee of the tolls will be required to keep;

the hours during which he shall be bound to ply, and the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip;

and for the keeping of such boats continually in good condition for the safe conveyance of passengers and property.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

Private ferry not to ply within certain distance of public ferry without sanction.

7. No person shall, except with the sanction of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry-boat for the purpose of plying for hire within the limits of such public ferry.

Nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, or apply to boats which the Chief Commissioner expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

III.—Tolls.

Tolls.

8. Tolls, according to such rates as are from time to time fixed by the Chief Commissioner, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things carried by means of any public ferry:

Provided that the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Chief Commissioner.

Table of tolls.

9. The lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Deputy Commissioner or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

Tolls or rents to be credited to district fund.

10. All tolls or rents received under this Act shall, except in the cases provided for by section four, be credited to the district fund.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty for failing to affix, or for removing, &c., table of tolls.

11. Every lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of a public ferry, who neglects to affix and keep in good order and repair the table of tolls mentioned in section nine, or who wilfully removes, alters or defaces such table, or allows it to become illegible, or who fails to produce, on demand, the list of the tolls mentioned in section nine,

shall be liable to fine not exceeding twenty rupees.

Penalty for taking unauthorized toll,

12. Every such lessee or other person as aforesaid asking or taking other than the lawful toll, and for causing delay.

or without due cause delaying any person, animal or other thing,

shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees.

Cancelment of lease on breach of rules.

13. In the event of any breach by a lessee of the tolls of a ferry, of the rules for the management of such ferry made under section six,

the Deputy Commissioner may impose upon him a fine not exceeding twenty rupees, and in that event, or in the event of repeated liability to the penalties respectively provided by sections eleven and twelve,

the Deputy Commissioner may also, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, cancel the lease of the tolls of such ferry and make other arrangements for its management during the whole or any part of the term for which the tolls were let.

Penalties on passengers offending.

14. Every person crossing at any public ferry who refuses to pay the proper toll, or who, with intent of avoiding payment thereof, fraudulently or forcibly crosses any ferry-station without paying the toll, or who obstructs any toll-collector or lessee of the tolls of a public ferry, or any of his assistants, in any way in the execution of their duty under this Act, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees over and above the value of the damage, if any, which he has done.

Penalty for plying within public ferry-course without license.

15. Whoever conveys for hire any passenger, animal, cart, carriage or other vehicle, or any goods or merchandise, to or from any point within the limits assigned to each public ferry, in contravention of the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees.

Where the tolls of such ferry have been let under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the whole or any portion of any penalty realized under this section or section fourteen may, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, be paid to the lessee.

Officers by whom offences are triable.

16. All offences against this Act shall be heard and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates; and any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates trying offences under this section may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (if any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned, and shall order the amount of such value to be paid by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

SCHEDULE.—Enactments repealed.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Civil Courts of the Madras Presidency subordinate to the High Court.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Civil Courts of the Madras Presidency subordinate to the High Court; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Madras Civil Courts' Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to all the territories for the time being under the government of the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, except the Tracts respectively under the jurisdiction of the Agents for Ganjam and Vizagápatam;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Repeal of enactments.

2. On and from that day the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column of such schedule.

PART II.

ESTABLISHMENT AND CONSTITUTION OF CIVIL COURTS.

Number of District Courts.

3. The number of District (heretofore designated Zila) Courts to be established or continued under this Act, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no increase to the number of such Courts shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs.

4. The number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs to be appointed under this Act for each District, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no addition to the number of such officers shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Court's locality.

5. The place at which any Court under this Act shall be held may be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, in the case of a District Court or a Subordinate Judge's Court, by the Local Government, in the case of a District Munsif's Court, by the High Court.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Judge or Subordinate Judge.

6. Whenever the office of the Judge of a District Court (hereinafter called a 'District Judge') or of a Subordinate Judge under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges under the provisions of section three or section four,

the Local Government shall appoint to the office such duly qualified person as it thinks proper.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

7. Whenever the office of a District Munsif under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Munsifs under the provisions of section four,

the High Court shall appoint to the office such person as it thinks fit:

Provided that he possesses the qualifications for the time being required by the rules in this behalf which the High Court, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, are hereby empowered to make and alter.

Publication of appointments.

Every appointment made under this section shall be published in the same manner as appointments made by the Local Government.

Annulment of appointments.

The Local Government may, for good and sufficient reason, annul any appointment made under this section.

District Courts, Subordinate Judges, and District Munsifs.

8. The present Zila Courts, Principal Sadr Amíns, and District Munsifs, shall be respectively the first "District Courts," "Subordinate Judges," and "District Munsifs" under this Act.

Seal of Court.

9. Every Court under this Act shall use a seal of such form and dimensions as are, for the time being, prescribed by the Local Government.

PART III.

JURISDICTION.

Local limits of jurisdiction of District Court or Subordinate Judge.

10. The Local Government shall fix, and may from time to time vary, the local limits of the jurisdiction of any District Judge or Subordinate Judge under this Act:

Local limits of jurisdiction of each of several Subordinate Judges.

Provided that, where more than one Subordinate Judge is appointed to any district, the District Judge may assign to each such Subordinate Judge the local limits of his particular jurisdiction within such district.

The present local limits of the jurisdiction of every Civil Court (other than the High Court) shall be deemed to have been fixed under this Act.

Local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

11. The High Court shall fix, and may from time to time modify, the local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

Jurisdiction of District Judge or Subordinate Judge in original suits.

12. The jurisdiction of a District Judge or a Subordinate Judge extends, subject to the rules contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, to all original suits and proceedings of a civil nature.

Jurisdiction of District Munsif.

The jurisdiction of a District Munsif extends to all like suits and proceedings, not otherwise exempted from his cognizance, of which the amount or value of the subject-matter does not exceed two thousand five hundred rupees.

Appeals from decrees of District Courts.

13. Regular or special appeals, or appeals under Madras Regulation XI of 1832, section nine, shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie from the decrees and orders of a District Court to the High Court.

Appellate jurisdiction of District Court.

Appeals from the decrees and orders of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie to the District Court, except when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds rupees five thousand, in which case the appeal shall lie to the High Court:

Appellate jurisdiction of Subordinate Judge.

Provided that, whenever a Subordinate Judge's Court is established in any District at a place remote from the station of the District Court, the High Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that appeals from the decrees or orders of District Munsifs within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Subordinate Judge be preferred in the Court of the latter:

Disposal of appeal by District Judge.

Provided also, that the District Judge may remove to his own Court, from time to time, appeals so preferred, and dispose of them himself, or may, subject to the orders of the High Court, refer any appeals from the decrees and orders of District Munsifs, preferred in the District Court, to any Subordinate Judge within the District.

Valuation of suits for immovable property.

14. When the subject-matter of any suit or proceeding is land, a house or a garden, its value shall, for the purposes of the jurisdiction conferred by this Act, be fixed in manner provided by the Court Fees' Act, 1870, section seven, clause v.

Power to require witness or party to make oath or affirmation.

15. Every Court under this Act may require a witness or party to any suit or other proceeding pending in such Court to make such oath or affirmation as is prescribed by the law for the time being in force.

Law administered by Courts to Natives.

16. Where, in any suit or proceeding, it is necessary for any Court under this Act to decide any question regarding succession, inheritance, marriage or caste, or any religious usage or institution,

(a.) the Muhammadan law in cases where the parties are Muhammadans, and the Hindú law in cases where the parties are Hindús, or

(b.) any custom (if such there be) having the force of law and governing the parties or property concerned,

shall form the rule of decision, unless such law or custom has, by legislative enactment, been altered or abolished.

(c.) In cases where no specific rule exists, the Court shall act according to justice, equity and good conscience.

Judges not to try suits in which they are interested;

17. No District Judge, Subordinate Judge or District Munsif, shall try any suit to or in which he is a party or personally interested, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with, or arising out of, such suit.

nor to try appeals from decrees passed by them in other capacities.

No District Judge or Subordinate Judge shall try any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself in another capacity.

Mode of disposing of such suits and appeals.

When any such suit, proceeding or appeal comes before any such officer, he shall report the circumstances to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate.

The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, section six.

Nothing in the last preceding clause of this section shall be deemed to affect the extraordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court.

PART IV.

MISCONDUCT OF JUDGES.

Suspension of Judge by Local Government.

18. Any District Judge, Subordinate Judge, or District Munsif may, for any misconduct, be suspended or removed by the Local Government.

Suspension of Subordinate Judge by High Court.

19. The High Court may, whenever it sees urgent necessity for so doing, suspend a Subordinate Judge pending the orders of the Local Government.

The High Court shall immediately report the circumstances of such suspension, and the Local Government shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

Suspension of District Munsif by High Court. Commission of Inquiry.

20. The High Court may suspend any District Munsif who is alleged to have misconducted himself, or may appoint a commission for enquiring into his alleged misconduct.

Exercise by High Court of powers conferred on Government by Act XXXVII of 1850.

The provisions of Act No. XXXVII of 1850 (for regulating enquiries into the behaviour of public servants) shall apply to enquiries under this section, the powers conferred by that Act on the Government being exercised by the High Court.

On receiving the report of the result of any such enquiry, the High Court may, if it think fit, remove the Munsif from office, or suspend him, or reduce him to a lower grade.

Suspension of District Munsif by District Judge.

21. The District Judge may suspend from office, whenever he sees urgent necessity for so doing, any District Munsif under his control.

Report to High Court.

Whenever a District Judge exercises the power conferred by this section, he shall forthwith send to the High Court a full report of the circumstances of the case, together with the evidence, if any, and the High Court shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

PART V.

MINISTERIAL OFFICERS.

Appointment, suspension or removal of Ministerial Officers of District Courts.

22. The Ministerial Officers of the District Courts shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed, by the Judges of such Courts, whose orders in such matters shall be final.

Appointment, &c., of Ministerial Officers of Subordinate Courts.

23. The Ministerial Officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed from office, by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, respectively, subject to the approval or confirmation of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction such Courts are situate.

Rules regulating such appointments.

24. Every appointment under this Part shall be made subject to such rules as the Local Government from time to time prescribes on this behalf.

Duties of Ministerial Officers.

Every person appointed under this Part shall perform such duties as may from time to time be imposed upon him by the presiding officer of the Court to which he belongs.

Present Ministerial Officers.

The present Ministerial Officers of the Courts under this Act shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Part.

PART VI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Temporary discharge of duties of District Judge.

25. In the event of the death of the District Judge, or of his being incapacitated by illness or otherwise for the performance of his duties, or of his absence from the station in which his Court is held,

the senior Subordinate Judge of the District shall, without interruption to his ordinary duties, assume charge of the District Judge's office, and shall discharge such of the current duties thereof as are connected with the filing of suits and appeals, the execution of processes and the like, and shall continue in charge of the office until the same is resumed or assumed by an officer duly appointed thereto.

District Judge may nominate to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

26. The District Judge, on the occurrence within his district of any vacancy in the office of District Munsif, may, pending the orders of the High Court thereon, appoint such person as he thinks fit to act in such office;

and he shall at once report to the High Court the occurrence of every such vacancy and such appointment.

District Judge to control Civil Courts of District.

27. Subject to the other provisions of this Act and to the rules for the time being in force and prescribed by the High Court in this behalf, the general control over all the Civil Courts under this Act in any District is vested in the District Judge.

Investiture of Subordinate Judge with Small Cause jurisdiction.

28. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest, within such local limits as it shall from time to time appoint, any Subordinate Judge with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the amount of rupees five hundred, and any District Munsif with the same jurisdiction up to the amount of rupees fifty,

Investiture of District Munsif with similar jurisdiction.

and may, by like notification, whenever it thinks fit, withdraw such jurisdiction from the Subordinate Judge or Munsif so invested.

Power to invest Small Cause Court Judge with powers of Subordinate Judge.

29. Section fifty-one of Act No. XI of 1865 shall be read as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words "Subordinate Judge" were substituted.

Amendment of Madras Act I of 1868.

Sections one, eight, nine, ten and twelve of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of civil and criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) shall be read as if, for the words 'Civil' and 'Zillah', used therein with reference to a Civil or Zillah Judge or Court, the word 'District' was substituted, and as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words 'Subordinate Judge' were substituted.

But save as provided in this section nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the said Madras Act.

Vacation.

30. The High Court may permit the Civil Courts under its control to adjourn from time to time for periods not exceeding in the aggregate two months in each year.

An Act to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in towns in the Panjáb, and for police, conservancy, local improvements, and education in such towns, and for the levying of rates and taxes therein; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Acts.

2. Act No. XV of 1867 (to make better provision for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes) and Act No. II of 1872 (to revive and continue the operation of Act XV of 1867) are repealed; and Act No. XXVI of 1850 (to enable improvements to be made in towns), is repealed so far as it affects the Panjáb.

Existing extensions and appointments.

But all extensions and appointments made, and all limits defined, under the said Act No. XV of 1867, shall be deemed to be, respectively, made and defined under this Act. And an extension of any particular provision of Act No. XV of 1867 shall be deemed to be an extension of the corresponding provision of this Act.

Existing assessments and bye-laws.

And all assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations of any kind, relating to matters provided for by this Act, which may heretofore have been made or approved by the Local Government, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act.

Former proceedings.

And all proceedings taken under any such assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations shall be deemed to be as valid as if they had been taken under this Act.

"Committee" defined.

3. In this Act "Committee" means a Municipal Committee under this Act.

Power to extend Act to towns.

4. The Local Government may, by notification published in the Panjáb Gazette, declare its intention to extend this Act, or any of its provisions, to any town in the said territories.

Objection to such extension.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such extension may, within six weeks from the said publication, send his objection in writing to the Secretary to the Local Government, and the Local Government shall take such objection into consideration.

Procedure thereon.

When six weeks from the said publication have expired, the Local Government, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been so sent in) if, in its opinion, they are insufficient, may, by like notification, effect the proposed extension.

Power to define limits of towns to which Act extends.

5. For the purposes of this Act, the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the Panjáb Gazette, declare what shall be deemed to be a town for the purposes of this Act, and define the limits of any town to which this Act has been extended.

II.—Appointment, Duties and Powers of Committees.

Appointment of Committee.

6. In every town to which this Act is extended, the Local Government shall appoint, or cause to be appointed, a Committee consisting of not less than five members.

Such members may be appointed as the Local Government from time to time directs, either ex-officio, or by nomination, or by election, or some by one and some by any other of such methods:

Provided that (except with the approval of the Governor General in Council) not less than two-fifths of the members of a Committee shall be persons other than salaried officers of Government.

The Local Government may—

(a) from time to time remove any of the members of any Committee, add to their number, and fill up vacancies occurring among them;

(b) determine the time and manner of the election of those members whom it may direct to be appointed by election, and the persons by whom they shall be elected, and generally make such rules as it thinks fit for regulating such election;

(c) appoint the President and Vice-President, or either of them, of any Committee, or authorise any Committee to appoint, by election from their number, such President, or Vice-President, or both.

No appointment under this section, other than the appointment by election of a Vice-President, shall be valid unless and until it is notified in the Panjáb Gazette.

Power to levy rates or make assessments.

7. Subject to any general rules or special orders which the Governor General in Council may from time to time make in this behalf, every Committee intending to impose taxes for the purposes of this Act shall, from time to time, give public notice of such intention, and shall in such notice define the persons or property within the town to be taxed for the purposes of this Act, and the amount or rate of the taxes to be imposed hereunder.

Objection to rates.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such notice may, within a fortnight from the date of the said notice, send his objection in writing to the President of the Committee, and the Committee shall take such objection into consideration and report their opinion thereon to the Local Government.

Procedure thereon.

When a fortnight from the date of the said notice has expired, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been sent in) if, in the opinion of the Committee, they are insufficient, the Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to be notified in the Panjáb Gazette, define the persons or property and the amount or rate of the taxes aforesaid, and may then impose such taxes accordingly.

Power to make rules for collection and application of rates.

8. The Local Government may from time to time make rules—

as to the persons by whom, and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed, and for the collection of such taxes;

and for the safety and due application of them when collected;

and for the rendering and publishing of such estimates and accounts relating to the expenditure of the Municipal Funds, in such form as it may think fit.

No tax shall be collected under this Act, until the assessment thereof has been confirmed by the persons and in manner for the time being prescribed by such rules.

Recovery of rates.

9. Rates and arrears of rates imposed under this Act may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

Municipal Fund.

10. All sums received by the Committee of any town to which this Act extends, and all fines levied under this Act, shall constitute a fund, which shall be called the Municipal Fund of such town, and shall, together with all property which may become vested in such Committee, be under their control, and shall be applied by them as trustees for the purposes of this Act.

Duties and powers of Committees.

11. Every Committee, so far as the Municipal Fund at their disposal permits, shall, after providing out of such Fund for a police establishment in manner hereinafter mentioned, keep the public streets, roads, drains, tanks and water-courses of the town for which they are appointed clean and repaired;

and, generally, may do all acts and things necessary for the construction, repair and maintenance of local public works of general utility;

and may also make provision, by the establishment of new schools or the aiding of already existing schools or otherwise, for the promotion of education;

and may also make provision for promoting the public health, safety, comfort and convenience.

Provision for police.

12. Every Committee shall set apart out of the Municipal Fund such sum as the Local Government from time to time requires for the maintenance of the police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed.

Power to make rules as to business and officers.

13. Every Committee may make rules for regulating—

the time and place of their meeting;

the conduct of their business;

the division of duties among the members of the Committee;

the duties, salaries, appointment, suspension and removal of the officers and servants of the Committee;

and other similar matters.

Power to make bye-laws.

14. Any Committee may make bye-laws—

(a) for defining, prohibiting and abating nuisances which are not public or common nuisances under the Indian Penal Code, or under Act No. V of 1861 (for the regulation of Police):

(b) for defining the cases, manner and times in and at which the officers of the Committee may enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances:

(c) for securing a proper registration of births and deaths;

(d) and for carrying out all or any of the purposes of this Act.

The Committee may, from time to time, repeal, alter or add to any bye-laws made under this section.

Bye-laws to be confirmed and published.

15. No bye-law, and no alteration or repeal of or addition to a bye-law, shall have effect until it has been confirmed by the Local Government.

All bye-laws made under this Act, and all rules made under section thirteen, and all alterations and repeals of and additions to such bye-laws and rules shall, before coming into force, be published for such length of time, and in such manner, as the Local Government from time to time directs.

Power to enter on private property.

16. The officers of the Committee shall have power to enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances when the Committee shall, under section fourteen, clause (b), have made bye-laws regulating the exercise of such power.

Power to suspend or limit powers of Committees.

17. The Local Government may, by order, suspend or limit all or any of the powers of any Committee, and may also cancel any of their proceedings, rules or bye-laws, and remit or reduce any tax which they have imposed.

III.—Suits by and against Committees.

Suits by and against Committees.

18. Every Committee shall sue and be sued in the name of their President.

Contracts of Committees.

Every contract made on behalf of any Committee in respect of any sum or property exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value, shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the President or Vice-President (if any) and at least two other members of the Committee.

No contract, unless so executed, shall be binding on the Committee on whose behalf it is made.

Liability of members of Committees.

No member of a Committee shall be personally liable for any contract made or expense incurred by or on behalf of the Committee; but the funds from time to time in the hands of the Committee shall be liable for, and chargeable with, contracts duly made as aforesaid.

Every member of a Committee shall be liable for any misapplication of money entrusted to the Committee, to which he has been a party, or which happens through, or is facilitated by, his neglect of his duty;

and he shall be liable to be sued for the same in such Court as the Local Government directs as for money due to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Bar of suit in absence of one month's notice of cause of suit.

19. No suit shall be brought against a Committee or any of their officers, or any person acting under their direction, for anything done, or purporting to be done, under this Act, until the expiration of one month next after notice in writing has been delivered or left at the office of the Committee, or at the place of abode of such person, stating the cause of suit and the name and place of abode of the intended plaintiff.

Unless such notice be proved, the Court shall find for the defendant.

Every such suit shall be commenced within three months next after the accrual of the right to sue, and not afterwards.

And if any person to whom any such notice of suit is given shall, before suit brought, tender sufficient amends to the plaintiff, such plaintiff shall not recover.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty on member or servant of Committee being interested in contracts made with Committee.

20. No member or servant of a Committee shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract made with the Committee, and if any such person be so interested, he shall thereby become incapable of continuing in office or in employment as such member or servant, and shall be liable to a fine of five hundred rupees:

Provided that no person, by being a shareholder in, or member of, any incorporated or registered Company, shall be disqualified from acting as a member or servant of a Committee by reason of any contract entered into between such Company and the Committee.

Nevertheless it shall not be lawful for such shareholder or member to act as a member of the Committee in any matter relating to any contract entered into between the Committee and such Company.

Penalty for infringement of bye-laws or non-payment of fines.

21. Whoever infringes any bye-law made and confirmed as directed in this Act, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, and, in the case of a continuing infringement, to a fine not exceeding five rupees for every day after notice from the Committee of such infringement.

In default of payment of any fine imposed under this section, the defaulter shall be liable to simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding eight days.

Prosecutions.

22. Prosecutions under this Act for infringements of bye-laws may be instituted before any Magistrate by the Committee, or by any person authorised by the Committee in this behalf.

Recovery of fines.

23. Fines imposed under this Act may be recovered in manner provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

13. Payment of married women's deposits.

Rules.

14. Rules regulating certificates under section 8 and payments under section 10, 12 or 13.

An Act to amend the Law relating to Government Savings' Banks.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Law relating to the payment of deposits in Government Savings' Banks; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Government Savings' Banks Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the whole of British India;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XXVI of 1855.

2. Act No. XXVI of 1855 (to facilitate the payment of small deposits in Government Savings' Banks to the representatives of deceased depositors) is hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"Depositor" means a person by whom, or on whose behalf, money has been heretofore, or shall be hereafter, deposited in a Government Savings' Bank, and "deposit" means money so deposited:

"Depositor."

"Deposit."

"Secretary" includes every person empowered to manage a Government Savings' Bank;

"Secretary."

and "Minor" means a person who has not completed the age of eighteen years.

"Minor."

Deposits belonging to the Estates of deceased Persons.

Payment on death of depositor.

4. If a depositor dies, leaving in a Government Savings' Bank a sum of money not exceeding one thousand rupees, and if probate of his will or letters of administration of his estate, or a certificate granted under Act No. XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), is not produced to the Secretary of such Bank within three months of the death of the said depositor, the Secretary of such Bank may pay the said sum of money to any person appearing to him to be entitled to receive it, or to administer the estate of the deceased.

Payment to be a discharge.

5. Such payment shall be a full discharge from all further liability in respect of the money so paid:

Saving of right of executor.

But nothing herein contained precludes any executor or administrator, or other representative of the deceased, from recovering from the person receiving the same the amount remaining in his hands after deducting the amount of all debts or other demands lawfully paid or discharged by him in due course of administration.

Saving of right of creditor.

And any creditor or claimant against the estate of the deceased may recover his debt or claim out of the money paid under this Act, or the said Act No. XXVI of 1855, to any person, and remaining in his hands unadministered, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the latter had obtained letters of administration of the estate of the deceased.

Security for due administration.

6. The Secretary of any such Bank may take such security as he thinks necessary from any person to whom he pays any money under section four for the due administration of the money so paid, and he may assign the said security to any person interested in such administration.

Power to administer oath.

7. For the purpose of ascertaining the right of the person claiming to be entitled as aforesaid, the Secretary of any such Bank may take evidence on oath or affirmation according to the law for the time being relating to oaths and affirmations.

Penalty for false statements.

Any person who, upon such oath or affirmation, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of an offence under section one hundred and ninety-three of the Indian Penal Code.

Deposit when excluded in computing Court Fees.

8. Where the amount of the deposit belonging to the estate of a deceased depositor does not exceed one thousand rupees, such amount shall be excluded in computing the fee chargeable, under the Court Fees' Act, 1870, on the probate, or letters of administration, or certificate (if any), granted in respect of his property:

Provided that the person claiming such probate or letters or certificate shall exhibit to the Court authorised to grant the same a certificate of the amount of the deposit in any Government Savings' Bank belonging to the estate of the deceased. Such certificate shall be signed by the Secretary of such Bank, and the Court shall receive it as evidence of the said amount.

Act not to apply to deposits belonging to estates of European soldiers or deserters.

9. Nothing hereinbefore contained applies to money belonging to the estate of any European officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier dying in Her Majesty's service in India, or of any European who, at the time of his death, was a deserter from the said service.

Deposits belonging to Minors.

Payment of deposits to minor or guardian.

10. Any deposit made by, or on behalf of, any minor, may be paid to him personally, if he made the deposit, or to his guardian for his use, if the deposit was made by any person other than the minor, together with the interest accrued thereon.

The receipt of any minor or guardian, for money paid to him under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Legalization of like payments heretofore made.

11. All payments of deposits heretofore made to minors or their guardians by any Secretary of a Government Savings' Bank shall be deemed to have been made in accordance with law.

Deposits belonging to Lunatics.

Payment of deposits belonging to lunatics.

12. If any depositor becomes insane or otherwise incapable of managing his affairs, and if such insanity or incapacity is proved to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Bank in which his deposit may be, such Secretary may, from time to time, make payments out of the deposit to any proper person, and the receipt of such person, for money paid under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Where a Committee or Manager of the depositor's estate has been duly appointed, nothing in this section authorises payments to any person other than such Committee or Manager.

Deposits made by Married Women.

Payment of married women's deposits.

13. Any deposit made by or on behalf of a married woman, or by or on behalf of a woman who afterwards marries, may be paid to her, whether or not the Indian Succession Act, 1865, section four, applies to her marriage; and her receipt for money paid to her under this section shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Rules.

Rules regulating certificates under section 8 and payments under section 10, 12 or 13.

14. All certificates under section eight, and all payments under section ten, section twelve or section thirteen, shall be respectively granted and made by the Secretary of the Bank, subject to such rules consistent with this Act as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, prescribe.

WHITLEY STOKES,

Secretary to the Govt. of India.

[First Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 28th January 1873, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VI OF 1873.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the transhipment of goods imported by steamer; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Transhipment of Goods Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, and to such other British Indian ports as the Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XX of 1867.

2. Act No. XX of 1867 (to authorize the transhipment without payment of duty of goods imported into Calcutta, Madras and Bombay by Steamers) is repealed. But all rules, rates and regulations prescribed under the said Act shall be deemed to have been prescribed under this Act.

Power to permit transhipment without payment of duty.

3. Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, the chief officer of customs of every port to which this Act extends for the time being may, on application of any person interested as owner, agent, consignee or otherwise in any goods imported by steamer into such port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of duty at the port of transhipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the port of destination:

Proviso.

Provided that such goods have been specially and distinctly manifested or declared at the time of import as for transhipment to some other British Indian or foreign port.

Rules regulating exercise of power.

4. The power conferred by section three shall be exercised subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe by notification in the official Gazette.

Levy of transhipment fee.

5. A transhipment fee on each bale or package of any goods or class of goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rates and under such regulations as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time prescribes by notification in the official Gazette.

Power to prohibit transhipment.

6. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by order notified in the Gazette of India, prohibit the transhipment, at any specified port or at all ports, of any specified class of goods, or prescribe any special mode of transhipping any specified class of goods, and may, by like notification, cancel such order.

Duty on opium re-exported by sea.

7. Opium imported by sea into any British Indian port may, if the Local Government think fit, but not otherwise, be re-exported by sea from the same port on payment of a duty equal in amount to the fee to which it would have been liable if it had been transhipped at such port.

Act to be read as part of Act VI of 1863.

8. This Act shall be read as part of the Consolidated Customs Act, and shall not be construed as in any respect limiting the power of the customs officers to levy duty or to require such bonds or other securities as are authorized by the same Act.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 19.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 1 OF 1873.

A Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb.

Preamble.

WHEREAS the law relating to appeals and reviews of judgment in the Courts established in the Panjáb has been amended by an Act of which the second section provides that it shall continue in force to the thirtieth day of April 1873: And whereas it is expedient to repeal that Act and to re-enact it without prescribing any period for its continuance; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Appeals' Act, 1873:"

Extent.

It extends to the territories for the time being under the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force at once.

Repeal of Act VII of 1868.

2. Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is repealed.

Appeals when to lie.

3. An appeal shall lie from the decrees of the Courts of original and appellate jurisdiction to the Courts authorized under Act No. XIX of 1865 (The Panjáb Courts' Act) and Act No. IV of 1866 (The Panjáb Chief Court Act) to hear appeals, except where such decrees are by law declared final.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply to appeals.

4. All appeals falling within the jurisdiction of the Courts established in conformity with the said Acts shall, save as in the said Acts and in this Act is otherwise provided, be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, with the modifications subject to which it was extended to the Panjáb, by notification of Government, dated the twelfth day of September 1866.

Second regular appeals.

5. If the decision of a Deputy Commissioner or of a Commissioner passed in regular appeal reverse or modify the decision of the Court of original jurisdiction on a point material to the merits of the case, the Commissioner, where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Deputy Commissioner, and the Chief Court where the decision shall have been passed on regular appeal by the Commissioner, may receive a second appeal, if, on a perusal of the grounds of appeal and of copies of the judgments of the Courts below, a further consideration of the case appear to the Commissioner or the Chief Court (as the case may be) requisite for the ends of justice.

Time for presenting appeal.

6. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, accompanied by copies of the judgments of the lower Courts, shall be presented in the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shows sufficient cause to the satisfaction of such Court for not having presented the memorandum of appeal within such period, that is to say, within sixty days if the appeal lie to the Court of a Deputy Commissioner or Commissioner, and within ninety days if the appeal lie to the Chief Court.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the judgment and decree appealed against was pronounced and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment and decree from which the appeal is made.

Confirmation of decision of lower Court.

7. When a memorandum of appeal, or an application for the admission of a special appeal, has been registered, the Appellate Court may, if it sees fit, after fixing a time for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and hearing him accordingly if he appears at such time, confirm the decision of the lower Court, without sending intimation of the appeal to such Court and without issuing notice to the respondent.

Chief Court may remove appeals.

8. The Chief Court of the Panjáb may, whenever it thinks proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect or for purposes of justice, remove and try any appeal falling within the jurisdiction of any Court subject to its superintendence.

Review of judgment.

9. Any person considering himself aggrieved by a decree of a Court of original jurisdiction from which no appeal shall have been preferred to a superior Court, or by a decree of a District or Divisional Court from which no regular or special appeal shall have been admitted by the Chief Court, or by a decree of the Chief Court from which either no appeal may have been preferred to Her Majesty in Council, or, an appeal having been preferred, no proceedings in the suit have been transmitted to Her Majesty in Council;

and who, from the discovery of new matter or evidence which was not within his knowledge, or could not have been adduced by him, at the time when such decree was passed, or from any other good or sufficient reason, may be desirous of obtaining a review of the judgment passed against him,

may apply for a review of judgment by the Civil Court which passed the decree, or by any Court to which the business of the former Court has been transferred.

Judgments of Civil Courts subject to revision only as provided by Act.

10. Except as hereinbefore provided, the judgments of the Civil Courts established in conformity with the said Acts and with Act No. III of 1868 (to authorize the Local Government of the Panjáb to invest any person with the powers of an Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár) shall not be subject to revision.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act No. VII of 1868 (to amend the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb) is a temporary measure, and (as it stands) will expire on the 30th April 1873. The object of this Bill (which has been prepared at the request of the Local Government) is to prolong the provisions of the Act indefinitely.

It has been thought better to repeal and re-enact the substance of Act VII of 1868 than to increase the number of laws in the Statute-book. The opportunity has been taken to make two verbal amendments (suggested by the learned Judges of the Chief Court of the Panjáb) in sections 3 and 4 of the present Act.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th January 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 2 OF 1873.

A Bill for the levy of Port-dues in the Ports of British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient from time to time to bring Ports in British Burma under the provisions of Act No. XXII of 1855 (for the regulation of Ports and Port-dues) and to make regulations for the levy of dues in such Ports without the necessity of passing a new Act for each occasion; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Port-dues Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends only to the ports of British Burma which shall have been declared subject to the said Act No. XXII of 1855 :

To be read with Act XXII of 1855.

It shall be read with and taken as part of the same Act ;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Power to declare maximum amount of port-dues leviable in Burma.

2. In every case in which the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, has declared or hereafter declares any port in British Burma to be subject to the said Act, he may, with the like sanction, by the same or any subsequent declaration, and notwithstanding anything contained in section forty-one of the said Act, further declare—

(a.) the maximum amount of dues to be levied in such port,

(b.) the conditions and modifications under which such dues shall be levied, and may also from time to time, with the like sanction, vary such maximum amount, conditions and modifications.

What vessels chargeable.

Limitation of rate.

3. Provided that the dues so authorized shall be charged only on sea-going vessels of the burden of ten tons and upwards, and shall not exceed the rate of four annas for every ton of burden.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to regulate the levy of Port-dues in Mergui, and any other port of British Burma to which Act XXII of 1855 may be extended. Legislation in this direction has already taken place respecting Rangoon, Maulmain, Bassein, Kyuk Phyu and Akyáb. The Bill is so framed as to render it henceforward unnecessary to pass a special Act for every port.

The maximum fee leviable will be four annas per ton.

The Bill has been prepared at the desire of the Local Government and the Marine Department of the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

FLOODS IN THE RIVER MAHANUDDY IN JUNE AND JULY 1872.

No. 3101, dated Cuttack, the 7th September 1872.

From—J. P. H. WALKER, Esq., Superintending Engineer, Orissa Circle,

To—The Officiating Chief Engineer, Bengal, Irrigation Branch.

I have the honor, in continuation of my No. 2224 of the 16th July 1872, to submit a report on the effects of the flood on the Mahanuddy of the 30th June to 4th July last in breaching the embankments of the different rivers and on the injury to the country generally caused thereby. In the report just quoted I was able, shortly after the occurrence of the flood, to describe its extent and action on the protective works of Cuttack and the embankments of the rivers in the vicinity of the city. At that time the country was so completely still under submergence by flood water, that I could afford little reliable information as to what was the state of affairs in the delta. I now beg to supply all the information I have been able to collect regarding the range of the floods in the different rivers between Cuttack and the sea, and the inundation of the country lying between the rivers.

In proportion to the increase of volume of water sent down the Katjooree and thence through the Koakhye, Bargovy, and Dyah, each succeeding high flood has been more disastrous in its effects on the District of Pooree. From all the evidence I have as yet been able to gather as to the height of the flood for a distance of 60 miles above Naraje, I conclude that in vertical range the flood of the 4th July last was 4 inches lower than the great flood of 1855. It is only by comparing the range of the different floods at points in the course of the river above influences of deltaic character, that any real comparison can be drawn between one flood and another. Even in the higher reaches, especially in the neighbourhood of large affluents, it is probable that there is a considerable degree of oscillation communicated to the surface of the main river, though how far this great throb may extend before it dies out would be difficult to determine. Other causes, such as a sharp bend in the river, or a strong gale of wind blowing across the current over a wide basin like that of Banki, or that between Cuttack and Naraje, may produce great local disturbance in the normal slope of the surface. To such causes, I have no doubt, is due the conflicting levels assigned to high floods at points where the relative heights are attested by seemingly reliable marks and testimony.

There seems no doubt, however, from the description of the breaches and the state of the country given by the Executive Engineer of the Pooree Division in his report, hereto attached, that whatever may have been the relative height of the late flood compared with the great floods of 1834 and 1855, it produced an accumulation of water over the Pooree District never previously experienced, and to which the central delta was not in the same degree subject,

The River Katjooree just opposite Cuttack throws off the Koakhye, a provision that acts like a great safety valve for the protection of the city. Through the Koakhye and its branches —the Koosbhuddra, the Bargovy, and the Dyah—about one-third of the whole discharge of the Katjooree is carried off to the sea;—the calculated volume of the Katjooree flood opposite Cuttack being 762,882 cubic feet per second, and that of the Koakhye just below its take-off being 259,800 cubic feet per second.*

It will make the breaches on the Pooree Rivers—viz., the Koosbhuddra, the Bargovy, and the Dyah—perfectly comprehensible, when I state the proportional volume, of the 265,045 cubic feet carried by their common head, the Koakhye, each river can discharge. At the upper limit of tidal range—or a little more than one-sixth of what the Koakhye takes off from the Katjooree opposite Cuttack. The surplus water which during the ten days the late flood lasted amounted to 3,000 million cubic yards of water spilled through breaches and over the banks into the country.

Other rivers, however, contributed largely to the inundation of the District of Pooree. On referring to the map it will be seen that the district is bounded on the west by the comparatively high lands of the Dandemal, Khoorda, and Ramneewar estates. Four main streams drain this up-land and hilly tract of country, viz., the Barung, Bulbhuddra, and Gangooa Nullahs, and the small river the Moonagoonee. These streams all drain into the Koakhye and its continuation, the Dyah, which is the most westerly of all the deltaic channels.

Barung, Bulbhuddra, and Gangooa Nullahs.

The Barung Nullah was originally a mere high level spill of the Mahanuddy and the Katjooree. The land for 3 miles to the west of Naraje skirting the south bank of the Mahanuddy is pretty low, and communicates with the valley of the Barung, the true head of which is on the right bank of the Katjooree immediately below Naraje. The embankment on the right bank of the Mahanuddy above Naraje was breached in five places, the breaches aggregating 1,500 feet in length. These breaches, together with two others at the head of the Barung Nullah, took place almost simultaneously during the night of the 3rd July, when the flood was within a few hours of its highest level, and may to a small extent have moderated the height of the flood when things were at their worst in Cuttack. The course taken by the water, after passing through these breaches, was a pretty direct one, and as there was very little water in the old spill channel, the current must have been pretty strong. This is evident from the damage it did in its course to the Mootrie lime-kilns and tramway leading from the kilns to the river side. These damages have been estimated by the Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, to be as follows:—

	Rs.
Repairs to Mootrie Tramway	3,460
Ditto to lime-kilns and buildings	1,408
Fine lime destroyed, 7,867 cubic feet	1,731
Refuse lime washed away, 90,000 cubic feet	7,275
Ditto ditto ditto, 22,500 „	1,688
Limestone ditto ditto, 1,200 „	75
Firewood ditto ditto, 24,520 „	184
Total ...	15,821

The length of bund carried away at the head of the Barung Nullah is noted in the margin. The Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, states that the bank across the head of the nullah slipped, but I suspect that its destruction was assisted by the current rushing parallel to and scouring its rear slope. The flood got round the end of the bund, where it abuts on the village of Naraje, and found a rough channel ready for it in the side ditches that skirted the bank. To this parallel current, I am inclined to think, was chiefly due the breaching of the Barung embankment.

1 breach 110 feet in length.

Previous to 1862, the right or south side of the River Katjooree between Naraje and the head of the River Koakhye was unembanked. One of the works of the late East India Irrigation and Canal Company was to construct an embankment from Naraje along the bank of the river to the point where it was designed to lead off the Pooree Canal. The river has within the last nine years greatly eroded its right bank, and much of the embankment at the end next Beedarpore and Chargurria has gone with the foreshore into the river. Two and a half miles of the right bank of the Katjooree is thus left unembanked, and over this space the spill water passed with a depth of from 5 to 7 feet, the direction of the current being toward the River Koakhye. In its course the spill water united with the floods passing down the Barung Nullah above described. In its way to the Koakhye, the combined volume was arrested by the road from Cuttack to Ganjam, which was directly at right angles to the course of the current. From the head of the River Koakhye, where the road commences, to the high ground already mentioned as skirting the right bank of the Katjooree, is a distance of 3 miles. The bridges in the margin occur throughout this length. The aggregate length of waterway is 340 feet, but this proved of little account in carrying off the volume of water requiring vent. The road was speedily overtopped and breached in six places, each breach at the height of flood being a deep and rapid river.

* These are the results of Major J. C. Harris' calculations, but I think the discharge is over-estimated.

This great body of water, augmented by spill and breach water from the right bank of the Koakhye itself, passed over the low lands of Killahs Pattia and Gurkand lying between the Koakhye and the hills. It then found an outlet into the Koakhye by the lower channel of the Barung. Its course over the low lands south of the Barung was arrested a little by the embankments along the Bulbhuddra Nullah, but they were shortly after topped and "almost completely obliterated" in many places. Between the Bulbhuddra Nullah and the high laterite ridge of Bhovaneswar there is a stretch of very low and rich land, which the Executive Engineer states has been nearly destroyed for cultivation by the sand carried in through the breaches. The villages of Bankwall and Bassooaghye have suffered particularly.

There are numerous small breaches and four large ones reported in the right bank of the Bulbhuddra Nullah. The large breaches are each about 400 feet in length and are said to be very deep. The aggregate length of the bunds on the nullah breached is 1,950 feet. The depth and spread of the flood in this part of the country can only be understood by those acquainted with the neighbourhood of Bhovaneswar. The Deputy Collector of Khoordah, Mr. W. C. Taylor, states in his report to the Collector of Pooree that the flood rose to the plinth of the enclosing walls of the Rameswar, and above the enclosing walls of the Magheswar Temple of the Bhovaneswar group.

Still passing on, this mischievous current reached the low ground between the mouth of the Gugooa or Gangooa Nullah and the Dyah. At this point there was little or no difference between the flood in the Dyah and the flood on the low land west of it. If anything, the water in the Gangooa had the superior level. I need not trace this destructive flank current further. Its further progress was arrested by the high ground that skirts the right bank of the Dyah opposite Koontee; the heavy breaching of the left bank of the Dyah just above and below this part is evidence of the excess volume of water thrown into the river by the Gangooa Nullah.

KOAKHYE RIVER.

1. Breach at Noaghur, left bank, 300 feet in length	Embankment 12 feet high; ground scoured out 12 to 15 feet below natural level of country.
2. Breach at Kacheramal, left bank, 400 feet in length	No scour..
3. Breach at Nourcunta, left bank, 60 feet in length	Scoured very deep.

The water from the above three breaches flooded the country lying between the river and the Pooree Road. The road acted as a dam and caused the villages in the intervening space to be flooded. Mr. Supervisor Chalon, who was in the Phoolnacra Bungalow at the time, was requested repeatedly by the villagers to allow the road to be cut. This he declined to do; but although the road would in all probability have ultimately been overtopped in any case, there is little doubt that one or more of the breaches in the trunk road were caused by the villagers making cuts in it.

4. Breach at Munchessur, right bank, 80 feet in length	These breaches added considerably to the large body of water flowing down the low lands between the Bulbhuddra Nullah and Bhovaneswar as already described.
5. Breach at Pandra, right bank, 70 feet in length
Breaches between Korcunta and Kunia, right bank	The Executive Engineer states that the villages of Pandia, Munchessur, Korcunta, and Kunia suffered greatly.
6. (1) 30 feet in length	1,500 feet of embankment more or less damaged.
7. (2) 300 " "
8. (3) 300 " "
9. (4) 350 " "
	The people were driven out of their houses, and had to seek refuge on such pieces of embankment as remained above the flood.

RIVER DYAH.

The Executive Engineer says of the embankments on this river that generally the destruction has been most complete. The head of the river has widened, the foreshore on both sides having been considerably cut away.

1. Breach at Sirdaipore, left bank, 1,200 feet in length	Retired lines aggregating 2,500 feet in length will be required at these points.
2. Breach at Nooagaon, right bank, 1,000 feet in length

3. (1) 200 feet in length	Scoured very deep; retired line of embankment 600 feet in length required.
4. (2) 120 „ „
5. Breach at Tikkunparra, right bank, 120 feet in length	Scoured down 8 feet below surface of country; sluice carried away; 36 houses ditto; sand deposited over a large area of country.
6. Breach at Makurba, left bank, 110 feet in length.
7. Breaches at Atherbaga, left bank; five breaches aggregating 400 feet in length	Embankment topped for 1½ miles and much cut up by flood rushing over it.
8. Breach at Unthapore, left bank, 1,000 feet in length	The water from these breaches in passing into the Noon drainage nullah cut up the Piplee and Koontee Road very much.
9. Breaches at Burreemool and Bussuntpore, badly breached for 700 feet in length, less damaged for 800 feet in length	Embankment at this point 12 feet in height; scoured 20 feet for a distance of 700 feet below natural surface of country.

Four breaches in Mouzah Singbullorampore :—

10. (1) 300 feet in length.	Scoured 5 to 7 feet below surface of country.
11. (2) 300 „ „
12. (3) 380 „ „
13. (4) 200 „ „
14. Breach at Neepore, left bank, 950 feet in length	New bank 1,100 feet in length required; foreshore scoured down very badly.
15. Breach at Koosmundul, left bank, 100 feet in length.

Two breaches at Balungurah, right bank :—

16. (1) 90 feet in length.
17. (2) 200 „ „
18. Two breaches at Sissoapara, left bank, aggregating 600 feet in length	Requires new embankment 800 feet in length. The Executive Engineer states that ⅓rd of the discharge of the Dyah went through this breach, which is known to have caused great distress in Pergunnah Serain.

The last 8 miles of embankments on the left bank of the Dyah to the Chilka Lake were submerged and much cut up, and a considerable expense must be incurred in strengthening them. It will be observed that nearly all the breaches in the Dyah embankments occurred on the left bank. The general direction taken by the spill and breach water from Sirdaipore, but especially from the Untapore breaches downwards, was all towards the valley of the Noon River, which is the great natural line of escape for surplus flood water in this part of the country, and which was designed by Colonel Rundall as the line of his escape No. 3 for the surplus discharge of the River Dyah. By this escape, which was calculated to be 6 miles in length with a width of 380 yards, 30,000 cubic feet per second were proposed to be taken off into the Chilka Lake.

River Noon.

The influx of water thus carried into the Noon from the breaches in the left bank of the Dyah was estimated by Mr. Executive Engineer Campbell to have greatly damaged 10,000 lineal feet of embankment in Mouzah Kurmala, and to have nearly destroyed the following length of embankments :—

	Lineal feet.
In Kurmala Mouzah	5,000
„ Neepore (breached completely)	950
Between Sirdaipore and Kangooria	10,000

River Bargovy.

On referring to the flood map, hereto attached, it will be seen that the Bargovy has contrasted with its sister river the Dyah, comparatively few breaches. The two largest, however, were very heavy and had such an effect in relieving the river that for 12½ and 11 miles, respectively, below the Mukundasspore and Ruthpoorsuttumpore breaches, the flood was confined within banks.

1. Breach at Mogulpore, right bank, length 450 feet	The water from this breach flooded the whole country between the Bargovy and the Pooree Road as far as Piplee. The breach water found a vent down the Khaniadaree Nullah.
2. Breach at Gungapara, right bank, 250 feet in length	This breach was caused by the water which rushed through the Mogulpore breach returning to the Bargovy.
3. Breach at Mukundasspore, left bank, 300 feet in length	The whole country was deeply flooded by this breach, which was scoured out to the level of the river bed. The Executive Engineer, who saw the country towards the Dhunnooa on the 8th July, four days after the flood had begun to subside, states that the water stood on the country to the south-east half way up the highest trees. The damage done here was very great.
4. Breach at Ruthpoorsuttumpore, right bank, 250 feet in length	Mr. Campbell estimates that about half the discharge of the Bargovy must have passed through this breach over the country. The country behind the embankment is here almost as low as the river bed. The water from this breach inundated the whole country down to the Pooree Road, which was breached heavily in three places north of Damoodurpore. The damage to the country was very great.

5. Breach at Sealtota, right bank, 60 feet in length.

6. Breach at Bassoodaipore, left bank, 40 feet in length ... ... } The country stretching to the westward of the Bargovy between Dobunda and Rammall and thence to the southward was covered with a sea of water, in which the villages looked like small specks of islands.

The direction taken by the water which spilled through the breach at Mukoondasspore was chiefly down the valley of the Dhunnooa. This low line of country was chosen by Colonel Rundall for the escape No. 2. The width of the escape channel was intended to be 373 yards and calculated to take off 30,000 cubic feet per second. The Dhunnooa Channel drains the country between the Rivers Bargovy and Koosbhuddra, into the latter of which it discharges within 6 miles of the sea face. Portion of the water vented by the Mukoondasspore escape found its way into the Sur Lake, north-east of Pooree. This lake, as is well known, acts as a great compensation reservoir for the floods of the River Bargovy, the channel of communication being the Kanchee Nullah. When the Bargovy is in flood, there is a current from it into the Sur Lake, and when the flood in the Bargovy is subsiding, the water returns from the Sur Lake into the Bargovy. The Kanchee is often the cause of heavy breaching in the Pooree Road at a point where the former throws off a branch towards the West Kanchee. The banks are very high, and the country on both sides of the East Kanchee as far as Raneetulao being excessively low, usually a breach in the Kanchee causes most serious mischief; for the flow and re-flow of silt bearing water has caused such heavy deposits that the current is almost throttled in its passage in many places. The very thick groves of Poolung trees, growing between the natural river edge and the artificial embankment, still further arrest the current of a high fresh. The Sur Lake on the occasion of the late flood seems to have been inoperative, so far as the Bargovy was concerned, and the Executive Engineer explains this by stating that the Ruthpoorsuttumpore breach, which occurred a short distance above the off-take of the Kanchee, so reduced the flood of the Bargovy below, that the discharge through the Kanchee was no higher than an ordinary flood.

River Ruttuncheera.

The Ruttuncheera is a drainage channel that runs parallel to the Bargovy in its tidal range at the distance of 1 to 2½ miles. It lies to the west of the Bargovy, and carries off the surplus flood of this river in the same manner as the Noon drainage carries off the excess flood of the Dyah. The whole of the embankments were submerged and much broken by the waves.

The Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, calculates that 77 per cent. of the whole of the water taken off from the Katjooree by the Koakhye passed over the country. I have shown that the district received over its surface a much greater supply of flood than that brought in by the Koakhye. The great receptacle for the water carried by the rivers I have as yet described is the Chilka Lake; and it may easily be conceived that the condition of the lake and its outlet during a high flood must have a great influence on the capacity of the Rivers Bargovy and Dyah for discharging their floods. On the 25th of June, five days before the first rush of the flood came down, the mouth of the Chilka had a width at high water of 450 feet and a depth of 13 feet 8 inches, these dimensions being reduced at low water to 300 feet and 9 feet. Such an outlet was plainly inadequate to the discharge of 200,000 cubic feet per second, which was thrown into the Pooree rivers on the 30th June. The surface of the lake, which is 345 square miles in area, therefore rapidly rose, from eight to nine hours' discharge of a maximum flood being sufficient to raise the surface level 1 foot. On the 13th of July the outlet had increased in width and depth very considerably, the figures for high and low water being given below:—

	Width.	Depth.
High water	1,200 feet ...	45 feet.
Low „	1,050 „ ...	37½ „

These dimensions would give a section capable of discharging the flood with a reasonable velocity, but it probably took two or three days of flood to scour out such a section under a slowly increasing head. The level of the lake was greatly raised, and this, combined with the cyclone of the 1st July, which was partially felt thus far south, so effectually blocked the outlets of the rivers at the north end that the surface of the lake was extended northward by fully ⅓rd of its usual area. The Pergunnah Chowbiscood and Killahs Mallood and Pareecood were particularly affected by the inundation. The lands were submerged so long that all hope of a crop this season is lost.

The next river in the Pooree District of which the breaches require notice is the—River Koosbhuddra.

This river takes off from the Koakhye higher up than the Bargovy and Dyah. Its course to the sea is more direct than any of the large rivers in the district, and its slope of bed is consequently greater. Its carrying capacity is, however, small, and it is choked at the head by a high shoal. It consequently breached its embankments almost from the head at Balleeunta.

As already stated, the spill from the Bingarpore breaches, right bank, combined with the discharge from the Mukundasspore breach in the left bank of the Bargovy, took the line of the Dhunnooa, and heavily inundated Pergunnahs Poorubdoobye and Oldhar lying east of the Sur Lake.

SOOROOA RIVER.

The embankments down the right bank of the River Soorooa belong to the Pooree Irrigation Division, and on no river have the breaches occurred of a more serious character than on this. The Soorooa is a loop river that leaves the Katjooree a little below Cuttack and re-joins the main river 11 miles further down. It is the deep water channel of the Katjooree, and any breaches on the south or concave side are generally most difficult to close and produce widespread injury.

4. Breach at Sunkterass, right bank, 3,200 feet in length ... ... This is the most extensive breach that occurred during the flood. The country behind the embankment is very low, and the current has scoured down the natural surface to a great depth.
5. Breach at Kullunda, 200 feet in length.

7. (2) 100 „ „

The whole of the spill and breach water from the right bank of the Soorooa took the direction of the Prachee River, which serves as the main drainage channel for the country lying between the Rivers Koosbhuddra and Daib. As a river the Prachee is small, but its basin is well defined, and, as like Koosbhuddra, it has a high slope of bed and traverses a country of comparatively poor quality, it was selected by Colonel Rundall as the line of escape for the inundation of the Katjooree to the sea. From the neighbourhood of Kulluvda, where the great breach occurred, a narrow but deep nullah drains the rich Pergunnah Syello. By this drainage the spill and breach water from the right bank of the Soorooa was conducted into the Prachee and the Daib. The Kulluvda breach has been scoured so deep that it has only been partially closed. Hitherto it has not been possible to procure enough men to construct the broken bund simultaneously. The consequence is each fresh rise destroys what work has been done in the interval between the floods.

I have now completed the list of the principal breaches in the Pooree series of rivers. It may be judged from the account that the District of Pooree has had more than its share of the inundation, and this no doubt has been the case. In 1866 when this district suffered so heavily from inundation, there were 52 breaches in the embankments of the seven rivers given in the margin. Between the 30th June and 4th July last 41 breaches occurred in the embankments, distributed as shown below. It is probable that the number of breaches in the Noon, Ruttuncheera, and Soonamoohi exceeded those of 1866, although no particulars are given. The dimensions of the breaches in width and depth certainly are very much greater in the late flood than those of any previous years :—

The dividing embankment at Naraje belongs to the Pooree series. I need not allude to it further here, as I described the action of the flood upon it fully in my letter No. 2224 of the 16th July.

I subjoin the abstract of an estimate prepared by the Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, showing the cost of re-filling the breaches, repairing the embankments where damaged, and strengthening to a degree sufficient to meet a flood of 77·00 on the gauge at Bellevue, Cuttack :—

MAHANUDDY DIVISION.

I have drawn extensively upon the report from Executive Engineer, Mahanuddy Division, who has taken much pains to collect and put together a lot of valuable information, in consequence of which the submission of his report to this office (received only on the 22nd ultimo) was delayed. I beg to attach it herewith in original.

In the Mahanuddy, the highest flood of this year at the circuit-house was 6 inches above the great flood of 1855, but this height was due to the afflux caused by the Mahanuddy dam and the extra water thrown into the Mahanuddy through the gaps in the dividing embankment, also probably in some measure to the bed of the Mahanuddy above Jobra having risen above what it was in 1855.

The dam at Jobra has raised the river bed, so that for the same flood-line the flood section has been reduced by 19,500 square feet, or about $\frac{1}{7}$th.

The flood level in the Mahanuddy at Cuttack at the circuit-house would probably have been 76·28 had no dams existed, or 1 foot lower than the flood of 1855, whereas at the Circuit-house it was 77·80 above mean sea, making a difference of rise of $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet due to afflux and extra water.

At the Jobra dam the readings of the gauges above and below that work were on the 30th June—

Below „	72·50

and on the 4th July—

giving a difference of 2 feet between the water above and below the dam.

The tail water at the dam was below the flood water of 1855, same spot, by about 9 inches according to Mr. Macmillan, taking flood level of 1855 as 74·60.

Below Buddimool the flood level of 1872 was 68·50, and that of 1855 is given by Major Harris at 68·72, but to this, Mr. Macmillan states, has to be added 9 inches for an error on the circuit-house B. M. The flood level of 1855 should be taken, therefore, at 69·50 near Buddimool.

At Mutgujpore the flood level of 1857 was 69·91, and the flood level of 1872 was 70·05, so that these two floods were nearly of a similar height at this point, but the conditions under which they acted were different, as the embankment did not breach this year close to Mutgujpore, whereas in 1857 the whole of the embankment near Mutgujpore was carried away, and a heavy breach at Khannugger on the left bank of the Katjooree brought a great influx of water from the Katjooree into the Mahanuddy.

The flood water from the Katjooree, which went through the Patnakea breach, near the 5th mile of the Taldunda Canal, stood on the inside of the Mahanuddy embankment at a level of 69·05, or 1 foot below what it was in the Katjooree near the same place.

The flood level of 1872 at Gutheraotputna in the Mahanuddy was 66·84, or 3¼ feet below that in the Katjooree at Mutgujpore, the distance between the two rivers at these villages being under 300 yards.

At Jeypore, where the Katjooree joins the Mahanuddy by a cross branch, the flood of 1872 read 35·10, that of 1871 31·40, and that of 1855 36·30 a quarter of a mile lower down the Mahanuddy. There appears to have been a gorging at this point in the Mahanuddy, and I cannot account for the great height of the flood at this point than by supposing that the Chittertollah carried a large portion of its volume southward into the Mahanuddy about the neighbourhood of Baboogunge. The supposition is in a measure confirmed by the comparatively low state of the Noon at Marsaghai.

The gauge at Paradeep read 6·90 on the 30th of June and 9·90 on the 4th of July 1872. Major Harris gives the flood level near this place 15·10 for 1855. Mr. Sub-Engineer O'Neill gives 11·35 as a flood level pointed out to him as that of 1855, and, judging from inquiries the Executive Engineer made at Bhootmoondee in reference to the floods, I suppose that 11·00 is about the true flood level of 1855.

I beg to call particular attention to these levels, because, as the flood of 1855 at Jeypore, 23 miles above Paradeep, was 1·20 foot above the flood of 4th July last, it is impossible to conceive that at Paradeep, a few miles from the mouth of the Mahanuddy, the flood of 1855 could have been four feet above the late flood. The presumption is that the figures given by Major Harris are, as has been long suspected, much too high here.

In 1855 the spill from the left bank of the Mahanuddy began at Dawokote and passed over the greater part of the left bank of the Mahanuddy, flowing viâ the Sooknoi and Gobree Nullahs and the branches connected with them to the sea. This year we had no spill from the head of the Beropa downwards on the left banks of the Mahanuddy and Noona.

In 1855 the spill from the right bank of the Mahanuddy began at the circuit-house, but this year it did not begin to flow over the country till the 6th mile below Cuttack. The water of the Katjooree River did not flow this year into the Mahanuddy as it did in 1855 between Cuttack and Mutgujpore, the embankment since constructed preventing it from taking this course.

On the right bank of the Katjooree and Mahanuddy, between Mondillo, Naraje, and Cuttack, the flood spill of this year is nearly similar to what it was in 1855, but the Khoordah Road is higher now than it was in 1855, and there was no embankment across the head of the Barung Nullah and down the right bank of the Katjooree in those days.

The flood of this year stood above 77·50 on the Bellevue gauge for ten days: that of 1855 singly stood above that height for six days only.

The flood which entered Cuttack in 1834 stood at 77·50 on the Baptist Mission College, and was about 3 feet over the college floor. This seems to have been a back water from below the lower end of the revetment on the Katjooree River near the Pooree Ghât. The floor of the Mission College is 9½ feet below the flood level of 1855 on the Bellevue gauge. A high flood in olden times would easily get into the town of Cuttack from below the Pooree Ghât on the Katjooree and the circuit-house on the Mahanuddy, as there were no continuous embankments, and the Pooree Road was much lower than it is now.

On the Katjooree this year, the first breach is at the head of the Soorooa on the right bank, whereas in 1855 the first breach was near the head of the Koakhye. On the left bank the first breach is below Mutgujpore, whereas in 1855 the first breach was at Khannugger.

On the Soorooa the breaches on the right bank were higher up the river than those of this year.

The flood level of the Daib at the mouth of the Muggra Nullah Assistant Engineer Lieutenant Elliston gives as 11·13 for 1872. This is about 1 foot below that reported for 1855, and we have used 12·00 as the highest known flood level at this point in connection with the Machgong Canal Extensions. The flood level of 1855 at the head of the Daib was 53·92, and that of 1872 was 52·57.

At Singarpore, 22 miles below Cuttack, the flood water of the Katjooree this year was about the same level as that of 1871, although the former was 5¾ feet higher at Cuttack than the latter.

At the head of the Daib River the flood of 1872 was 53·92; that of 1871 was 52·57, or 1·35 feet only below that of this year.

At Singarpore, near the head of the Olunka, the highest flood of 1872 was 43·82, and that of 1871 was 43·93. The two floods were nearly similar in height, although the flood of 1872 was 83·30 at Cuttack on the Bellevue gauge, and that of 1871 only 77·50 on the same gauge. I attribute this entirely to the enormous amount of water carried southward by the breaches on the right bank of the Soorooa.

Breaches.

I append a statement showing the length of embankments, canals, and distributaries which have been breached and damaged by the floods of 1872. The length of embankments breached in the Cuttack District in 1855 was 21¾ miles, vide Major Harris' reports.

I also attach a statement showing the number and size of the breaches and the damage done to the various embankments, canals, and distributaries in this division in 1872, also the cost of repairs:—

The breach in the Taldunda Canal at Putnakea (5th mile) was caused by the water in the Katjooree backing up the Cuttack drainage channel and filling the low ground between the Katjooree embankment and the canal. The waves wore away the bank and caused it to slip; the rush of water broke through the south bank of the canal and nearly breached the embankment on the right bank of the Mahanuddy, which is here only a few hundred feet distant. This embankment had a very narrow escape. For 1½ miles the waves washed half the section away. The Overseer showed great presence of mind in cutting the left or north bank of the canal at a suitable spot to let off the water, thus inundating the country above Beereebatty. This no doubt saved the Beereebatty Lock.

The flood burst the old embankment in the right bank of the Mahanuddy at Neemasapore, and burst with great force on the canal bank opposite Eydpore. A considerable gap was formed in the canal banks, and to this eruption is due much of the damage done to the higher distributaries.

The various breaches enumerated in the Taldunda Canal below this point were without doubt due to the cutting of the banks by the people living along the banks of the Sook Pyka. In one place, Katooa, near Ramcumonpore, the villagers turned out in a body, and, despite the remonstrances of the patrol and the villagers on the other bank who were aware of the devastation such an act would cause to their lands, cut the north bank with most destructive consequence. At another point a man was washed into the breach he had formed by nicking the bank and drowned. At various points half-formed cuts were found in the north bank of this canal where the villagers had attempted to breach it.

The bank of the Machgong Canal was saved by the exertions of Mr. Overseer Junior, assisted by the Contractor Opendro Mahanty, who worked very well indeed. Mr. Junior kept men at work all night with torches. The bank was so nearly overtopped, however, that it was only saved by placing turf along the crest.

The most important breaches in the rivers of the Mahanuddy Division were the following:—

In the right bank of Mahanuddy at Rama	600 feet in length.
In the left bank of the Soorooa at Tykuna. This was an enormous breach, but the area of land inundated was not more than 1½ square miles	1,500 feet in length.
In the left bank of the Olunka, at Chattra, two breaches	600 feet in length.
In the River Pankpal, at Raipore	350 feet in length.

In the left bank of the Daib there were several large breaches, the largest of which occurred at Alipingle, which was 850 feet in length.

Beropa Division.

The works of the Kendrapara Canal and its distributaries are enclosed by the Rivers Mahanuddy, Chittertollah, and Noona on one side, and by the Beropa and Brahminee on the other. In the first six miles of the canal, and in detached lengths further down, the old river embankment was raised and relied upon to keep out a maximum flood. For the rest of the canal the bank next the river had dimensions given to it to serve as a flood embankment. The river embankment between the head of the canal and the first lift-lock is not continuous, being broken up in places by large sand-hills of irregular outline. As the space between the canal and the river bund is low, the villagers, to get rid of the water, cut drains through the bank to let the water off into the river. Either the water got in at one of these drains, or the river bank was overtopped, for the flood filled the intermediate space, but fortunately did not breach the canal bund. The accumulated water found a vent to the north through the Sonakairwass syphon under the canal. Some distance above, the Nankara syphon was discharging the flood water of the Beropa under the canal in the opposite direction. In fact, the lower syphon was taking off what the upper syphon was bringing into the low ground between the Mahanuddy and the canal. This part of the canal naturally caused great anxiety to the Executive Engineer. Below I give sketch sections, showing the extent to which the canal flood bank and Mahanuddy left bank were washed from Kyra to Burrabooria Lock, and from Burrabooria to Authora and Katar:—

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	Remarks.
From Keyra to Ondaisai.	Main Canal, right bank.		This is a flood bank and is one-fifth cut away for a length of 2,900 running feet.
From Ondaisai to Sathbatia.	Mahanuddy, left bank.		One-fourth cut away for a length of 8,700 running feet; 1½ feet blown away by wind, as the bank is formed by sand.
From Sathbatia to Navooriboy.	Main Canal, right bank.		This is a flood bank and is one-fourth cut away for a length of 2,400 running feet.
From Navooriboy to Koosunpore.	Mahanuddy, left bank.		One-fourth cut away for a length of 4,900 running feet; 1½ feet blown away by wind, as the bank is formed by sand only.
From Koosunpore to 3½ Distributary.	Main Canal, right bank.		This is a flood bank and is half cut away for a length of 5,950 running feet.
From 3½ Distributary to No. 2 Lock.	Ditto ...		This is a flood bank and is one-fifth cut away for a length of 1,030 running feet.

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	REMARKS.
From Barboodia to Authora.	Main Canal, right bank.		One-fourth slipped inside of Main Canal for a length of 1,200 running feet.
Ditto ...	Mahanuddy, left bank.		One-fourth cutaway for a length of 3,500 running feet.
At Patpore Village	Ditto ...		One-eighth cutaway for a length of 300 running feet.
At Catar Pannoosai.	Ditto ...		One-fourth cutaway for a length of 400 running feet.

At Kendupatna, on the 16th mile of the canal, I expected to hear of much erosion of the river bank, which for two or three years back has been coming closer and closer to the Divisional Bungalow. The river, however, did not rise so high as might have been anticipated, and the groyne work along the foot of the bank seems to have acted well.

In the 3rd reach between the 18th and 21st mile of the canal near Burpudda and Bulliapudda, the river bank was worn down to within a few inches of the water, before the flood began to subside. The real danger to the canal here lies in the possibility of the canal bank being cut by the people of the above-mentioned villages, as they are often tempted to do this, under the impression that it will greatly lower the flood level. The Executive Engineer, Beropa Division, rightly suggests that instead of making a retired line, which must otherwise now be done, it will be better to induce the people to choose a new village site on the landward side of the canal. The people of the village of Hanupore, a little below Burpudda, encamped during the flood on the canal bank.

The breach in the bank of the Noona between Bulliapudda and Partheypore is 480 feet in length.

In the 3rd reach, 22nd mile, near the village of Sankelow, the Executive Engineer reports that the canal had a very narrow escape. A breach actually did occur, but it was stopped immediately, just as the water was pouring into the canal. As no earth was to be had on the side next the river to make up the bank, temporary bridges with openings for traffic were thrown across the canal. The Executive Engineer speaks highly of the way Temporary Supervisor Baboo Govind Chunder Dass persevered with an almost hopeless work, and the readiness he evinced in meeting difficulties. I have always noticed on this canal that the weakest points are in the middle of the reaches, where the flood line corresponds with the normal level of the canal bank and water surface. Above, the extra earth from the cutting gives the outer bank a clear preponderance of level over the flood, while below, the low fall the canal has, compared with the river, necessitates the banks being kept well above the ordinary margin allowed between crest of bank and flood line.

Between Kulpara and Marsaghai, a distance of 4½ miles, the canal bank is very much damaged. Last year with a very much lower flood the banks were all but overtopped, and sanction was given to raise them to such a height as would provide a safe margin over the level such a flood as that of the 4th July last might be expected to produce at Marsaghai. The extra height was given to the banks, and without doubt this saved the canal this year; not that the extra height was needed, but it gave the bank so much greater section that, when the inner slopes began to slip into the canal under the pressure from the river side, the bank had still sufficient section left to counterbalance the height of the flood outside. In other places where the slopes and crest of the bank next the river were worn away by the waves (and this was where the real danger lay), the addition made to the bank last year prevented it from being utterly worn away. The section of the bank was so reduced by the action of the waves that in places nothing but the inner slope was left. At three points there was extreme danger of the river bank giving, and it appears to have been saved only by the strenuous exertions of the Executive Engineer and Supervisor Baboo Govind Chunder Dass. The Executive Engineer speaks highly in praise of the way the Baboo persevered in the work and managed his coolies in the very worst of weather. The banks were only saved by an almost continuous revetment of bamboos, screw-pine and brushwood, &c., which had to be brought from a distance by boats. Had the Noona risen at Marsaghai, as was expected, in proportion to the rise of the flood at Cuttack, it would have been hard to save the canal banks, but the flood, in place of being 2 feet higher as we looked for, was 2 inches lower than the flood of August 3rd, 1871. I subjoin the levels at different points from Naraje downwards to illustrate the working of the flood :—

		Flood of 3rd August 1871.	Flood of 4th July 1872.	Difference.
Naraje	...	86·80	92·10	5·30
Jobra Weir ... above	...	72·00	75·95	3·95
Jobra Weir ... below	...	69·20	73·95	4·75
Kendupatna	...	45·82	48·00	2·18
Burpudda	...	Actual level not given ; level of flood same both years.
Marsaghai	...	15·20	15·00	·20

The levels were so contrary at Marsaghai to what might have been expected that some explanation should be sought for. The flood of 1855, which was a slightly greater flood than that of the 4th July last, read 16·00 at a point 2,000 feet below Marsaghai. The creek at Marsaghai 17 years ago was a very small channel compared with what it is now, but the left bank of the Noona for nearly 13½ feet presented a spill section, and the Gopea Muneebecoonda and other spill channels, now closed up by the canal, allowed a great volume of water to escape to the northward to the line of the Jumboo. I should say that, practically, so far as the flood level at Marsaghai is concerned, the conditions of the case have not much altered, for if the head of the creek leading to the Jumboo has widened greatly, thus reducing any previous tendency to gorge at this point, the Noona just above Marsaghai has now to carry all the spill that in 1855 passed over its left bank to the Jumboo. Perhaps the explanation of the matter is, not that this year's flood was so low, but that there may have been exceptional causes why last year's flood at Marsaghai was relatively so high. When it is considered that the actual difference of level between high flood level at Marsaghai, and high water during the high fresh at the anchorage, is only 4 feet, there is no difficulty in understanding that the tides may have a considerable influence on the level of the flood at Marsaghai. During the late flood the wind was from the south-west, and within two days of new moon, on the 3rd August 1871, the wind was south-east, and the moon was on the full two days previously.

From Kulparra to Marsaghai, the country to the north of the canal was for the most part under water as far as the embankment which extends from Kendraparra to Rajghur. The depth of the inundation was, however, moderate. About half way between Kulparra and Marsaghai, the Executive Engineer estimated the difference of level, between the flood in the Noona and the still water inundation north of the canal, at 7 feet. Between the two last locks the canal banks were described as looking like two long black ribbons surrounded on every side by water.

Nearly the whole of the country lying between the Chittertollah and Noona Rivers was submerged by the late flood. This is no unusual occurrence, and almost the only difference between the late flood and those of the last four years in Pergunnah Sooknai consisted in the extra depth of inundation.

On the 30th June, and 1st and 2nd July, a strong gale of wind blew from the south-west, and acting on an almost unbroken sheet of water 4 miles in extent raised the waves, and these, combined with a powerful current, nearly destroyed the last reach of the canal.

The following breaches and damages to embankments have been reported on the Rivers Noona, Chittertollah, Pyka, and Nullahs Bagni and Pota :—

Chittertollah, left bank	...	Kantaparee to Theymoonda,	100	lineal feet	... Completely gone.

The amount of water passing down the River Beropa during the height of the flood, tried by the formula calculating the discharge over weirs, was about 78,000 cubic feet per second only. The water surface above the weir was 71-80, + datum giving $8\frac{3}{10}$ feet as the depth of water passing over. This is 2½ feet lower than a maximum flood should rise to, according to the original calculations for the discharges down the Mahanuddy and Beropa. The discharge down this river was, therefore, far short of what it was designed to carry in such a flood as that of 4th July last. A great deal of mischief was done by the water spilling over both banks of the river however. It topped the right bank below Jugguthpore and swept across the country, destroying almost entirely distributary No. 0, and causing a great number of breaches in distributaries Nos. 1 to 4 with their branches and the village channels lately constructed from them. The spill and breach water took the line of the Sooknai drainage, and through it found its way back to the Beropa, doing, however, much damage as it passed along. At Baleetota the bund on the right bank of the Sooknai was breached in two places, and some very heavy breaching occurred in the right bank of the Beropa at Chasacund, where the Sooknai falls into the Beropa, as well as at Kortung, Jalesurputna, and Odam, further down the right bank of the Beropa; details of these breaches are given below:—

From Coospore to Tigerea the right bank of the Beropa is either not embanked at all, or is only dotted here and there with small ridges called zemindary bunds, but which do not deserve to be called embankments. Over this length the flood, in addition to the water that found its way across country from the breaches between Chasacund and Odam, passed uncontrolled into the Gobree, which is the great drainage line for the country lying between the Brahminee and Noona. The flood in the Gobree, combined with the spill from the Chota Brahminee, inundated the whole country east of Kendraparra to a great depth, and caused immense suffering among the villages. Below I give a memorandum of the damage done to the embankments on the Chota Brahminee:—

Below Tigerea for some distance the embankment, which has a small section, had the outer slope cut away from the crest downwards for a distance of 3,000 feet.

The embankments along the right bank of the Brahminee from Birda to Indpore and thence to Pattamoondee have escaped with slight injuries. Had the high banks at Mungulpore and Charparra gone, the Gobree would have become surcharged as in 1868, and immense damage would have followed to the lower branches of the distributaries Nos. 8 to 13 of the Kendraparra Canal.

I have just been furnished by the Kendraparra Canal Office with a list showing the extent to which the bunds of the different distributaries have been breached and otherwise injured. The information is given below in tabular form.

Below Pattamoondee no breaches occurred, but from Sancroopa and Ultang the bund was overtopped for 1,500 feet, the slopes on both sides being injured.

From Albha to Arajoory the river slope of the enbankment was cut away from the crest vertically for a length of about 5,000 feet. The Albha bund was only saved by revetting with bamboos and brushwood. In places half the section was scoured away.

From Arajoory to Modonpore the outer slopes suffered slightly, and the Damurpore Circle embankments were also a little damaged for a distance of about 3,000 feet.

Memorandum of breaches, &c., in the right bank of the Beropa and Brahminee from Chowdwar downwards, also in the Rivers Chota Brahminee and Gandakia, is given below.

The abstracts of the estimates of the cost of repairs caused by the late floods are subjoined. The total estimated expenditure is Rs. 1,47,985. The first estimates received from the Executive Engineer amounted to Rs. 1,73,000, but I have eliminated various works which, though necessary to place the country in better security than before against the effects of another such flood, can scarcely be classed with works for which the sanction of Government is sought to be obtained as necessitated by the late flood:—

At Padanpadah...	Beropa River, right bank.		The beginning of the embankment is cut away for a length of 50 feet.
Mookundoopore embankment.	Ditto ...		This is eaten away for a length of 200 feet and three-fourths gone.
At Mookundoopore.	Ditto ...		Two cuts made in the natural bank of the river, each 15 feet wide.
Sonkamoo embankment.	Ditto ...		The beginning of this embankment is cut away entirely for a length of 40 feet.
Ramasur embankment.	Ditto ...		Eaten away on the country side for a length of 1,000 feet, and ½ cut away.
Chasocund embankment.	Ditto ...		Embankment cut away at its commencement for a length of 200 feet.

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	REMARKS.
Badedolah village	Sooknadee, right.		This breached in two places for 50 feet in length and another 40 feet. This is not in line with the Beropa bund, but is thrown to prevent the back-water of Beropa from swamping the villages and country.
From Chasocund to Kortang.	Beropa River..		One-fourth eaten away for a length of 3,000 feet.
Chasocund embankment.	Ditto ...		This embankment was cut away for 20 feet in length in the beginning.
Kortang embankment.	Ditto ...		Cut away in the beginning for 50 feet.
At Julasurpurpatna.	Ditto ...		Breached 150 feet in length.
From Julasurpatna to Odam.	Ditto ...		One-fourth gone for a length of 1,600 feet.

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	REMARKS.
At Odam ..	Beropa River...		The natural bank cut into by the flood, a gap 50 feet wide.
At Ombasouri ...	Ditto ...		Four gaps cut in the natural bank, 30 feet wide each.
From Matia to Ambree, about 5,000 running feet of embankment cut away.	Chota Brahminee, left.		Half gone.
From Ambree to Holoderpore, about 8,000 run-feet cut away, viz., 4,000 running feet.	Ditto ...		One-third gone.
4,000 running feet	Ditto ...		Comparatively less than above.
From Holoderpore to Tegeria, about 2,000 running feet of embankment cut away.	Ditto ...		One-fourth gone.

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	REMARKS.
From Sompara to Katiapara, about 2,500 running feet of embankment cut away.	Chota Brahminee, left.		One-fourth gone.
From Katiapara to Soojunpore, flood water overtopped the embankment 1 foot; of this bund 2,000 running feet cut away.	Ditto ...		One-fourth-gone.
From Soojunpore to Doorpore, damages to embankment very trifling.	Ditto ...		Here and there cut away.
1,500 running feet	Ditto ...		One-fourth gone.
From Kudulshy to Boro Rahama, about 3,000 running feet of the embankment cut away. 1,500 running feet.	Ditto ...		Seriously damaged; three-fourths gone.

Particulars.	River.	Section of the damaged Bund.	REMARKS.
From Boro Rahama to Suncroopa, flood water overtopped the embankments; 1′ 6″ bunds seriously damaged; both sides of it cut away; bund breached in 6 places; one 380 running feet long, and the rest about 80 running feet each; depth from 6 to 10 feet below the surface.	Chota Brahminee, left.		Seriously damaged.
Chundiapully, about 5,000 running feet seriously damaged; water overtopped the bunds 2 feet vertically.	Gondolhea, left		Half gone; seriously damaged.
From Amerabad to Niginpore, bunds all gone, except little bits here and there, 4 miles.	Ditto ...

Brahminee Division.

The works of this division are bounded on the south and east by the Beropa and its off-shoots, the Chota and Burra Gengootee, and on the north by the River Brahminee and its deep channel branch, the Kimerea. The relative height of the flood at the head of the Beropa I have already noticed partly. Compared with the floods of 1855 and 1866, the late flood stood as follows :—

Heights above Mean Sea Datum.

	In 1855. Head works not built.	In 1866. Mahanuddy Weir not coped.		4th July 1872.
Fukeerparra, head of Beropa ...	73·70	73·00		75·95
Chowduar, site of weir ...	71·25	68·79	68·57	71·80	71·20
Below weir	...	68·36		70·60

While this flood was 2¼ feet above that of 1855 at the head of the Beropa, it stood 8 inches lower at Chowduar, 1¾ mile further down on the Jugguthpore side of the weir. The above levels show that the surface slope of the Beropa during the height of the flood was 2¾ feet per mile.

Towards the end of June last a flood of ordinary character came down the Brahminee. It attained its highest on the 29th June and 3rd July, on which dates it stood 5 and 4 feet respectively below the great flood of 1868, the highest on record. The Beropa and its branches were, however, completely gorged before reaching the Kimerea and Brahminee, and the flood backed up over the whole country between the Chota Gengootee and the Calcutta road.

At the head of the high level canal, the flood got in between the village of Choudwar and the end of the road leading to the bridge over the lock and spilled into the canal. The villagers had constructed a small bund to keep the water out of the lower part of the village, but it was not properly looked after and it burst on the 3rd July. The discharge was insignificant, and, as the bank of the canal here is laterite rock, no damage was done, except that part the gravel bank was washed into the canal, but not into the channel. There was a heavy flood in the Gond Noi, which is discharged under the No. 1 syphon of the high level canal; but, although, it rose to within a few inches of the top of the side walls of the syphon, no slip or other casualty occurred. On the 3rd and 4th miles of the canal, the catch drains behind the left bank could not carry off the rain-fall from the high ground to the west. The pent-up water burst into the canal at three or four points, but the canal escapes easily carried off the surplus supply.

Many of the distributaries were cut up considerably, as the accompanying memorandum will show. The first two channels were torn up by the spill from the River Beropa, which topped its banks immediately below Choudwar, and made two enormous breaches in the 2nd and 3rd miles, 605 and 105 feet in length. The embankment in the former was cut down to the level of the ground, in the latter to the level of the bed of a large tank immediately on the rear. The closing of the latter breach has been a matter of much difficulty. In 1867-68 a flood embankment was commenced by the late East India Irrigation and Canal Company between Choudwar and Sytoh 2¾ miles down the Beropa. The embankment was nearly completed for about 2½ miles, but the end next Choudwar was scarcely commenced, when the prospect of early transfer of the works to Government led to the stoppage of further construction. The spill and breach water poured into the Gond Noi and Mendicoi Nullahs and through their common mouth found an outlet into the Chota Gengootee. This current of water did considerable injury to distributary No. 1.

The distributary channels which have suffered the least are Nos. 4, 7, 7B, 8, 9 and 10. These channels are protected from the spill water of the Gengootee by the Calcutta road. The channels to which the flood did most injury were Nos. 3, 5, 6, 7A, 11 and 14, the latter portion of all these having been washed away or nearly so. The village channels to the east of the Calcutta road will require entire renewal, having been nearly all swept away. Those to the west of the main road suffered slightly. The total lengthof distributaries washed away, or in which the banks were heavily damaged was 13 miles 592 feet.

The whole country between the Calcutta road and the Gengootee was, from Tanghy to Burchunna, under water, and for some time it was impossible to tell what state the distributaries were in, the lower lands remained so long submerged. Subjoined is a detailed account of the damages sustained by each channel.

The Pergunnahs Koonda, Jeypore, Bargong, and western portion of Kalamatia, were heavily submerged, but no particular damage was done. The people in these parts are always prepared for a certain degree of inundation. The country is for the most part unembanked, probably on account of the difficulty any partial system of embankments would place in the way of free drainage in a district so intersected by rivers—the Kimeria, Kaloo, Chota and Burra Gengootee, and Beropa Rivers, all here commingling within an area of no great extent.

The following is an abstract of the probable cost of putting the distributary and other works in the same state as they were before the flood :—

The breaches on this distributary were all caused by the overflowing of the Gungootee River, which, when the flood was at its highest, stood over the last 3 miles of the distributary 1 foot above crest of bunds. The slopes are cut up in many places, and shoals of silt have been thrown up throughout the last 3 miles. The actual number of breaches is 12 on the right bank, from 6 feet to 140 feet, and on the left bank 20, from 10 feet to 140 feet in length, making a total length of 1,387 lineal feet of embankment breached.

Byturnee Division.

Less damage occurred to the works of this Division than of any other. The district embankments are less numerous and important, and the irrigation works in a much less forward state than in the more southern Divisions. I should add that the Byturnee, the principal river connected with the Division, was, like the Brahminee, considerably under a maximum flood. During the cyclone which passed over Balasore on the 1st of July, the rainfall at Aquapudda and Bhuddruck was very heavy, bringing the Salindee down in heavy fresh. The Kansbans, Kopali, and Rebbo Nullahs also were in high flood :—

The Byturnee rose to 60·00 above mean sea datum at the Aquapudda bungalow. This was 4·12 feet below the great flood of 1868, and equal to a rise of 16½ feet above summer level.	6 P. M., 2nd July 1872.
The Salindee rose 12·70 feet above summer level at Randia, 1½ mile above Bhuddruck	Noon, 2nd July 1872.
The Rebbo rose 17·17 feet above summer level at Nagoa ...	6 A. M., 2nd July 1872.
The Kopali rose 7·56 feet above its summer level at Andipalli ...	6 P. M., 1st July 1872.

The hours at which the highest rise of flood occurred sufficiently show the relative length and character of the different rivers.

The whole country south and east of Aquapudda was covered with water, which spilled over the right bank of the river between the head of the River Burha and the Calcutta Road. It forced its way into the Rorya Nullah, then broke into the canal excavation, and breached the river bund into the Burha. The damage done was trifling.

At the Brahminee end of the 2nd range, the Gind Nullah embankment was washed a good deal by the heavy waves beating on it. The country between the head of the Brahminee and the mouth of the nullah is a low flat plain, annually under inundation at the height of flood. During the gale on the 1st July, the waves raised on this large sheet of water beat with great force on the Gind embankment. No damage to the head works of the High Level Canal, 2nd range, was done at Jokodea, but some materials were washed away by the flood in the Pattia from the site of syphons Nos. 1 and 2.

The Kopali embankments were breached in two places—one at Tikora, 15 feet, and one at Baloo, 50 feet in width.

The water from the Salindee and Kansbans (Gummee) collected as usual at the head of the Metai, and inundated all the country to the west of the Mundhara sea embankments. A breach took place at Gopalpore, caused no doubt by the water collected on the low julpye lands to the west of the bund. Sluices capable of taking pressure on both sides are wanted in these embankments.

At Bhuddruck considerable damage was done by the cyclone of the 1st July. The verandah pillars of the Randia bungalow were blown down, and, besides sustaining similar damage, the roof of the Soroh bungalow was blown off.

General Remarks.

The following conclusions may be drawn in regard to the late flood :—

1st.—That it was 6 inches lower than the great flood of 1855 and 9 inches less in vertical rise than the flood of 1834, known over all Orissa as the "Dassera Berrye," but that it was 3½ feet above the flood of 1866, which did so much damage to the embankments.

2nd.—That about 1,152,000 cubic feet per second was the total discharge of the river at its highest, of which—

469,000	cubic feet per second passed	down the Katjooree at Cuttack.
605,000	ditto	ditto	over the Mahanuddy Weir.
78,000	ditto	ditto	over the Beropa Weir.

at 688,000 cubic feet per second passed over Naraje Weir, of which 269,000 returned to the Mahanuddy through the gaps in the dividing embankments.

d.—That the immense volume of water, poured through the gorge at Naraje on the 30th June, was due to a rainfall of 6·22 inches pretty uniformly distributed over the basin of the Mahanuddy during the 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th June ; and that the flood of the 4th July was due to 6·32 inches of rain in the upper valley during the following days, viz., 30th June, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd July ;

ainfall is deduced from the Registers kept at the following Stations :—

Raipore. Drug. Singa.	In the Raipore District.
Belaspore Menegeli. Sourinarain.	In the Belaspore ditto.
Sumbulpore ...	In the Sumbulpore ditto.

end a tabular statement showing the rainfall in the Upper Mahanuddy and in the lta, from the 20th June to the 5th of July last. The conclusion I have arrived at is est flood came chiefly from the rivers in the Raipore District (the Mahanuddy Proper, and the Jonk), and that the latter and greater flood was due to the rainfall in the ct and in Sumbulpore, especially in the basin of the Tel, which is the largest tribu- Mahanuddy has. The destruction caused by the flood in the fine estate of Kalahandy the middle of the Tel valley was by all accounts immense. The flood of the 2nd is reported to have been from 6 to 8 feet higher in the Tel than the flood of 1855. f the current at the mouth of the Tel threw the Mahanuddy into backwater for a 2 miles nearly above Sonepore.

l be noticed that the rainfall in the Delta was higher by one-third than that in the on the days preceding the first flood, and only one-half the up-country rainfall for onding dates before the second flood. At the following stations the mean rainfall th, 25th, 26th, and 27th June was 8·66 inches, while on the 30th June, 1st, 2nd, ly the rainfall was only 3·09 inches :—

—That the area inundated in the Pooree District was 1,070 square miles; in the Cuttack District 1,135 square miles. Of this 2,205 square miles, about 600 miles were under water for 14 to 17 days, and the rest from 7 to 10 days.

—That the District of Pooree suffered much more than that of Cuttack, owing to the less capacity of its channels in the lower reaches to carry off the water brought in at the head of the Koakhye; also to the immense body of water poured over the district by the breaches in the right bank of the Mahanuddy and Katjooree above and below Naraje; by breaches in the right bank of the River Soorooa, and lastly to the heaping up of the Chilka Lake which choked the discharge of the Rivers Dyah and Bargovy, already overgorged owing to the natural contraction of their sections.

aware that these discharges are much too low, if calculated by the same formula (Etelwyn's) as at adopted by Major J. C. Harris.

; to Major Harris, the discharges of the Rivers Mahanuddy and Katjooree, at the relative levels ied in these two rivers on the 4th July, would be—

Mahanuddy	990,082	cubic feet per second.
Katjooree	762,882	" "
Total ...	1,752,964

arges I have assumed are calculated by the formula for weirs from the depth of water observed w the weirs at Naraje, Jobra, and Beropa. Possibly the true discharge lies between these different —That the breaches in the river banks at Putnakea and Neemasapore led to the breaching of the Taldunda Canal above and below the Beereebatty Lock, but that most of the other breaches in the Taldunda Canal were caused by cuts made in the canal banks by villagers living along the right bank of the Sook Pyka. The only way to prevent the consequence of this habit on the part of the villagers is, where the canal forms the protective bund, to shift all the villages over to the land side of the canal.

at the evils resulting from the overflowing of the river's banks to such a degree were very eatly aggravated by the high wind that prevailed from the 30th June to the 2nd July.

Station of Cuttack was in great danger of being swamped, much of the town being from et below the level of the flood at Bellevue, which was 5½ feet above the surface of the Mahanuddy at the Circuit-house.

9th.—That the outlay necessary to repair all the damages caused by the flood, and bring the works into the same condition they were in before the commencement of the rains, will be Rs. 4,33,847 :—

There are two ways of guarding the country against the recurrence of such material losses and misery as have resulted from the now often proved inadequacy of the Orissa embankments as protective works against high floods—

1st.—The lip of the Naraje weir may be raised, the head of the Koakhye regulated by a dam ard sluices, and the four great escapes constructed down the lines of the Prachee, Dhunnooa, Noona, and Chittertollah, the head of this river being regulated by a suitable weir.

This was the proposal entertained by Colonel Rundall when the Orissa scheme was first matured by him; or 2ndly.—By the heightening of the Naraje weir, the construction of the regulating works across the head of the Koakhye and Chittertollah, the damming of the Katjooree below the head of the Daib, and the embanking in a thorough manner the Rivers Katjooree and the Daib, including the net-work of rivers it splits into. These embankments to be carried down as far as Machgong, and in connection with them I would propose to widen the head of the Daib for 4 miles down to the extent of 400 feet on each side, by about 15 feet deep below the natural surface of the ground. I would also propose the closing of the head of the Sook Pyka and the embanking of the right bank of the Mahanuddy.

The Mahanuddy and Daib are noble rivers, and ought to be made what nature seems to have designed them for, viz., the natural delivery outlets for the high floods.

Wherever the flood has reached and run off within ten days or so the crops will be magnificent, but there are tracts of country on which two, and even three, sowings have already been lost.

There are now large breaches (see list marginally noted) which the late flood has re-opened. In the line of such branch rivers large strips of country are being devastated.

In the Killahs Mallood and Pareecood the crops seem to have been utterly ruined. The Commissioner of Orissa and Collector of Pooree have been in communication with the Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, with the view of providing the people of these estates with work on the embankments. It is to be hoped, when the canal works are re-commenced at the end of the rains, that those willing and able to work will be induced to move to the 2nd and 3rd ranges of the high level canal.

The utmost exertions have been made by the Executive Engineers of the Divisions, which have suffered most from the floods, to put their damaged works in order; and in bringing this long report to a close, I venture to bring prominently to the notice of Government the good services performed by Executive Engineers Macmillan, Campbell, and Whitefoord at Cuttack, Naraje, and the Kendraparra Canal.

The floods, actual and assigned, are as given by Captain Rigby from 1823 to 1851, and Major Harris remarks that the assigned floods are within a fraction of a foot, vide his report, part 2; and I have calculated the flood level anuddy for this year.

The flood of 1834 is spoken of by the natives as the highest known, and is called the Dussarah flood; it was probably lower at Cuttack than later floods, because there were no embankments in the vicinity of Cuttack, except those round the station, to obstruct the flow across country, the embankments in the vicinity of Cuttack having all been constructed and otherwise improved since 1853; and the embankments of olden times are reported to have been low and of a wretched section. In 1834, October 13th, back water stood at 122·00 in Mission College compound.

The Katjooree River is recorded to have risen 18 feet in one day in 1817. It rose 21 feet in one day in 1868, but this was due to the Naraje Dam holding back the water; the equivalent rise in the Mahanuddy was only 5 feet. The Naraje spur was commenced in 1857, but there was butlittle done till 1858.

The Mahanuddy Dam coping was not laid till 1868. The gauges in the Mahanuddy have, therefore, been affected by the dam at Naraje, also by that at Jobbra.

The wooden gauge in the Mahanuddy was fixed 9 inches too high, but how far back this has taken place it is now impossible to tell. I find, however, a remark in the gauge book in 1865, made by Mr. Macnamara, Executive Engineer, late Mahanuddy Embankment Division, to the effect that 2·05 was to be deducted from all readings since 14th September 1865, that day inclusive; and that prior to that till some time in 1862 or 1863 0·82 was to be deducted, but the reason is not given. This remark may have been made, and the gauge never altered to the correct reading, as I found it the other day to be 0·70 too high. The gauge readings taken by the Irrigation Company from, I think, 1863 will probably clear up the matter.

No. 320½, dated Cuttack, the 9th August 1872.

From—J. MACMILLAN, Esq., Exc. Engr., Mahanuddy Irrign. Divn.,

To—The Superintending Engineer, Orissa Irrign. Circle.

I have the honor to submit the report on the floods of the 30th June and the 4th July 1872, and the breaches and damage caused by them in this Division.

The Floods.

2. The first water that came down the river showed its influence at Jobbra on the 19th of June, but it did not rise so to flow over the dam till the night of the 25th.

3. At 2 A. M. on the morning of the 26th June we began to lower the shutters on the Beropa and the Mahanuddy Dams, also to lift the shutters at Chowdwar and Jobbra. By 6 A. M. the shutters were all lowered and removed, and this caused the water in the river at the Mahanuddy Dam to fall 6 inches by noon of the same day.

4. The water in the river continued to fall till the evening of the 27th June, by which time it was 9 inches below the crest of the Mahanuddy Dam.

5. During the night of the 27th June the water in the river began to rise again till it reached 121·30 on the circuit-house gauge in the Mahanuddy River, and 127·00 on the Bellevue gauge in the Katjooree River, or on mean sea datum 76·80 and 82·50, respectively.

6. During the night of the 30th June the water in the rivers began to fall, and by the morning of the 2nd July the gauges in the Mahanuddy and Katjooree read, respectively, 73·50 and 78·10.

7. On the afternoon of the 2nd July the water in the rivers commenced to rise again and kept on steadily increasing till 4 A. M. on the morning of the 4th July, when it reached the maximum, or 77·80 on the circuit-house gauge and 83·30 on the Bellevue or Katjooree gauge.

8. From the morning of the 4th July the water in the river began to subside slowly and had fallen a foot by the morning of the 5th July. After this date the fall was more rapid, or at the rate of a little over 1½ feet per day for the 6th and 7th, and 3 feet per day for the 8th, 9th and 10th.

9. From the 11th July till the end of the month the water in the river has been low, fluctuating between $\left\{\begin{matrix}66{\cdot}50\\110{\cdot}00\end{matrix}\right\}$ and $\left\{\begin{matrix}73{\cdot}50\\118{\cdot}00\end{matrix}\right\}$ on the Katjooree gauge.

10. From the 11th July we had no readings on the circuit-house gauge in the Mahanuddy, as the whole bed of the river in the vicinity of the gauge was silted up.

11. New gauges have been made and will be fixed immediately as near as possible to the old line.

12. When fixing the new gauges, it was found that the old gauge was 9 inches too high, so that the high flood reading in the Mahanuddy will be $\left\{\begin{matrix}77{\cdot}80\\122{\cdot}30\end{matrix}\right\}$ instead of $\left\{\begin{matrix}78{\cdot}50\\123{\cdot}00\end{matrix}\right\}$ as previously recorded.

13. In the Mahanuddy the highest flood of this year was 6 inches above the great flood of 1855, but this height was due to the afflux caused by the Mahanuddy Dam and the extra water thrown into the Mahanuddy at Naraje by the Naraje Dam, also probably in some measure to the bed of the Mahanuddy above Jobbra having risen above what it was in 1855.

14. The flood level in the Mahanuddy at the circuit-house would probably have been $\left\{\begin{matrix}76{\cdot}28\\120{\cdot}78\end{matrix}\right\}$ had no dams existed, or 1 foot lower than the flood of 1855; whereas at the circuit-house it was 6 inches above it, making in all a difference of rise of 1½ feet due to the dams.

15. At the Jobbra Dam the readings of the gauges above and below that mark were on the 30th June—

Below „	72·50

And on the 4th July—

giving a difference of 2 feet between the water above and below the dam.

16. The lower water at the Mahanuddy Dam was below the flood water of 1855 by about 9 inches, taking flood level of 1855 as 74·60, but it was probably higher than this by 6 inches.

17. Below Budunool the flood level of 1872 was 68·50, and that for 1855 is given by Major Harris at 68·72, but to this will have to be added 9 inches for the error on the Circuit-house bench mark. The flood level would therefore be 69·50.

18. At Mutgujpore the flood level of 1857 was 69·91, and the flood level of 1872 was 70·05, so that these two floods were nearly of a similar height, but the conditions under which they acted were different, as the embankment did not breach this year till near Mutgujpore, whereas in 1857 there was a breach below Khannuggur, and the whole of the embankment near Mutgujpore was carried away.

19. The flood level of 1872 at Gutteeroutputna in the Mahanuddy was 66·84, or 3¼ feet below that in the Katjooree at Mutgujpore, the distance between the two rivers at these villages being under 300 yards.

20. The flood water from the Katjooree, which went through the Patnakeah breach near the 5th mile of the Taldunda Canal, stood on the inside of the Mahanuddy embankment at a level of 69·05, or 1 foot below what it was in the Katjooree near the same place.

21. At the head of the Daib River the flood of 1872 was 53·92; that of 1871 was 52·57, or 1·35 feet below that of this year.

22. At Singarpore, near the head of the Olunka, the highest flood of 1872 was 43·82, and that of 1871 was 43·93. The two floods were nearly similar in height, although the flood of 1872 was 83·30 at Cuttack on the Bellevue gauge, and that of 1871 only 77·50 on the same gauge.

23. At Jeypore where the Katjooree joins the Mahanuddy the flood of 1872 read 35·10; that of 1871 31·40, and that of 1855 36·30, a quarter of a mile lower down the Mahanuddy.

24. I append statements showing the gauge readings at various places in this Division between 1823 and 1872.

25. The gauge at Paradeep read 6·90 on the 30th of June and 9·90 on the the 4th of July 1872. Major Harris gives the flood level near this place at 15·10 for 1855; Mr. O'Neill gives 11·35 as a flood level pointed out to him as that of 1855; but judging from enquiries the Executive Engineer made at Bhootmoondee in reference to the floods, I suppose that 11·00 is about the true flood level at Paradeep; there is, therefore, a difference of about 4 feet, by which Major Harris' level is too high, judging from the mean sea level, that is, if there was no storm in the Bay of Bengal at the time of high flood in 1855.

26. The flood level on the Daib at the mouth of the Muggra Nullah, Lieutenant Elliston gives at 11·13 for 1872. This is about 1 foot below that reported for 1855, and we have used 12·00 as the highest known flood level at this point in connection with the Machgong Canal extensions. The flood level of 1872 at the head of the Daib was 53·92, and that of 1872 was 52·57.

27. The flood level of the 4th July 1872, although 6 inches below that of 1855 in the Katjooree and 9 inches in the Mahanuddy at Cuttack, was 1 foot below the same level at Jeypore, 27 miles below Cuttack, and was, I consider, only 1 foot below 1855 level at Paradeep.

28. At Singarpore, 22 miles below Cuttack, the flood water of the Katjooree this year was about the same level as that of 1871, although the former was 5¾ feet higher at Cuttack than the latter.

29. A similar instance is recorded at Marsaghai, where the flood of 1872 was actually 3 inches below that of 1871, whereas in the Mahanuddy at Cuttack the difference in level of the former above the latter was 4¼ feet.

30. In 1855 the spill from the left bank of the Mahanuddy began at Dawakote and passed over the greater part of the left bank of the Mahanuddy, flowing viâ the Sooknoi and Gobree Nullahs and the branches connected with them to the sea. This year we had no spill from the head of the Beropa downwards on the left banks of the Mahanuddy and Noona.

31. In 1855 the spill from the right bank of the Mahanuddy began at the circuit-house, but this year it did not begin to flow over the country till 6 miles below Cuttack. The water of the Katjooree River did not flow this year into the Mahanuddy as it did in 1855 between Cuttack and Mutgujpore, the embankment since constructed preventing it from taking this course.

32. On the Katjooree this year the first breach is at the head of the Soorooa on the right bank, whereas in 1855 the first breach was near the head of the Koakhye. On the left bank the first breach is near Mutgujpore, whereas in 1855 the first breach was at Khannuggur.

33. On the Soorooa the breaches on the right bank were higher up the river than those of this year.

34. On the right bank of the Katjooree and Mahanuddy—between Moondilow, Naraje, and Cuttack—the flood spill of this year is nearly similar to what it was in 1855, but the Khoordah Road is higher now than it was in 1855, and there was no embankment across the head of the Barung Nullah and down the right bank of the Katjooree in those days.

35. A subordinate has been specially engaged and sent up the Mahanuddy River, in accordance with Chief Engineer's telegram and your letter No. 2251 of 20th July 1872, with the view of gaining information about this season's floods and comparing them with those of 1855 and 1834.

36. The flood levels obtained in the delta on the branches of the Mahanuddy below Cuttack are not a sure guide of the height to which the embankments should be raised to carry off a high flood, and they are very apt to mislead those not having a knowledge of the fact that the capacity of the rivers for discharge 25 miles below Cuttack is only equal to half the volume of an 1855 flood; consequently the other half must go across country through breaches in the embankments. The only true guide, therefore, to the height of embankments is the discharge of the rivers at Cuttack.

37. The floods of this year taken together stood above 77·50 on the Bellevue gauge for ten days; that of 1855 singly stood above that height for six days only.

38. I attach a tracing of the district showing the parts of the country in this Division more or less submerged during the floods of 30th June and 4th July 1872. The arrows show where the water spilled over the river banks and went through breaches, also the deep line of flow over the country.

39. It is difficult now to get flood marks of 1855 and subsequent years, and the only true indications are gauges at Naraje, Cuttack, and other places in the district.

40. The village people generally give a flood mark, especially where the rivers are embanked, in reference to the flood water near their own houses, but the flood mark entirely depends on where a breach takes place, as the flood marks given may be for back water; great care is, therefore, necessary when noting flood marks to see that they are on the river face of an embankment.

41. Flood marks above Cuttack are easily obtained in a high fresh from the marks left on houses when the flood goes through villages.

42. Masonry gauges roofed over should be fixed at the heads and out-falls of all rivers to gauge truly the highest freshes year by year. This pillar should be kept well whitewashed, and a yellow stain will be left by the flood to mark the highest rise.

43. In some cases the people in a village will report a low flood higher than one really considerably above it in a previous year, because they judge from the water getting to their houses, forgetting that a high bank may have been cut away in front of their village which kept the water out of it during a higher fresh than the one reported to be the highest. The only sure way of getting flood level is by making marks on the embankments as soon as possible after a flood has begun to fall, and to have gauges fixed at all important points, as noted above.

44. The flood which entered Cuttack in 1834 stood at 77·50 on the Baptist Mission College and was about 3 feet over the College floor. This seems to have been a back water from below the lower end of the revetment on the Katjooree River near the Pooree Ghaut. The floor of the Mission College is 9½ feet below the flood level of 1855 on the Bellevue gauge. A high flood in olden times would easily get into the town of Cuttack from below the Pooree Ghaut on the Katjooree and the circuit-house on the Mahanuddy, as there were no continuous embankments in those days, and the Pooree Road was much lower than it is now.

Breaches.

45. I append a statement showing the length of embankments, canals, and distributaries which have been breached and damaged by the floods of 1872. The length of embankments breached in the Cuttack District in 1855 was 21¾ miles; vide Major Harris' reports.

46. I also attach a statement showing the number and size of the breaches and the damage done to the various embankments, canals, and distributaries in this Division in 1872, also the cost of repairs:—

The total length of the breaches on the embankments is	7¼ miles.
Damage done to banks	7⅝ "
Breaches on canals	3 "
Damage done to banks	8¾ "
Breaches on distributaries	30¾ "
Damage done to banks	21 "

Cost of repairs to—

	Rs.	Rs.
Embankments	43,272
Canals	21,852
Distributaries	26,580
		91,704

47. We are doing all we can to fill up the breaches and repair the damage done by the floods, but some of the breaches will give considerable trouble to close during the rains, because there is a difficulty about getting earth and stopping the flow of water through some of them, and a slight rise in the river undoes all we may have done at filling up.

48. The breach at Neemasapore on the right bank of the Mahanuddy 9 miles below Cuttack, which did considerable damage to the 2nd reach of the Taldunda Canal, is now nearly filled up, and we have managed to keep ahead of all the little rises we have had in the river since the breach happened.

49. We will have some trouble with a large breach at Ramah on the right bank of the Mahanuddy River, but we are driving piles across the deep pool to stop the flow of water if possible.

50. There are also some large breaches on the left banks of the Godda and Daib which will give some trouble to close in consequence of the heavy flow of water through them.

Cuttack Embankments.

51. The great enemy we had to contend against to protect the Town of Cuttack, was the waves caused by the high wind which was blowing for some days when the river was at its highest.

52. The embankments round the station were high enough and strong enough as far as the dead pressure was concerned. It was the waves cutting up the banks which gave us so much trouble.

53. The measures adopted to protect the embankment were very simple and consisted of lining the slopes with bamboo mats and brushwood, and in fact anything we could get to break the force of the waves, but before we overcame this difficulty some parts of the embankment were cut away to the crest.

54. The magnitude of the danger to the town of Cuttack can be better imagined when it is stated that the greater part of Cuttack is from 7 to 13 feet below the flood level at Bellevue on the Katjooree, and from 7 to 15 feet below the flood level at the point where the river made the severest attack on the embankment.

55. The road in front of the Baptist Mission College stands about 13 feet below the highest flood level at Bellevue, and the floor of the College is 9½ feet below that level.

56. Under such a state of things, the feelings of those entrusted with the protection of 50,000 inhabitants and the town of Cuttack can be better imagined than described, when they know that a breach in any part of the embankment above Bellevue would probably sweep the half of the population from the face of the earth and level with the ground three-fourths of the houses in the town.

57. At one time I thought that Cuttack was doomed, when it was reported that water was springing up from behind the embankment about three-fourths of a mile above Bellevue; however, on examination by the Superintending Engineer and myself, we found that it was percolation water coming from an ant hollow, but a stick went 6 feet down the hole. Fortunately this hole was not connected with the river base of the embankment; for if it had, a breach would have been the result, and nothing could have saved the town under such a circumstance.

58. A rat or ant hole might be the means during a high fresh of causing the destruction of the town of Cuttack; it is, therefore, all the more necessary for the revetment to be raised to a uniform level, and the foreshore between the toe of the embankment and back of the revetment, and the river slope and crest of the embankment covered with a foot of metal to prevent rats from burrowing on the river face of the protective works.

Suggestions.

59. I would beg to suggest that it would be advisable to make the embankments round the station of Cuttack of a uniform width of 20 feet, and to line the crest outer slope and foreshore between the toe of the embankment and revetment wall with gravel 1 foot thick.

60. To connect the embankment near the circuit-house with the revetment at the Gurgurreah Mohadeb near the Cuttack church.

61. To raise the revetment wall to a uniform level where it is very uneven, and revet back from it to 3 feet above the highest known flood level and back up with earth, or, if considered more advisable, to raise the revetment wall to 2 feet above the highest flood level and back it well up with earth on a level with the top of the wall.

62. To slope off and revet the Mahanuddy River bank from the Head Lock at Jobbra to above the Workshop, then to make a tow-path of rough stone from the Workshop up to the Circuit-house Ghaut, so that boats may have easy access to the Taldunda Canal during all stages of the flood, for at present boats cannot approach the Lock at all during even ordinary freshes.

63. That the canal bank be sloped off near the Workshop and the Workshop Building and Repairing Yard be moved to it, so that there may be no obstruction along the bank of the Mahanuddy above the Mahanuddy Dam.

64. That an embankment be constructed from the hills at Dawakote to the head of the Beropa along the left bank of the Mahanuddy and of sufficient width to answer as a road. Or that the people on the bank of the river be ordered to move their houses to the hills or to build them on posts above the flood level of 1855.

65. That an embankment be constructed from above Naraje to the head of the Koakhye of a section sufficient to form a road, and that this embankment be continued down the right bank of the Katjooree, Sooroora, West Daib, and Daib to near the mouth of the latter river.

66. That the embankment from Jobbra be widened to Gutteeroutputna to form a road, and that it be continued down the right bank of the Mahanuddy to Paradeep in connection with the Taldunda Canal works.

67. That the embankment be improved and widened down the left bank of the Mahanuddy and Noona Rivers in connection with the Kendraparra Canal to the mouth of the Jumboo.

68. That the embankments from Cuttack be improved and widened down the left bank of the Katjooree, either to the head of the Daib or Belooakye, cross the Katjooree there, and be continued down the left banks of the Belooakye and Daib Rivers to the mouth of the Muggra Nullah.

69. That the Cuttack drainage be all turned into the main drainage line, which runs into the Katjooree.

70. That a small drain-pipe be led from the Fort ditch to the main drainage line, so that the ditch may always be kept free of water, and that the sluices leading from the Mahanuddy into the Fort ditch be built up or removed.

71. That all houses on the river side of the embankments be removed behind them, as this would cause the village people to be more careful about protecting the embankments.

72. That the zemindars be requested to keep a look-out in front of their villages when a high flood is coming down the river with the view of protecting the banks with a few bushes or sods in case of need, because a little done in this way might prevent breaches occurring.

73. That the village chowkeedars be ordered to drive in pegs in front of their villages to mark the highest rise of flood year by year. This would be no trouble to them and would be of great use to this Department.

74. That the town of Cuttack be divided into districts, and that a head man with a certain number of men be told off to turn out and work during a high fresh when inundation threatens the town something on the principle we have in Scotland of special constables in every town who turn out in case of riots.

75. That the Government servants who turned out and assisted us during the high floods get an extra allowance in proportion to the duty they did and as fixed by the Superintending Engineer.

76. The names of the Government servants who rendered us assistance during the freshes are as follow :—

W. Macpherson, Esq., Magistrate and Collector of Cuttack. This gentleman stayed up one night with us and placed Mr. Macnamara, the Jailor, and the prisoners in the Jail, and Town Police at our disposal and exerted himself in every way possible to help us.

D. Lacey, Esq., D. Poole, Esq., and J. Graves, Esq., and Mr. Hall, of the Police, stayed up with their men and rendered us every assistance in their power.

J. Campbell, Esq., Executive Engineer, Pooree Division, stayed up with us for three nights and did his work in a praiseworthy manner and was always ready and willing to help wherever required.

F. Bond, Esq., Executive Engineer of the Cuttack Road Division, very willingly offered to help, and stayed up for one night and worked most zealously where danger threatened.

F. G. Brooks, Esq., Executive Engineer, Brahminee Division, very willingly offered to keep watch and look after the work, and he did so one night and day to allow me to get a little rest.

Mr. J. St. Clair Glasson, Estimator in the Superintending Engineer's Office, stayed up one night and worked zealously and well under Mr. Bond.

Colonel Luard, the Commanding Officer of the Station, very willingly ordered 200 men of the Regiment to turn out with their working tools, and they were on duty two nights under the command of Colonels Serres and Johnstone, with Captains Phelps and Mottet and Lieutenant Pryce. The object of asking for the men of the Regiment to turn out was to have them ready in case of an emergency and to use all possible means of saving the town. The men of the Regiment received working pay for the time they were employed.

Of the non-official community in Cuttack, only two men came forward to render help, viz., Mr. W. E. Brooks and a Mussulman named Abdool Sammud. Both these men looked after the coolies and did all they could to help us. Mr. Brooks stayed up one night and was always on the move looking after the workmen.

The staff of this Division who were employed on the works are as noted below :—

Lieutenant E. C. Elliston, Assistant Engineer, was up three nights, as well as taking his turn during the day. He was ever ready to do anything ordered and worked zealously and well.

A. C. C. Rogers, Esq., Assistant Engineer, was up one night, and during parts of two days he looked after the Khannuggur Embankment.

Baboo Suddanund Mahanty, the Overseer in charge of the works, was working night and day for several days.

Mr. Davis, Overseer, took watch one night and worked well on the night of the highest rise.

Mr. Collins, a candidate for employment, took watch two nights and worked very well, and was always ready to render assistance.

Baboo Indromoney Mahanty did very good work by preventing the flood water from flowing into the Fort ditch by constructing an embankment at Rajghat when the water was flowing across the land.

General Remarks.

77. The natives of the town, although fully alive to the danger which threatened them, rendered no assistance whatever, and looked on in a pathetic indifference, many of them being more interested in catching drift-wood than in lending a hand to save the town. They showed the same indifference in 1855 and never offered to help even, although they were warned by tom-tom to be prepared for the worst.

78. I have suggested that the embankments be made wide enough for a road to enable them to stand being cut into during a storm, as I consider that it is always better to be prepared for the worst.

79. The embankment arrangements as noted above will make the Mahanuddy, Katjoo-ree, Sooroo, and Daib the great flood discharging rivers, together with the net-work of minor branches connected with them; vide the accompanying sketch map showing where I propose to place the embankment.

80. A few of the inland tracts connected with the great rivers would in a measure be liable to inundation over their lower parts during high freshes, but it is better to protect the greater parts of the districts by sacrificing only small areas than to allow the flood waters to cover nearly the whole district, as they have done heretofore and will do so again in high freshes until the floods are confined within proper bounds.

81. Notwithstanding the very high floods we have had, the crops are looking very well over the parts of the district I have visited since the water has left the land, and from all I can gather, the crops will be very fair if the river keeps low, except in a few places where breaches cannot be closed.

82. Some of the people have suffered considerably from their houses falling down, and loss of cattle, also in some cases from loss of paddy they had stored in the ground. A month hence we will be better able to judge of the loss in crops than at present, because the rivers may still rise high and do considerable damage; however, if low floods take place, we will have very good crops throughout the greater part of the district.

83. The people on the banks of the Mahanuddy above the head of the delta have in all probability suffered considerably, judging from the number of dead cattle, carts, and roofs of houses which floated down the rivers. I only saw four human bodies, one of which was that of a child. I also noticed the bodies of several wild animals. One of the chuppraseees of this Division reported that he saw three people sitting on the roof of a house floating past Jobbra down the Mahanuddy. It was also rumoured that a pair of bullocks were caught yoked to a plough, and various other rumours were in circulation during the time the floods were at their highest,

84. I have only now to urge upon Government the necessity of adopting protective measures at the earliest possible date, because there is no saying when we may have floods similar to those which lately passed down the river and across the country.

85. The works which should be taken in hand first are as follow:—

Extension of the Taldunda and Machgong Canals to Tirtole and Chattra, respectively. The embanking of the Mahanuddy, Katjooree, and Daib Rivers, as suggested above, and the cutting of the main drainage into the Boodah Nullah down to the coast. I would also beg that a reference be made to my report of last year, No. 318 of 24th August 1871, and accompaniment.

86. On a reference to the statements attached, it will be observed that since 1823 we have had ordinary and low floods for 16 years, extraordinary floods for six years, and very extraordinary floods for eight years.

87. Ordinary floods are those ranging below, 21·50 on the Bellevue gauge, which do little or no damage to the embankments and country protected by them. Extraordinary floods are those which range between, 21·50 and 25·00 on the Bellevue gauge, and do considerable damage. Very extraordinary floods are those which range between, 25·00 and 28·00 on the Bellevue gauge, bursting the embankment on every direction, submerging the country, and endangering the town of Cuttack.

88. Since 1853 extraordinary and very extraordinary floods have occurred very frequently. The former in 1853, 1856, 1863 and 1871, and the latter in 1854, 1855, 1857, 1862, 1866 and 1872, but the worst floods of all were those which took place in 1855, 1857 and 1872.

89. From the above, it will be observed that within the last 20 years we have had high floods every other year on an average, and that prior to 1853 high floods were not of such frequent occurrence, for the statement given shows only one in every ten years. The only conclusion one can come to from the gauge readings is that the rains are much heavier on the hills now than formerly, or that extensive clearance of jungle has been made which allows the water to flow more quickly into the river than it did.

90. Finally, I would beg to observe that, until the rivers are controlled, it would be useless to carry the irrigation works beyond the places noted above, as they would be carried away continually by every high fresh that came down the river. As, however, survey divisions have been established, this question of controlling the rivers can now be taken up by the Executive Engineers in charge of those Divisions.

The floods, actual and assigned, are as gi ven by Captain Rigby from 1823 to 1851, and Major Harris remarks that the assigned floods are within a fraction of a foot, vide his report, part 2; and I have calculated the flood level of Mahanuddy for this period.

The flood of 1834 is spoken of by the natives as the highest known, and is called the Dussarah flood; it was probably lower at Cuttack than later floods, because there were no embankments in the vicinity of Cuttack, except those round the station, to obstruct the flow across country, the embankments in the vicinity of Cuttack having all been constructed and otherwise improved since 1853; and the embankments of olden times are reported to have been low and of a wretched section. In 1834, October 13th, back water stood at 122·00 in Mission College compound.

The Katjooree River is recorded to have risen 18 feet in one day in 1817. It rose 21 feet in one day in 1868, but this was due to the Naraje Dam holding back the water; the equivalent rise in the Mahanuddy was only 5 feet. The Naraje spur was commenced in 1857, but there was but little done till 1858.

The Mahanuddy Dam coping was not laid till 1868. The gauges in the Mahanuddy have, therefore, been affected by the dam at Naraje, also by that at Jobbra.

The wooden gauge in the Mahanuddy was fixed 9 inches too high, but how far back this has taken place it is now impossible to tell. I find, however, a remark in the gauge book in 1865 made by Mr. Macnamara, Executive Engineer, late Mahanuddy Embankment Division, to the effect that 2·05 was to be deducted from all readings since 14th September 1865, that day inclusive, and that prior to that till some time in 1862 or 1863, 0·82 was to be deducted, but the reason is not given. This remark may have been made, and the gauge never altered to the correct reading, as I found it the other day to be 0·70 too high. The gauge readings taken by the Irrigation Company from, I think, 1863 will probably clear up the matter.

To—The Offg. Chief Engineer, Bengal, Irrigation Branch.

In continuation of this office No. 3101 of 7th September 1872, I have the honor to enclose copy of a letter No. 464 from Executive Engineer, Mahanuddy Division, giving some further information concerning the late floods.

No. 464, dated Cuttack, the 21st October 1872.

From—J. MACMILLAN, Esq., Exe. Engr., Mahanuddy Irrign. Divn.,

To—The Superintending Engineer, Orissa Irrigation Circle.

In continuation of this office letter No. 320½ of the 9th August, reporting the damage caused by the high floods of 30th June and 4th July 1872 below the delta head, I have now the honor to submit the following information gleaned from diaries submitted by Mr. Atkinson, who was sent up the Mahanuddy to fix gauges and collect information in reference to the floods of this year, and to compare the flood marks with those of 1834 and 1855 if they could be found.

2. Floods in Mahanuddy.—From Mr. Atkinson's diaries I gather that from the head of the Mahanuddy delta at Naraje to the 13th mile below Sonepore the highest flood of this year ranged from 0 to 1 foot below that of 1855, except at Biddessur where this season's flood is reported to be 6 inches higher than 1855, probably from a heavy rush down the Kalijeeree Nullah which joins the Mahanuddy at Biddessur.

3. From 13 miles below Sonepore to Sonepore the highest flood of this year ranged from 0 to 2½ feet above that of 1855. This extra height was caused by the heavy discharge down the Tel, Memi, and Bagh, and probably the Salki Nullah discharged heavily also.

4. From Sonepore to Sumbulpore the flood of this year ranged from 0 to 5 feet below that of 1855.

5. Floods in Tel River.—The highest flood of this year in the Tel is reported to be 8 feet above that of 1855 about 9 and 10 miles up the river This was as far up as Mr. Atkinson was ordered to go to fix gauges, or, to village Bydeonath. He reports, however, that the flood was very high further up the river, and that great damage occurred in consequence. The first flood came down the Tel on the 28th June, and the second on the 2nd July, and it was the latter which did all the damage.

6. Flood in Ebe River.—The flood of this year in the Ebe at Mungulpore, 12 miles up the river, was 11·60 feet below that of 1855.

7. Loss caused by floods on the Mahanuddy and Tel.—The loss caused by this season's flood on the Mahanuddy and Tel in houses, cattle, human life, and crops, &c., is given in detail in statement attached, but the totals are as follows for the Mahanuddy between Naraje and Sonepore :—

Houses carried away by flood	850
Ditto tumbled down	1,636
Cattle carried away	2,450
Human beings drowned or missing	4

Losses in grain are considerable.

8. Above Sonepore no damage has been done by the Mahanuddy and tributaries.

9. On the Tel.—The loss has been reported as follows from the mouth of the Kurruck or Kodogo downwards :—

Houses carried away by floods	524
Ditto tumbled down	53
Cattle lost	9,041
Human beings carried away or missing	121

Loss in grain is considerable.

10. On the upper reaches of the Tel the loss is reported to be very great in every respect.

11. On the Ebe.—No loss has occurred.

12. General Remarks.—It will be observed, from what has been stated above and the statement attached, that the highest flood this year was below 1855 in the Mahanuddy throughout, except between Boad and Sonepore, but that between Damager and Naraje the difference was only on an average about 6 inches. Above Sonepore the difference was much greater, being 5 feet at Binka and Sumbulpore.

13. It would appear from the flood levels given that the rainfall was pretty even over the drainage area of the Mahanuddy and its branches prior to the first flood of 30th June at Cuttack, but that, before the first flood had time to run off, a very heavy rainfall took place over the drainage areas of the Tel, Memi, and Bagh, and partially so over that of the Salki.

These four feeders of the Mahanuddy fall into that river between Sonepore and Boad, but the first three of these run in in a distance of 10 miles below Sonepore, and it is more especially in this distance that the flood rose above that of 1855 in one case to 2½ feet.

14. The tremendous rush down the Tel caused the water in the Mahanuddy to stand back nearly 2 miles, as reported by the people on the spot.

15. It was well for this district that the Mahanuddy and feeders above Sonepore were low at the time the high fresh occurred in the Tel, otherwise nothing could have saved Cuttack.

16. The storm, which was so severe at Balasore on the 1st July, may have travelled viâ Keojhur, Talchere, Ungool, Radacole, Autmullick, Sonepore, Boad, Kalahandy, Patna, and Bustar, and part of Chutteesgurh, thereby causing the second high flood in the Mahanuddy; but for this we have little or no data except the flood levels lately recorded.

17. Subject as we are to such high freshes in the Mahanuddy, it would be well to extend the irrigation with caution until flood escapes have been provided in some shape or form to carry off the surplus water which the delta rivers, as they at present exist, cannot discharge.

18. The scheme proposed by Major Harris in his Report, Part III, to take the surplus water into the Chilka Lake viâ Daltolah and the Moonoogonce, is, I think, worthy of consideration, if it be found that the Mahanuddy and the Daib when regulated cannot carry off the surplus water between them; vide sketch map which accompanied this Office Report, of which this is a continuation.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE FORTNIGHT ENDING THE 30th JANUARY 1873.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Prospects continue favorable. The unusual cold of the preceding fortnight seems to have passed away without doing more than slight damage in some districts. In Bombay prices are steady, or even show a tendency again to fall. There has been a beneficial rainfall, more or less heavy, in the upper division of the North-Western Provinces and the eastern districts of the Punjab. In the lower portion of the North-Western Provinces and in Oudh rain is still wanted.

RESOLUTION.

BEFORE entering upon the consideration of the questions raised in these memorials, the Governor General in Council desires to express the satisfaction with which he has observed the interest felt in the cause of education by those classes in Bengal which are represented by the memorialists, and their appreciation of the importance of its maintenance and extension. But as it appears from the memorials themselves, as well as from expressions of opinion which have appeared elsewhere, that some misapprehension exists as to the general policy of the Government of India with regard to education, His Excellency in Council thinks it necessary to state that policy distinctly.

ieneral Educational Policy laid down and continuously recognized by the Home Government.

2. The educational policy of the Government of India is founded upon the despatch of the 19th of July 1854.

3. The Court of Directors then emphatically declared that the education which they desired to see extended in India was "that which "has for its object the diffusion of the improved arts—science, "philosophy, and literature—of Europe, in short of European "knowledge."

They observed that, while a knowledge of English would always be essential to those natives of India who aspire to a high order of education, the Vernacular languages of the country must be the media of the instruction of the great mass of the people. English accordingly was to be taught where a demand for it might be found to exist, but not, in substitution of the Vernacular languages.

Institutions for the study of the classical languages of India were to be maintained as commanding the veneration of the people, and as useful auxiliaries in the great work of education. A university was to be established, on the model of the London University, at each of the three Presidency Towns. The universities were not to be themselves places of education, but were to test the value of the education given in Government and aided Anglo-Vernacular Colleges affiliated to the universities.

The Court of Directors expressed their apprehension that circumstances had led "to too exclusive a direction of the efforts of Government towards providing the means of acquiring a very high degree of education for a small number of natives of India, drawn, for the most part, from what we should here call the higher classes," and pointed out that, by the measures they were prepared to adopt as regards the establishment of colleges and universities, all would have been done which a Government could do to place the benefits of education plainly and practically before the higher classes in India. "'Our attention' they added should now be directed to to a consideration, "if possible, still more important, and one which has been hitherto, "we are bound to admit, too much neglected, viz., how useful and "practical knowledge, suited to every station in life, may be best "conveyed to the great mass of the people, who are utterly incapable "of obtaining any education worthy of the name by their own "unaided efforts, and we desire to see the active measures of Government more especially directed for the future to this object."

Paragraphs 39 to 42.

With this object they directed that Government schools should be established as models, to be superseded gradually by schools under private management, supported by grants-in-aid on principles of perfect religious equality. Schools, whether purely Government institutions, or aided, were to be in regular gradation, from those which gave the humblest elementary instruction up to the highest colleges; and the best pupils of one grade were to rise through the other grades by means of scholarships obtained in the lower school and tenable in the higher. To provide masters, normal schools were to be established, and moderate allowances given for the support of those who possessed an aptness for teaching, and were willing to devote themselves to the profession of school-masters.

Female education was to receive cordial support. In addition to the Government and aided colleges and schools for general education, special institutions for imparting special education in law, medicine, engineering, art, and agriculture, were to receive the aid and encouragement of Government. The whole system of education was to be carried out by the establishment of an Educational Department, comprising an adequate machinary for inspection, in each Presidency and Lieutenant-Governorship.

Education was to be aided and supported by the principal officials in every District, and was to receive the direct encouragement of the State, by the opening of Government appointments to those who had received a good education, irrespective of the place or manner in which it had been acquired, and, in the lower situations, by preferring a man who could read and write, if equally eligible in other respects, to one who could not do so.

4. The policy which had been laid down by the Court of Directors in 1854 was confirmed, and the operation of the means prescribed by them for the accomplishment of the general objects which had been set before the Government of India was examined by Lord Stanley in his despatch of the 7th April 1859, after the direct government of India had been assumed by the Crown. In that despatch the relative claims of higher and elementary education to public support were treated as follows:

"If Government shall have undertaken the responsibility of "placing within reach of the general population the means of a simple "elementary education, those individuals or classes who require more "than this may, as a general rule, be left to exert themselves to "procure it with or without the assistance of Government."

5. In 1863* the Secretary of State (Sir Charles Wood) noticed the view which had been put forward by certain officers that Government should, for the present, limit "its measures to providing the means of education for the higher classes, and that the education of the lower classes should be left to be effected hereafter, when the classes above them should have not only learnt to appreciate the advantages of education for themselves, but have become desirous of extending its benefits to those below them." He pointed out that "it was one great object proposed in the despatch of the 19th "July 1854 to provide for the extension to the general population of "those means of obtaining an education suitable to their station in "life which had heretofore been too exclusively confined to the "higher classes; it is abundantly clear from Lord Stanley's despatch "of 7th April 1859 that Her Majesty's Government entertained at "that time the same sentiments which had been expressed by the "Home authorities in 1854." He then declared that Her Majesty's Government "have no intention of sanctioning a departure from the "principles already deliberately laid down."

* Despatch No. 12, dated 29th December 1863, paragraph 11.

6. The same principles were again re-affirmed in 1864,* and finally,† in 1870, the Duke of Argyll assured the Governor General in Council that there "has been no alteration of the main views of the Home Government" as contained in the despatches above referred to, and expressed his general approval of the principle "that the Government expenditure should, "as far as possible, be reduced with re-"ference to the education of those who "are well able to pay for themselves, and should be mainly directed "to the provision of an elementary education for the masses of the "people." His Grace, however, pointed out that, "though the policy "indicated in this general statement is a sound one, it is obvious that "its judicious application to our educa-"tional system in India will require "a very careful regard to the circumstances, disposition, and "degree of civilisation of the people," and he added that "those "amongst whom an English system has struck the deepest root, "though generally of the literary or higher castes, can by no "means be described as belonging to the wealthier classes of society." His Grace also observed that the foundation for the general system of education which it was the desire of the Government to establish was to be laid by instilling "into the real upper classes of India the "conviction now entertained, but not entertained till very lately by "every enlightened man in England, that "one of the main duties of society is "to provide for the sound primary instruction of the humbler "classes."

* Despatch No. 13, dated 25th April 1864, paragraph 6.

† Despatch No 6, dated 26th May 1870, paragraph 4.

Paragraph 5.

Paragraph 6.

Paragraph 9.

7. With regard to the particular recommendations then made by the Government of India, the Duke of Argyll agreed that it was inexpedient "that "Government colleges should be maintained in actual competition." He, however, pointed out the distinction between colleges in competition and those in co-operation, the test prescribed being that "two "colleges should not be maintained when the students now distributed "between the two could without difficulty be educated in one, "and when that one is easily accessible to all seeking instruc-"tion."

Paragraph 11.

The reduction of the State expenditure on colleges in Bengal "to an equality with the sum total of the "endowments and fees of the colleges" was regarded as "a proper object for attainment," but "one to which "the approach should be made with caution."

Paragraph 12

With these expressions of the views of the Home Government, the Secretary of State left the subject to the administration of the Governor General in Council.

Paragraphs 17 and 18.

Intention of discouraging spread of English education disclaimed by Government of India in 1870.

8. A few months later, in transmitting to the Secretary of State a memorial from the inhabitants of Lower Bengal against the discouragment of English education, the Government of India* took occasion to "repudiate in "the strongest terms any intention "whatever to discourage the spread of the English language and the "teaching of that language in the schools of Lower Bengal. What "we have discouraged," they said, "is the expenditure of the com-"paratively small funds available from imperial revenues on that one "object, nearly to the exclusion of all other kinds of education from "the advantage of aid from this source."

* Despatch No. 11, 25th October 1870.

Application of the prescribed principles to present state of education in Bengal.

9. Applying the general policy laid down in 1854 (which has been continuously recognized and frequently re-affirmed) to the present state of education in Bengal, and having fully considered the despatches from the Secretary of State, which deal especially with that subject, the Governor General in Council is of opinion that he is correctly interpreting the policy of Her Majesty's Government by declaring that it is right in principle to diminish to some extent the funds now applied to the higher English education, and to devote more funds to the improvement and extension of primary education; but that the change should be made with caution, and so as not to involve the risk of checking the present popularity and success of the institutions, whether Government or aided, which provide for higher English education in Bengal.

Authority delegated to Local Governments by scheme of Provincial Service Assignments.

10. In dealing with the memorials now under consideration, it is necessary at the outset to remember that the system of Provincial Service Assignments inaugurated by the resolution of the Government of India of the 14th of December 1870 allows to the Local Governments full liberty in the expenditure of the funds appropriated to Provincial Services, "subject to certain restrictions," and that the responsibility for the administration of those services was to a large extent transferred, along with the financial control over them, from the Government of India to the Local Governments. The restrictions as regards education were laid down as follows:

Paragraph 27.

"No law exists upon the subject of education, but the policy of "the Government has been declared and "prescribed in despatches from the Secretary of State, the authority of which and of the rules sanctioned "by the Government of India regarding 'grants-in-aid' and other "matters of general principle is not affected by this resolution."

Resolution of the 14th December 1870, paragraph 26.

In accordance with the spirit of the resolution, the Governor General in Council desires to look at the educational measures of the Government of Bengal rather with reference to the broad line of policy which is being followed, than to administrative details.

Memorial of British Indian Association.

11. The British Indian Association, the Nuddea People's Association, and the Rajshahye Association have stated several objections to those measures, and it is alleged that the policy of the Bengal Government "has produced a deep feeling of alarm, distrust, and "despondency from one end of the country to the other."

12. The Governor General in Council has carefully considered how far the measures complained of justify the use of such strong terms, and whether they are opposed to the policy laid down by Her Majesty's Government.

Measures taken by the Government of Bengal.

13. The reductions and changes which have been effected are, briefly, as follows:

1st, The Establishments of the Berhampore, Kishnagur, and Sanskrit Colleges have been reduced by abolishing the third and fourth years' college classes, the teaching in those colleges being now limited to the standard of the First Arts Examination at the Calcutta University;

2nd, 20,000 Rupees out of the money thus saved, have been assigned to instruction in the physical sciences, surveying, drawing, &c., in schools and colleges; education in these sciences has been encouraged by allotting to them about one-fourth of the 40 senior scholarships hitherto assigned to literature, and by similar arrangements with regard to junior, minor, and Vernacular scholarships; and a department has been established in the Hoogly and Patna Colleges for the purpose of training candidates for the Civil Service of Government;

3rd, In the Sanskrit College a separate Professor for Hindoo Law is no longer entertained, but the office of lecturing is made over to one of the other Professors. The study of Sanskrit in Government schools has been made optional, instead of compulsory; the teaching of it to any boy who is below the third class is prohibited; and it is not allowed to be taught in a school unless ten boys wish to learn it.

Objection of memorialists that reduction of colleges is opposed to the intentions of Home Government.

14. Objection is taken to the alterations which have been made in the Berhampore, Kishnagur, and Sanskrit Colleges, on the ground that they are opposed to the Education despatch of 1854, and the following passage from that despatch is quoted in support of the objection: "The candidates for university degrees will, as we have "already explained, be supplied by colleges affiliated to the universi-"ties. These will comprise all such institutions as are capable of sup-"plying a sufficiently high order of instruction in the different branches "of art and science in which university degrees will be accorded. The "Hindu, Hooghly, Dacca, Krishnaghur, and Berhampore Govern-"ment Anglo-Vernacular Colleges, the Sanskrit College, the Maho-"medan Madrassas, and the Medical College in Bengal * * * "will at once supply a considerable number of educational establish-"ments worthy of being affiliated to the universities, and of occupying "the highest place in the scale of general instruction." It is urged that the obvious inference is that those colleges should be maintained intact for the purpose of supplying candidates for university degrees, and that the reduction of the course of study in any college to the First Arts Standard only (which is the second university examination, but does not confer a degree) is opposed to the terms of the despatch.

The opinion expressed by the Duke of Argyll in May 1870, that a college should not be suppressed which is in 'co-operation' rather than in 'competition' with another—that is to say, that a college should not be suppressed unless the students now distributed between the two can, without difficulty, be educated in one of them, that one being easily accessible to all seeking instruction—is brought forward as also condemning the reductions that have been made in the Berhampore, Kishnagur, and Sanskrit Colleges.

It is alleged that the limitation of the educational course in those colleges to the standard of the First Arts Examination, coupled with the alterations made with respect to the study of Sanskrit in Government schools, will have a tendency to reduce the standard of education by rendering it difficult for mofussil students to study up to the First Arts Examination, in which a classical language (practically speaking Sanskrit in Bengal), in addition to English, is required by the University scheme.

Apprehension is expressed lest it should be the intention of the Government to concentrate all higher education in the Presidency College at Calcutta.

Lastly, an endeavour is made to show that "the claims of the "masses to education are not neglected, and that the policy of retrench-"ing the charge for high education with a view to further it, is "uncalled for."

15. His Excellency in Council does not consider that to reduce, in the Kishnagur, Berhampore, and Sanskrit Colleges, the two classes which provide for the education of students, who, after passing the First Arts Examination, wish to proceed to the B. A. and Honor Examinations at the Calcutta University, is contrary to the principles of the despatch of 1854, or to the instructions given by the Secretary of State in May 1870.

The despatch of 1854, so far from declaring that all Anglo-Vernacular Colleges should be maintained intact, urged upon the Government of India the expediency, under certain circumstances, of reducing the number of those colleges. The change that has been made in the educational course of the colleges that have now been dealt with by the Government of Bengal, does not involve the suppression of any college, but is simply an arrangement under which the limited number of students who formerly composed the classes for the B. A. and Honor Examinations in the Kishnagur, Berhampore, and Sanskrit Colleges, will continue their studies either at the Hoogly or Presidency Colleges. Kishnagur and Berhampore are within easy distance of Hoogly and Calcutta, and the Sanskrit College is actually under the same roof with the Presidency College at Calcutta; His Excellency, therefore, considers that the change comes within the conditions laid down by the Secretary of State as to the necessity of the means of education being easily accessible to the students.

Objection as to changes with regard to study of Sanskrit in schools.

16. While His Excellency in Council does not desire in any way to discourage the voluntary study of Sanskrit and the other classical languages of India, he agrees with the Lieutenant-Governor that it is inexpedient to make the study of Sanskrit compulsory in Government schools. With every consideration for the opinions of those who attach a high importance to the Sanskrit language, His Excellency does not consider that the standard of education in India mainly depends upon the degree of proficiency which the students may attain in the classical languages of the East. Upon this subject His Excellency in Council desires to express his complete adherence to the sentiments contained in the Education despatch of 1854, which have already been quoted in this resolution, to the effect that the educational efforts of Government should be directed to the diffusion of European knowledge, and that the classical languages of India cannot be looked to as the principal means of securing that object, but only as useful auxiliaries to the education which is obtained through a knowledge of the English language and disseminated to the people through the Vernacular languages of the country.

With regard to the restriction of the study of Sanskrit in Government schools, the Governor General in Council observes that, since the memorial was drawn up, the Lieutenant-Governor has extended the option of beginning the study of this language to the third class, so that students will have three years in which to qualify before presenting themselves for the First Arts Examination. His Honor will without doubt watch the results of the change, in order that the opportunities given for the study shall be such as fully to meet the requirements of the university standard.

Objection as to concentration of high education at Presidency.

17. His Excellency in Council does not think that there is any good ground for the apprehension that all high education in Bengal will be concentrated at the Presidency College, for four Government colleges, teaching up to the highest standards, will remain intact: the Presidency and Hoogly Colleges to serve Central and West Bengal, the Dacca College for East Bengal, and the Patna College for Behar.

Objection that primary education is already sufficiently cared for.

18. If His Excellency in Council is to understand any of the memorialists to be of opinion that the need for the extension and improvement of primary education among the masses of the people in Bengal is not urgent, and does not require the application to that purpose of all savings that may properly be made in the cost of higher education, His Excellency must express his dissent from that opinion, and his cordial concurrence with the declaration made by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in reviewing the Director of Public Instruction's Report for 1870-71,* "that it is the "policy of the Supreme Government and "of the Bengal Government to promote and foster all sound educa-"tion; but it is the wish of both Governments that out of the public "money available for educational purposes a larger share than here-"tofore should be given to the support of elementary education in the "villages of Bengal."

* Paragraph 3 of resolution.

19. His Excellency in Council trusts that the memorialists will rest assured that there is no desire on the part of the Government to depreciate the importance, or to discourage the cultivation, of high English education in Bengal. His Excellency has observed with satisfaction the great progress that has been made of late years in the general knowledge of the English language, as well as the complete command of English which has been acquired by many members of the Calcutta University, whose literary works are deserving of high praise. These results are cordially and heartily recognised by His Excellency in Council: they prove that remarkable success has attended the measures which have been adopted during the last twenty years by the scholars and statesmen who have directed the course of education; and they show that the future success of English education in Bengal is established beyond the risk of failure by the firm hold which it has acquired upon the people.

Approval of measures adopted by the Lieutenant-Governor.

20. In concluding this review of the objections that have been made to certain educational measures recently adopted by the Government of Bengal, His Excellency in Council desires to express his deliberate opinion that in these measures the Lieutenant-Governor has not departed from the broad line of educational policy which has been laid down by Her Majesty's Government during a long series of years; and he desires, in addition, to express his cordial approval of the steps which His Honor has taken to give a more practical turn to education in Bengal, as well as his gratification at the advance which has been made in the encouragement of the primary instruction of the people. His Excellency is confident that the Lieutenant-Governor will be sensible of the importance of carefully watching the practical effect of these measures and of the changes recently introduced. The readiness with which His Honor has modified the views which he at first entertained, regarding the alterations in the constitution of the Sanskrit and Patna Colleges, and the period during which the study of Sanskrit should be allowed in schools, is a sufficient guarantee of His Honor's willingness to give full consideration to all reasonable representations, and to act upon such of them as may be well founded.

21. His Excellency in Council desires that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the British Indian Association, the Nuddea People's Association, and the Rajshahye Association. The memorial of the Dacca People's Association refers almost entirely to the proposed reduction of the college classes in the Patna College, which, upon further consideration, the Government of Bengal have decided not to carry into effect.

ORDER.—Ordered, that copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Government of Bengal with reference to its communications referred to above, and with a request that copies may be furnished to the British Indian Association, the Dacca People's Association, the Nuddea People's Association, and the Rajshahye Association, in reply to their memorials.

Ordered, that copies be also forwarded to all other Governments and Administrations for their information.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 21st January 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.

MINORS' DEPOSITS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to legalize the repayment of money deposited in District Savings Banks in the names of Minors.

TRANSHIPMENT OF GOODS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the Transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer.

BILLS OF LADING BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to authorize the use of adhesive stamps for Bills of Lading. He said the Bill was a very short one, and the Statement of Objects and Reasons showed the grounds upon which the Bill was introduced, and with His Lordship's permission he would read that Statement to the Council:—

"At present, bills-of-lading are stamped by having an adhesive stamp affixed, and by being then sent to the Collector to have the stamp effaced with a die. This is found to cause delay, especially at the busy shipping season. It has, therefore, been determined that the stamps to be used for bills-of-lading shall be adhesive, and shall thus merely require to be affixed to such bills."

The Hon'ble MR. BULLEN SMITH did not intend to oppose the motion for the introduction of this Bill, although he could not say that he had ever himself found, or indeed had ever heard of, any practical inconvenience attendant upon the present system. If it was remembered that the stamp affixed on bills-of-lading bore in each case the small value of four annas, the whole set of three merely implying an item of twelve annas, and that that same value applied equally to large and small shipments, it followed that the lock-up of capital to keep a few sets of bills-of-lading in hand was not very great; and he therefore could not recognize the practical inconvenience said to be attendant on the present system which rendered the employment of adhesive stamps desirable. He however wished to suggest to the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, if he considered it necessary to interfere at all, whether he would consent to add the words "and other documents," after the words "bills-of-lading." He alluded to other mercantile documents used in the shipment of goods, namely, policies of insurance, on which stamps must now be impressed as on bills-of-lading. The former bore an ad valorem duty varying with the extent of the shipment; and therefore, until the shipment was completed— until the shipper had positive knowledge of the extent and value of his goods actually received on board—he could not provide himself with the proper stamped paper. It therefore seemed somewhat anomalous to say that bills-of-lading should be relieved from the inconvenience of having impressed stamps put upon them, and that the far greater inconvenience occasioned by the necessity for putting impressed stamps on the collateral documents to which he had alluded, and which required stamps of changing value, should be left unrelieved. He hoped the Council had been able to follow him. He did not recognize the practical necessity for the introduction of this Bill, but if it was to be introduced, he could see abundant reason to afford greater facilities by stamping other documents also with adhesive stamps, and he would be glad if the hon'ble member would add the words which he (MR. BULLEN SMITH) had suggested, and the Council could then consider in Committee the cases which it might be advisable to include in the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. STEWART took the same view as that which was taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Bullen Smith. He did not think that, practically, the present system had proved inconvenient; and he thought with his hon'ble colleague that, inasmuch as the lock-up of capital was trifling, the practice might remain as it stood. But it appeared to him that, if any alteration was made, it should be considered, not only with reference to bills-of-lading, but also with reference to other mercantile documents.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said that, after what had fallen from the hon'ble members who had preceded him, he thought it proper to offer a word or two of advice from his own experience. Until a comparatively recent period, the rule was to use impressed stamps. But in the last two or three years that practice had been much changed, and there was a very large number of cases in which adhesive stamps had been substituted for impressed stamps. He did not know the reasons for that change of policy, and his impression was that they were not known to the public. HIS HONOUR must tell the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, what he believed the hon'ble member had some idea of, that one result of that change had been that enormous frauds had occurred in the Courts in the immediate neighbourhood of Calcutta. The public revenue had not only been largely sacrificed, but the people had been much demoralized. These stamps were easily stolen, and were easily forged; forged, false and converted stamps had been used in the most wholesale manner in all the Courts. In one Court, no less than 1,495 forged or fraudulent stamps were appended to the documents in one single case. Enquiries had been made, but the judges and mini-terial officers said that it was very difficult to detect the use of these counterfeit stamps; that they could not be held responsible; and it was found very difficult to bring home the blame to any one. That being so, if such results had taken place under our noses, and our commercial friends had told us that it was safer to retain the existing practice in regard to bills-of-lading, it did seem to him a matter for serious consideration whether, unless the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill had good reasons, of which the Council were not aware, we should go one step further in that dangerous path. His Honour was surprised that the hon'ble members who represented commercial interests in the Council, and who, individually, were such prominent members of the commercial community, had not been consulted previously to resolving on the introduction of this Bill. He would suggest that it was desirable that the matter should be fully considered before the Council proceeded another step in that direction.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple was not sure whether he need occupy the time of the Council by replying to the objections just raised by the Lieutenant Governor, inasmuch as these objections applied, not so much to the small Bill before the Council, as to the system of our stamp law in general. This system had very recently been established after great consideration on the part of the Government of India, and on the part of the Legislative Council. Therefore, he (Sir Richard Temple) doubted whether the Council wished to re-discuss this large question at this moment, at the instance of the Lieutenant Governor. However, he (Sir Richard Temple) had listened to the Lieutenant Governor's objections as just stated, and would, on introducing the Bill hereafter (should leave for introduction now be given) give such reply, if any, as might seem, on consideration, to be expedient. For the present, it would suffice to say that the points of detail just mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Bullen Smith and the Hon'ble Mr. Stewart would be carefully considered in Committee if the Bill should be introduced; and doubtless these hon'ble gentlemen would be good enough to serve on the Committee (if it be appointed) and afford the benefit of their practical knowledge.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA FERRIES BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bayley moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Ferries in British Burma be taken into consideration.

As the majority of the Members of the Council had not been present when this Bill was introduced, it might, perhaps, be convenient if he were to explain the necessity for this Bill and its incidents. At present, the law in British Burma might be said to differ in each division of the province. The province of Akyáb was originally part of Bengal, and the law obtaining in that province was the old law which prevailed in Bengal, and which it had been found necessary to alter here. As to Pegu and Tenasserim, different executive rules had been passed in each of these divisions, varying in details, which rules had, it was believed, attained the force of law under the Indian Councils' Act, and even that was not certain. There were, therefore, three different and imperfect systems of law as to Ferries existing in British Burma. But as the civilization of the province was rapidly advancing, and as villages and large marts were rising, and as traffic of every kind was increasing, and as much of it passed over ferries, it had become a matter of some importance to place the law on a satisfactory footing. The Chief Commissioner of British Burma submitted a draft, which was founded on the model of the law as now applied to the different provinces in the Bengal Presidency, and also upon the clauses relating to ferries in the Madras Act on that subject. The draft was slightly altered by the Legislative Department, and was then transferred for the final consideration of the authorities in British Burma. The Council received the Bill back with the remarks of the Chief Commissioner and Judicial Commissioner of Burma and of the Government Advocate at Rangoon, and the Committee had considered all their suggestions and had in a great measure adopted them. Mr. Bayley had now only to ask that the report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

MADRAS DISTRICT MUNSIFS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to District Munsifs in the Presidency of Fort Saint George be taken into consideration.

This was a Bill of entirely a local character. It would, in fact, have been passed by the Madras legislature, had it not interfered with the High Court. It was therefore necessary that the Bill should be passed by this Council. The Council would also observe, that the title of the Bill, as it stood, was not the same as that by which it was introduced and by which it was still called. The fact was, that the Bill was introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell so long ago as June 1870, and it was then a Bill relating to District Munsifs alone: it consolidated the law, and made only one alteration of importance namely, extending the jurisdiction of those Munsifs, from the pecuniary limit of rupees 1,000, to the limit of rupees 2,500, and Mr. Cockerell then stated that that was the only substantial alteration effected by the Bill. But, in introducing it, he proposed to extend the measure, or to introduce another Bill which would deal with the District Courts and Subordinate Judges in Madras also. That alteration was made in Committee, and the Bill, as it now stood, was a Bill for the purpose of dealing with the Civil Courts subordinate to the High Court. There had been considerable delay in the passing of this measure, which arose from the circumstance that the Madras Government at one time desired that it should not pass until some fresh arrangements had been made for the better adjustment of work between the Judicial and the Revenue authorities. It was found, subsequently, that the time for doing so was not ripe, or there were other practical difficulties in the way. The Madras Government withdrew that objection, and in the first half of the year the Council proceeded with the Bill at Simla. They had since had a good deal of correspondence with the Madras Government; the Bill had been carefully considered by the civil authorities and by the Judges of the High Court at Madras, and it had met with the approval of the Madras Government.

The alterations effected in the prior Bill, with the exception of slight ones amounting to little more than matters of form, were three. One was the extension of the District Munsif's jurisdiction from rupees 1,000 to rupees 2,500. This was exactly half the limit of pecuniary jurisdiction of Subordinate Judges of the second class in the Presidency of Bombay; and, in the Presidency of Bengal, the jurisdiction of Munsifs had been raised, not to the same absolute amount, but in nearly the same proportion. Here, the jurisdiction was recently raised from rupees 300 to rupees 1,000. With respect to suits which were brought for the purpose of obtaining possession of land, the extension was more nominal than real. The Bill provided that the Court Fees' Act should be used for the valuation of suits for land; and that Act put the valuation so much higher than the present mode of valuation, that, in point of fact, the limits of jurisdiction in such suits were very little extended by this Bill. That extension of jurisdiction was made with the approval of the local authorities, and of every one who had expressed an opinion upon the point.

The next alteration was that the High Court, instead of the Local Government, were to fix the limits of the local jurisdiction of District Munsifs, and also the places at which they were to hold their Courts. That, at present, was done by the Local Government; but the Committee was told that, in point of fact, the Local Government always left it to the High Court to fix those limits, and the places at which these Munsifs' Courts should be held. So that the Local Government performed that duty ostensibly; but in substance and in essence it was done by the High Court for a number of years past. We were, therefore, only altering the law so as to bring it in accordance with the settled practice.

The third alteration was, the omission of the clause which was in the Bill, as introduced, requiring official oaths or affirmations to be taken by Munsifs on appointment. The reason for this omission was, that several Courts Acts lately passed by this Council had taken the same course. That had been done with respect to British Burma and Oudh; and with the permission of the Council, MR. HOBHOUSE would read to them what had been put upon record in the case of the latter Province. He held in his hand the report of the Select Committee on the Oudh Civil Courts Bill, one sentence of which was as follows:—

"We propose to dispense with the taking of oaths or making solemn affirmations on accession to any new office under this Act, as we regard the practice as a mere form devoid of any practical utility."

That report was signed by Messrs. Cockerell, Davies, Strachey, Stephen, Ellis and Egerton.

In moving to pass the Bill, with respect to the Civil Courts in Oudh, Mr. Cockerell made some observations which MR. HOBHOUSE would read to the Council. He (Mr. Cockerell) said—

"We proposed to omit the provisions of the original Bill on the subject of taking oaths or making solemn affirmations on accession to judicial office. They were introduced as part of the usual furniture of 'Courts Acts.' It was thought, however, that this practice of taking oaths of office was of the number of those ancient customs which were more honoured in the breach than in the observance, and, in fact, there could be little doubt that, since the enactment of the Penal Code, this attempt to get a sort of artificial security for a public officer's honest discharge of his duty was wholly superfluous."

That was accepted by the Council, and the Act was passed in that form. In revising this Bill the Committee proposed to act on the same principle. The Madras Government had been consulted on the point, and they assented.

His Highness THE MAHÁRÁJÁ OF VIZIANAGRAM said, it gave him peculiar pleasure to find that the Government had been pleased to grant the appeal of the commercial community of the town of Bimlipatam which was situated in his own country, and who were the first people to request Government to extend the powers of the District Munsifs throughout the Madras Presidency. The Bill, as now amended, was in all respects precisely in accordance with the views of the Madras Government, and he therefore thought that, when it was passed into law, it would gain its object in every respect. He would therefore give his full concurrence to the passing of it.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, when he looked over this Bill, it seemed to him that the system of Civil Courts in the Madras Presidency was the same as that which prevailed in Bengal, and that the Madras Civil Courts' Bill might have been the Bengal Civil Courts' Act with very slight alterations. What occurred to him was that, if the system of Courts was identical, would it not be better to refer the Bill back to the Committee in order that it might be incorporated in one Bill with the Bengal Civil Courts' Act? We might then, in fact, have one general Bill on the subject for all India, as one general form of Criminal Courts was provided for in the Code of Criminal Procedure. If this Bill was a final Bill, he should certainly have recommended that course; but he did not do so, because, in his opinion, the system of Civil Courts both in Madras and Bengal was a bad system; and he wished to guard against the idea that he thought this Bill was a good Bill, or that he thought the system was a good system. If the Council revised the Code of Civil Procedure, the opportunity might be taken to revise the system of Civil Courts, making it one Code of Civil Courts and Civil Procedure, corresponding with the Code of Criminal Procedure, which was one Code of Criminal Courts and Criminal Procedure combined together. It appeared to HIS HONOUR that, when we looked to the Courts of original jurisdiction and compared them with the English Courts, the procedure in this country was found to be most dilatory and expensive, and the District Appellate Courts were not strong enough and experienced enough, and not worthy to exercise appellate jurisdiction. If we looked to the High Courts, they were no doubt worthy in all respects; but the judicial officers under them were given to the most unfortunate system of being guided by precedents. There seemed to be a preference for hunting up unfortunate precedents which had been created by the judgments, or mis-reports of judgments, of any Judge of the High Court, and making them the rule of decision, instead of looking to the ninety-nine cases out of a hundred in which the Judges had announced just, righteous and good doctrines of law. The whole system of our Civil Courts was, in His Honour's opinion, rotten to the core, and he should vote for this Bill merely as a measure that had gone so far; but he still hoped that the whole system would be re-considered at some not distant time.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bayley said, that the question of the constitution of the Civil Courts all over India had been for a long time under consideration. That question had not escaped the consideration of the Government of India; on the contrary, they were seeking to do everything which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor wished to be done. But the reason for passing this Bill separately was that it was regarded as a necessary measure at the present time. The other and more general subject was a very large and difficult one, and it was impossible to say in what space of time it could be dealt with. It was therefore thought proper not to delay the passage of an Act of this much smaller scope for a measure of a much more comprehensive nature, the consideration and determination of which must occupy an indefinite space of time.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse was glad to observe that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor did not find it his duty to oppose the passing of this Bill. It was a small piece of consolidation that cleared the Statute-book, and, to some extent, cleared the law on the subject in the Madras Presidency, and was of a character similar to the Acts passed for the purpose for various parts of India. His Honour was kind enough to assign to him a work which he justly said would give Mr. Hobhouse occupation for a long time to come. Mr. Hobhouse feared that, instead of his seeing that work completed, the work would see him out. The same sort of controversy had gone on for the last forty years. A special Committee sat upon it at Simla in the year 1831. That Committee made recommendations which gave rise to very animated discussions, and the same sort of thing had been going on from time to time ever since; and if he was the lucky man to settle that question, he should have more good fortune than all his predecessors and the various Governments had for the last forty years. His Honour did not appear to hold out to him a very hopeful case, for he said the system of the Civil Courts in this country was "rotten to the core," and, in support of that assertion, he pointed out certain things which prevailed universally wherever law was administered, and, indeed, in every department of life. Most people preferred to inform and guide themselves by example and precedent, instead of trusting to what the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to call 'equity,' but which Mr. Hobhouse called unguided guessing.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple said, as a member of the Executive Government, he felt called upon to say that the expression which was used by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor "rotten to the core" was an exaggeration. However important this discussion might be, and however free and unreserved it ought to be, he confessed, he thought, the interests of public justice would not be upheld by the use of such a very strong expression. Of what was civil justice composed? It was composed, firstly, of substantive law, secondly, of procedure, and, thirdly, of administrative machinery. As regards substantive law, he thought the Council would bear him out in saying that the exertions of the Government of India and the legislature had been great in this country, and that great assistance had been received from some of the most eminent authorities in England. As regards procedure, he admitted that the law might be capable of improvement; but still, in that respect the law here was generally supposed to be amongst the best systems in the world, and immense improvements had been made upon the procedure which formerly obtained in this country. And as regards administrative machinery, the Department over which he presided was witness to the fact that no expense had been spared to improve its efficiency. Larger salaries had been sanctioned to the judiciary, and great expense had been incurred from time to time to make it more and more efficient. He appealed to the Council to say whether that general statement of facts was not correct, and if it was correct, whether it was right to apply to the judicial system in this country the expression which His Honour had thought fit to use, "rotten to the core."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR wished to explain that he was not aware whether the expression he had used, and to which objection had been taken, was Parliamentary or un-Parliamentary; but he might say that he did not intend to apply it to the law of procedure or to any defects due to financial restrictions. On the contrary, he was ready to acknowledge that the Government of India in the Financial Department had been most liberal in the provision which it had from time to time made for the improvement of the Courts. He applied the expression to the constitution and practice of the Courts themselves, and not to the procedure under which they worked.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTHERN INDIA IRRIGATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON moved that the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India be taken into consideration.

The Council would recollect that, in 1871, an Act was passed for the regulation of Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in the Panjáb. That Act contained certain provisions to which exception was taken by the Secretary of State regarding rates on land which was irrigable but not irrigated. It was partly because those sections were accepted by the Government of the Panjáb and objected to by other Governments in Northern India, that the Act was made applicable to the Panjáb only. When the Secretary of State desired that the Act should be re-considered and if possible made applicable to the whole of Northern India, a Bill was introduced by Sir John Strachey, omitting the clauses to which exception had been taken, and the Local Governments of the North-Western Provinces, the Central Provinces and Oudh were consulted regarding any clauses which they thought it advisable to insert in the Bill. It would be seen that the subject had been narrowed down a good deal by the discussions which had taken place before the Act of 1871 was passed, as the measure was originally proposed for the whole of Northern India; but, when passed, its operation was restricted to the Panjáb alone. The papers received upon the present Bill were again considered in Select Committee at Simla, and the report of the Committee was presented by Sir John Strachey in October last. The Committee recommended that the Bill, as amended, should be again published in the Gazette, and the opinions of the Local Governments again invited. That had been done. The replies of the Local Governments had been received; the Committee here had considered those communications, and had embodied in the Bill the suggestions made, submitting their final report which was now before the Council. It would thus be seen that there had been three stages of discussion upon this measure. First, the stage which preceded the passing of Act XXX of 1871; then the discussion which preceded the report of the Select Committee at Simla on the Bill; and, thirdly, the discussions on the opinions of the Local Governments on the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the result of which was embodied in the report now under consideration.

The alterations made since the Bill was prepared at Simla were very few. In section 8, modifications had been made in accordance with the suggestions of the North-Western Provinces Government, the effect of which was to admit claims for compensation on account of the stoppage or diminution of water-supply to or through works or channels constructed after the passing of the Act. These claims were excluded in the Bill as formerly amended, and that was a considerable concession to the persons who would have to be compensated.

The second alteration was of less importance. By section 35, the Divisional Canal Officer was empowered to decide questions as to liability to charge when water supplied through a water-course was suffered to run to waste, and in a later part of the Bill, section 48 had been altered so as to enable the Local Government to remunerate Collectors of canal-dues, or indemnify them against expenses incurred in the collection of those dues.

The Bill was now substantially in accordance with the wishes of the Local Governments to whose administrations it would apply; and considering the length of time during which it had been under consideration, and how much discussion it had received, it was unnecessary for him to enter into any recital of the principles upon which it was framed. The Council had received notice of several amendments, but he would not allude to them until they had been proposed.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY moved that, for section 8, clause (a), the following be substituted :—

"(a) stoppage or diminution of percolation, or of floods, except so far as such stoppage or diminution is provided for by clause (e) of this section."

He said the amendment, although apparently a mere verbal one, was of a really practical character, intended to make more clear the intention of the Bill, and of some importance as making misconception impossible on a somewhat serious point. As the section (8) to which his amendment referred now stood, clause (a) declared that no compensation should be given for the stoppage or diminution of percolation or floods; but by the subsequent clause, (e), compensation was declared claimable for injury done to irrigation-channels. In the Panjáb there were several classes of irrigation-channels, and one very large class were termed "inundation-canals." They were canals, the head-works of which were cut in the river bank above the cold weather level of the river. These canals were supplied only when the river swelled, either by the melting of the snow in the hot weather, or during the rains. As to the question of the supply of water to these canals during the rains, no works likely to be undertaken could possibly diminish the supply; but in regard to the supply to those canals which depended upon the rise of water in the river from the melting of the snow, the case was different. In some works which had been lately executed, the hot weather supply to such canals was entirely cut off, and it was quite possible that that might be the case in other instances. These canals were more important than other irrigation-channels, because they supplied water in that part of the year when it was most valuable. It appeared to MR. BAYLEY that the intention of the Bill was, that the owners of these canals should not be excluded from compensation in cases where their supply was destroyed or diminished, and he understood the honourable mover to be of opinion that no misconception could arise because these channels were filled, not by floods, but by the normal rise of the river; but, as the Bill stood, it might be held that these canals were supplied by flood, for it was impossible to define exactly what was the normal rise of a river, and what was a flood, or to distinguish between what was an exceptional, and what a natural, rise of the river. In these cases the river had a broad, low-lying bed between high banks. In no case, he believed, did the rivers ever overtop the high banks, but covered more or less the broad bed between these banks, and within these limits the waters rose much more in some years than in others. It was to prevent all misconception, and any untoward decision declaring against claims for compensation for the stoppage of these irrigation-canals, which would have the effect of destroying very large works and very wide results of private enterprise, that he proposed the amendment. He understood that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, although not convinced that the amendment was necessary in order to make the meaning quite clear, was willing that it should be adopted.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON said, if this were understood, and allowed to pass, as a mere verbal amendment, and if it were taken as merely rendering more plain the meaning of section 8, that compensation for loss or diminution of water-supply to inundation-channels was not excluded by the use of the word "flood" in clause (a), he should have no objection to the use of such words as would make that meaning clearer. But he did not assent to the amendment, because he thought it unnecessary, and because he thought that, according to the Bill as it stood, the meaning was sufficiently clear. The use of the word "flood," in clause (a), did not, to his understanding, exclude the question of loss or diminution of water-supply to any natural or artificial channel under clause (e), because an inundation-canal was supplied, not by floods, which he took to mean a general uncontrolled rise of a river in which the water overflowed its banks, but by the normal rise or fall of the river, which took place with regularity, and was under control, by being passed into the channels of inundation-canals through which water was generally supplied for irrigation. If every rise of the river was to be considered a flood, then he thought the proper meaning was not assigned to the word. He did not think any Collector or Divisional Canal Officer, authorized to grant compensation under this Act, would have any doubt as to what a person should be compensated for under clause (e); and as he thought the meaning was not doubtful, he must oppose the amendment.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, it seemed to him that, on the face of it, the amendment was verbal; and if there should be any doubt upon that point, then he should be inclined to accept the solution suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley, rather than that suggested by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill. HIS HONOUR knew that, in the Panjáb, there were a number of inundation-channels of the kind which had been referred to, and which were supplied from the water of rivers and streams in times of flood. The benefits derived from those floods were very valuable, and he should think it extremely unjust and unfair that canals should be supplied with water from those sources, and that no compensation should be made for the stoppage or diminution of supply to those artificial channels.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE had not the smallest objection to the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley's amendment in substance, because it seemed to him that it expressed that which the Bill as drawn already expressed. He understood that the hon'ble member was not afraid of the effect of the Bill as far as it related to percolation. But as far as it related to floods, he thought, although it was quite right to prevent compensation being given for those floods which, at uncertain intervals, overspread the country, and might do good or might do harm, yet there were other species of floods which filled the channels of rivers with regularity, and thereby enabled the people to get water through artificial channels which they otherwise could not get at the dry times of the year. As the Bill stood, he thought that was the meaning of it. In the first place, MR. HOBHOUSE understood by the word "flood"—and probably all would understand by it—that which caused rivers to break from their natural or defined channels and to overspread the country; he did not think it meant merely an increase in the amount of water, which still flowed in its proper channel, but which only rose more or less so as to enable persons to take water which they could not get at other times of the year. If there was any doubt as to this being its meaning, the doubt would be solved by looking at clauses (a) and (e) together, and it would then at once be seen that they could not mean to say that every increase of water was a flood for which a man was not to receive compensation. Therefore, on the simple construction of the word "flood," the case appeared to be clear enough. But if there was any conflict between the two clauses, then the universal rule of construction in such cases would apply. If you had one set of general expressions ordering one thing, and then a set of particular expressions ordering a different thing, the particular expressions would prevail. Here, you say generally, that a man shall not claim compensation for stoppage of floods, and then provide another rule that he shall be compensated for stoppage or diminution through any natural channel. In such a case, the Judge would consider that the second of those provisions was an exception from the first, and that compensation should be given in all the cases there provided for. MR. HOBHOUSE therefore thought the amendment unnecessary. But he always felt that, when a gentleman of experience and acuteness, such as the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley, thought that language was obscure, it was advisable to make it clearer, if that could be done without undue inconvenience; but if making such an alteration was to delay the passing of the Bill, MR. HOBHOUSE thought that such delay was unnecessary. He feared there was little hope of passing the Bill to-day, because he saw a whole phalanx of amendments to be moved by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. But he wished to explain what his view was as to the meaning of the Bill, as it stood, on the point under consideration.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE having had much the same experience of those canals as the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley, thought it right to add his testimony and to express his concurrence with what had fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse. He thought the Bill, as it stood, did provide means for compensation in the case alluded to by the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley. A man said that, by the execution of certain works, the supply of water was stopped from his artificial channels. Those channels were channels within the meaning of the Bill, and therefore if the supply of water to the channel was stopped or diminished, compensation would be given. He thought the reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse was quite sufficient.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT hoped that his hon'ble friend, after having heard the explanation given by his hon'ble friend, Mr. Hobhouse, would not press the amendment. When the Bill was under discussion at Simla, the Legislative Council took very great pains to weigh as carefully as they could all rights to compensation, and inserted a provision to meet some cases which appeared to have been omitted.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY said, as he had explained in moving the amendment, he still thought that it would be very difficult for any one person to lay down any distinct rule as to what was an abnormal rise of a river, for, having some experience in the matter, he had seen a normal rise of water fill a river's bed to the extent of several miles. But in the face of what had been said by the hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department, and by His Excellency the President, he was not prepared to press the amendment, especially if it would have the effect of weakening the subsequent clauses of the same section, as His Excellency had suggested. He might, however, mention that the present form of his amendment was adopted on the suggestion of the Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse: MR. BAYLEY himself would rather have wished to have put it in other terms, in which no reference to the other clauses of the section would have occurred. But he hoped, after the discussion which had taken place, and the expression of hon'ble members' opinions as to the intention of the Bill, that there would be no real danger of injury from a misconception of its meaning. And if, in any case, by any mistake of any officer of Government or Court of law, a decision should have the effect of depriving the owners of these canals of their right to compensation, the matter would, MR. BAYLEY trusted, after the opinions now stated, be at once set right on an appeal to the Executive Government.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR would ask the permission of His Excellency the President to begin with the amendment which he proposed to move in section 35, as several of the other amendments of which he had given notice depended upon the amendment in section 35.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that it would be better to take the amendments in the order of the sections to which they related.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, the amendments which were numbered in the notice paper as Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 5 hung together, and were practically very nearly one amendment. Therefore, with His Lordship's permission, he would address himself to the whole of that part of the subject before going into the details of his first amendment. This Bill, HIS HONOUR had no doubt, was a very good Bill in the main, having been elaborated by so many able men. Of this Bill, referring as it did to certain provinces of Northern India, he, for his part, would not have complained, if the Bill had been passed by the Council at Simla. But as the Bill had not been so passed, and as it had been brought down for consideration by the Council at Calcutta, which was practically another and a very differently constituted Council, he might say, with reference to the arrangements for the consideration and passing of the Bill made by the honourable member in charge of the Legislative Department, that it did seem to HIS HONOUR to be a very short and sharp practice to give notice to honourable members on one day, and to ask the Council to pass it on the next day. Having given this subject of irrigation much consideration, he had felt himself in a somewhat difficult position, inasmuch as much labour in constructing and moulding the Bill had been gone through, and the Bill now came before the Council in this complete shape. Although this Bill did not apply to Bengal, the country the government of which he administered, HIS HONOUR felt himself in the position of the man who lived in the next house, and when one found that his neighbour's house was on fire, or that his neighbour was about to arrange for a supply of water, to take a more fitting simile, one looked to one's own house, because one's own turn might come next. Not only did HIS HONOUR live in the next house, but its rule in regard to this particular subject had given him much anxious care during the last two years.

In a former period of his service, he had had a great deal to do with canals, in the Northern countries affected by this Bill, and during the last two years he had a very great deal of anxiety on the subject of canals in Bengal. Therefore, taking the Bill in the main as a good Bill, he was anxious to draw the attention of the Council to one or two points which his experience enabled him to suppose might be capable of improvement in this Bill. The gist of the sections to which HIS HONOUR's first amendments referred was, to make the Divisional Canal Officer the judge and jury in his own case. That had always struck HIS HONOUR as a mistake, which he had observed in different parts of India, and also in Bengal. It had at first sight seemed very strange that the Department of all Departments of the Government which was supposed to be most especially designed for the benefit of the people of the country, was the most unpopular in its administration. Wherever canals were under construction, and certainly in the first years of their administration, if not always, it was found that the Canal Department was unpopular. If he was asked what was the reason of that unpopularity, he was obliged to come to the conclusion that the reason was that the Canal Officers had been too much made the judges in their own cases. They were no doubt a very zealous and energetic body of men, but their experience was generally limited to their department. They were departmental officers who looked to the interests of their own department. They were no doubt thoroughly convinced of the benefit of their canals, which, unfortunately, was not always the same view that the people took. They could not be brought to believe that, when the matter for decision concerned the canal, it was quite fair to decide it by the departmental officers. Therefore, the portion of the Bill to which HIS HONOUR very much objected, was that which sought to make the Canal Officer wholly and entirely judge in his own case. This was the case, not only in regard to revenue due under contract or agreement, or custom or rule, but also in regard to other cases. Notwithstanding that, under the order, and HIS HONOUR thought a very proper order, of a high authority, the compulsory portion of the Bill had been excised, still there remained a certain class of cases which were in their nature compulsory, to which the same rule of decision applied. It was in regard to those cases that, in HIS HONOUR's opinion, having regard to their compulsory nature, Canal Officers ought more especially not to be judges in their own cases.

By sections 33 and 34 of the Bill, it was provided that persons who had not consented to take water from canals, or who had not willingly taken the water; and, again, by section 45, persons who had not obtained water, whether willingly or unwillingly, were, nevertheless, charged a water-rate, if, in the opinion of a certain authority, they had benefited by the vicinity of the water. He even learned, from the speech of the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, and he learned with some surprise, that a new importation had been made into the Bill at the very latest stage, namely, that, by section 35, the Divisional Canal Officer had been invested with final powers in the cases to which he had referred. As the Bill now stood, in any question which arose in regard to the accidental or occasional overflow of water, or benefit derived from percolation, in which case the rate for the use of such water was to be compulsory, the judge was to be—no impartial officer, but the Canal Officer himself, and there was to be no appeal from his decision. Hitherto, it was, he believed, the practice that the Canal Officer was invested with the powers of a Collector, and, as such, His Honour presumed an appeal would lie from his decision to the higher revenue authorities. Now, the Canal Officer was not to act as a Collector, but as a Canal Officer, and no appeal would lie from his decision to the revenue authorities; and the only appeal that could be made, was an appeal to the Local Government. An appeal to the Local Government would be all very well if it was possible that the Local Government could deal with all these petty cases. His Honour said, as the result of practical experience, that, as to any matter of this kind, an appeal to the Local Government was a mere farce. The Local Government was overwhelmed with a multitude of business, and it was impossible that it could deal with every petty case of this kind. He had the most painful experience of such a state of things in the Province of Orissa; and he thought he should bring more prominently to the minds of hon'ble members the practical character of the objection he entertained to section 35. It might be that, in the dry season, the overflow of water into the lands of cultivators who had not asked for it might be a comparatively rare matter in Northern India, and might result in benefit to the cultivators. It was far otherwise when you came to deal with the rainy season irrigation. In consequence of the abundant water of the rains, overflows were constantly apt to occur, and sometimes the water could hardly be said to be beneficial on account of the damage that was liable to result from the overflow. That could hardly be avoided in Bengal. The Government of the day in the Public Works Department, however, told the Canal Officers who were judges in their own case, that, in cases in which, in any manner or by any means, the cultivators had enjoyed the benefit of the water, they were to levy the water-rate. The result of that state of things was this, that a very zealous Canal Officer found that water had escaped from a canal and had run all over the country, and he said that the cultivators had benefited from the overflow, and, accordingly, assessed a heavy canal-rate. The people however took an entirely different view of the case. They said—"we did not want the water; it was immediately followed by rain; it has done us no good at all, and the rate ought not to be assessed on us." The Canal Officer notwithstanding proceeded to assess the rate. He informed the Government that an enormous extent of land had been irrigated, and that a large revenue was expected. The Government never discovered the true state of things: it had not the least idea of the circumstances of the case. It was only when the Canal Officer proceeded to collect the rate that it was found he had gone too far, and that, in truth and in fact, the people had revolted against his proceedings: they refused to pay the rate and had not paid it. The result had been that the Government had not got the revenue they expected, and His Honour had no hesitation in saying that the progress of irrigation had been thrown back for years in Orissa on account of the injudicious proceedings of this unfortunately over-zealous Canal Officer. It seemed to His Honour, in consequence of these disputed cases, that when the question arose whether a water-rate was justly leviable or not, the decision of the matter ought to rest with some impartial person, and not with the Canal Officers. It seemed to him that the natural person to be invested with this power was the Collector, or Deputy Collector, or other officer in the Revenue Department, acting under the orders of the Local Government.

The Bill had been necessarily considered by His Honour in a very hurried manner; but he thought the amendments which he had placed before the Council would sufficiently explain to them the principle of the change which he wished to introduce, namely, that those disputed questions should be decided, not by the officers of the department interested in the matter without appeal, but by the revenue officer in charge of the district.

His Excellency the President said that, after the general explanation which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had given of his intention with respect to the amendments numbered 1, 2, 3 and 5, he thought it would be more convenient if the Council first considered the amendment in section 35, which raised the question as to the decision in the cases referred to resting in the Canal Officer without an appeal. He would therefore first put to the Council the amendment which was numbered 5, and the question therefore was that, for the words "Divisional Canal Officer" in that section, should be substituted the word "Collector."

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS said that the questions that would arise under sections 33 and 34 related to the unauthorized use or waste of water supplied through a water-course, which was defined in section 3 to mean a channel supplied with water from a canal, but which was not maintained at the cost of Government. It was impossible, therefore, that charges, such as His Honour said were made on account of water allowed to escape from the canals in Orissa, could be made under these sections. The income derived by Government from the canal from which the water-course was supplied would not be affected by the order given in any way; the only persons affected being, either the owners of the water-course, who were jointly responsible for keeping it in good order, and for preventing waste or misappropriation of the water, or some third party who had benefited by taking water improperly. In the decision of such questions, the Canal Officer was not likely to be biassed any more than the Collector would be, while he was in every way more competent to determine them, being on the spot and able to come to a conclusion as to whether the water had been wasted or improperly used, from his own observation.

His Honour did not say whether he would confine the decision in these cases to the Collector of the District, or whether he would allow any subordinate officer vested under section 3 with all or any of the powers of a Collector to try them. There were many objections to making these cases over for decision to any Collector of lower rank than the Collector of the District; but if the Collector of the District was alone to have power to try them, it would be impossible for him to take them up on the spot. He would be compelled, either to have all the parties to the case brought before him, to their great inconvenience, or he would be obliged to make over the case to some subordinate for investigation and report.

He (MR. INGLIS) would let the section stand as it was, and would therefore vote against the amendment.

His Highness THE MAHÁRÁJÁ OF VIZIANAGRAM observed that he had, from his own experience during the last twenty-five years, found, in rating land on his own estates and also in the districts bordering on the Godávari, that, if the Collectors had not the full powers which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor suggested should be given to them, the interests of the irrigation-works would be thrown into some difficulty. As the Collector was the officer who had the full revenue charge of a district, and had more experience than the officers of the Canal Department, HIS HIGHNESS thought it very advisable that the power of assessing the water-rate should be vested in the Collector, and not in the Divisional Canal Officer. The Canal Officers were no doubt excellent officers, and had always been most valuable in every respect as far as their own Department was concerned; but he believed that, if the Collector was vested with power in the important matters which had been alluded to, the object in view would be much facilitated.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON said, with reference to the proposed amendment in section 35, he would remark that, under the provisions of a subsequent section (76) of the Bill the Local Government was fully empowered to make rules for regulating the powers of Canal Officers in these cases, and the appeals that might be preferred from their orders. Many of the objections which had been urged in support of the amendment were taken away by the provision to which he had referred; and although the instances which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor quoted might be very fitting in reference to the Province of Orissa, they did not apply with the same force to irrigation in the country in which this Act would apply. MR. EGERTON thought the provisions of section 76 sufficiently met the objections which had been taken to investing Canal Officers with the powers proposed to be given to them, and would prevent any such abuse of power or any such failure of justice as His Honour seemed to anticipate.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN said that, looking to the position of the Divisional Canal Officers, and to the nature of their duties, they were the proper persons to exercise jurisdiction under the Bill.

Major General the Hon'ble H. W. NORMAN agreed with His Honour the Lieutenant Governor that it would be preferable that the Collector of Revenue should be invested with the power of the deciding officer; but as he admitted the practical difficulty arising from the Collector being unable promptly to attend to all these cases, and as he concurred with the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman that these powers should not be vested in Revenue Officers of a lower grade, he could not support the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS could not leave unchallenged the sweeping remarks which had fallen from His Honour the Lieutenant Governor on the character of Canal Officers generally. According to His Honour, the Canal Officer was a very wolf in sheep's clothing, who went professing to do good to a district, but, at the same time, acted in a grasping and arbitrary manner and used all the means in his power to injure the cultivators. MR. ELLIS' experience was by no means the same as that of the Lieutenant Governor; for he had known many Canal Officers of high ability who had won the confidence of the people, and who had, in the discharge of their duties, enjoyed that confidence as fully as any of the Revenue Officers around them, and therefore, bearing in mind the many examples of that kind in his (MR. ELLIS') experience, he must beg leave to challenge the very sweeping accusation which His Honour had made against that class of officers. He believed that, very often, accusations against Canal Officers proceeded from subordinate Native officials, whose vested right of being the sole medium of communication with the people was interfered with.

On the point—probably the main point—of the amendment before the Council, which was that Canal Officers ought not to be the judges in their own cases, MR. ELLIS was equally at issue with His Honour. As to matters in which the Canal Officers must be, by the nature of things, the best judges, you must give them some amount of discretion; and when you appointed men of undoubted position and character, you must have some belief in their endeavours to do their duty to the people. If you divested them of the powers which this Bill proposed to give them, and vested those powers in the District Executive Officers, you would do no good, but rather an injury to those whom it was desired to benefit: for the effect would be to impose on the Collector the determination of a mass of petty details, with which no one man in that position could deal. MR. ELLIS agreed with the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis that, if you burdened the Collectors with details to the consideration of which they had not time to give, you would defeat your own object, and cause injury and not benefit to the people. At the same time, as no mortal was infallible, MR. ELLIS thought it was very advisable to have some amendment in the direction which His Honour desired, without incurring the difficulties and mischief which the adoption of the present amendment would cause. With His Excellency's permission, MR. ELLIS would propose, at a future stage, to insert a section for the purpose of securing a revision of the Divisional Canal Officer's orders by the Collector. The amendment would make the Divisional Canal Officer the deciding authority, with a power of appeal to, or revision by, the Collector. He was quite aware, as the Hon'ble Mr. Egerton had pointed out, that the Local Government had the power to make rules, which might provide that the Divisional Canal Officer's decision should be open to appeal; but he thought it would be better, in a matter of such importance, that the Bill should provide specifically that the decision of the Divisional Canal Officer should be subject to revision by the Collector, and that the Collector's decision should be final, unless the Local Government otherwise directed. MR. ELLIS had not had time to consult the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill; but he did not think that

Then, with regard to the question of the insertion, at the very latest stage of the Bill, of a clause giving enlarged powers to these Canal Officers, it seemed to HIS HONOUR that the addition made to the Bill was exactly an addition of that sort to which he especially objected. It was a provision which involved a decision upon questions at issue between the Department and the people. It was precisely one of the classes of cases which he thought Canal Officers should not be allowed to decide without appeal. He thought the real answer to his amendment was that suggested by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, that the Bill enabled the Local Government to frame rules with the object of putting a control over the proceedings of the Canal Officers. No doubt it was in the power of the Local Government to frame rules for that purpose, and HIS HONOUR'S object in moving the amendment was, to strengthen the hands of the Local Government in that respect. The Canal Department, as every one knew, was a very strong Department, and great pressure was put upon the Government by that Department. In regard to the canals in the Province of Orissa, the Local Government had the power all this time to frame rules of the nature alluded to; but the fact was that the power had not been exercised, and the Canal Officers had been allowed to be the judges in their own cases. It was the same in the North-Western Provinces and in the Panjáb, where also, although the Local Governments had that power, it had not been exercised. If it were proposed to place a control over the proceedings of the Canal Officers, they would say "how can we collect our revenue if these checks are put upon our proceedings?" and all sorts of other objections would be raised. Therefore, it was very much to strengthen the hands of the Local Governments that HIS HONOUR proposed to put a provision in the Bill to the effect that some superior Revenue Officer should be appointed to control the proceedings of the officers of the Canal Department.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said, after all that had passed, it appeared to him that the views of the Council would be met by the following amendment, which he would beg leave to move:—

"That, in section 35, the words at the end, 'and his decision shall be final unless the Local Government otherwise directs,' be omitted, and that the words 'subject to an appeal to the head Revenue Officer of the district, or such other appeal as might be provided under the provisions of section 76' be substituted for them."

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS observed that, in the amendment proposed, the word "appeal" did not quite meet the case of a Collector desiring to revise the proceedings of the Divisional Canal Officer without an appeal. The Collector might go into his district and find that injustice had been committed, and the people might not be aware that there was an appeal from the decision of the Divisional Canal Officer. MR. ELLIS also thought that the amendment should be so framed as to give an appeal to the Collector absolutely, and not in a form which left, as an alternative, an appeal which might not be sufficient. If, for instance, under the rules framed in accordance with section 76, it should be decided that the appeal should lie to the Inspector General of Irrigation, and not to a Revenue Officer, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor would be much shocked; because, in that case, the appeal to the Collector would be superseded, and the appeal would lie to an officer of Irrigation.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE said, it seemed to him that, under the words proposed, the Local Government might institute any system of appeals it thought proper: he thought the matter had better be left to the discretion of the Local Government.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that the Local Government could only exercise the powers given under section 76 with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR would support the suggestion that a power of revision should be included, and he would suggest that, instead of leaving a discretion to the Local Government, there should be inserted the words "or other revenue authority."

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE's amendment was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR moved—

"That the third paragraph of section 33, beginning with the words 'or if such' and ending with the words 'such water-course,' be omitted."

He was not able to understand the object of this clause in section 33, while section 34 stood in the Bill. Section 34 appeared to provide all that could be desired in regard to water running to waste. The greater was said to contain the less, and therefore section 34 seemed to him to cover every case of water running to waste. Section 34 would seem to be a very simple section, and it seemed to HIS HONOUR a very reasonable provision, if there be proper tribunals to decide such cases. If water supplied by means of canals was used in an unauthorized manner, or unlawfully suffered to flow on land, and the person through whose act or default such unauthorized use or such waste occurred could not be discovered, then the procedure would be applicable to such lands as benefited therefrom. He did not see the object of the third clause of section 33: it appeared to him that the whole question was raised by section 34.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON observed that section 33 applied to the unauthorized use of water, and section 34 to waste, and the principle on which both those sections were framed was this, that the persons taking the water were bound to keep the outlets in such order that the water should not be wasted. The places in which water could do damage were, in that part of the country with which he was best acquainted, comparatively rare. Water was like money there; it was highly valued, and the presumption was that, where a water-course was cut, the land on which the water flowed would be benefited. It was possible that the land might not be benefited, and then the persons who were damaged were the public generally, as the supply of water for irrigation was lessened. Therefore, the principle was this, that where the persons taking water from a water-course suffered an unauthorized person to use it, they were jointly liable for the water which might be used in an unauthorized manner; or if it was suffered to run waste, they should be held responsible, unless the person who used the water unauthorizedly, or the person who committed the damage, could be identified. MR. EGERTON thought that, generally speaking, that was a right principle in respect of certain parts of the country where it would mainly apply. Where, as in Orissa, water did damage when allowed to flow out of its course, and where, consequently, it should be kept within its proper bounds, it might, perhaps, be necessary to alter the provisions of this section. But as this Act would not apply to that part of the country, and as the water was always valuable in the parts of the country where it would apply, he thought the section had been properly drawn.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY wished to point out, with reference to what His Honour the Lieutenant Governor observed about a canal bursting its banks, that the provision only applied to canals kept up at the expense of persons other than the Government. He would take that opportunity of saying that he believed that, in the particular case to which His Honour had referred, the officer who was so absurdly over-zealous, was not what was strictly called a Canal Officer, that was to say, he was not one of the officers responsible for the construction or maintenance of the canal, but a civil officer specially deputed to the Canal Department who, Hibernis ipsis Hibernior, became more zealous even than the Canal Officers themselves, and, consequently, the Lieutenant Governor had most properly exercised, in this case, his power of removal.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS said the only point which occurred to him was this—if the water which overflowed its course would necessarily benefit the land on which it flowed, he could hardly see how the case could arise in which it would be requisite to provide for water spreading over the land without conferring benefit. If no benefit had accrued to the land, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor said that it was not fair to make a charge for the water; but, on the other hand, the contention of the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill was, that no water could flow on land without conferring benefit.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said, perhaps the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill would explain how far it was possible that water could escape from its proper course without producing benefit.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON explained that water might flow on land not under cultivation; in such a case the people would be deprived of the use of water the benefit of which they would have enjoyed. The supply of water being limited, and the amount of land practically unlimited, if water was used unauthorizedly, or allowed to flow on land which could not be benefited by the water—such, for instance, as land impregnated with salt—then the persons who would have been benefited by the use of that water were deprived of the benefit of that water; therefore, the person through whose water-course water was allowed to flow should be held responsible, if the person who let the water escape could not be discovered.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE said, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was of opinion that the existence of section 34 was a reason why this clause in section 33 was unnecessary. The two clauses, however, related to two wholly different classes of acts. Section 34 related only to cases in which water was suffered to run to waste. Section 33 contemplated a different class of events, where a person was designedly taking water by a wrongful act. He did not see how section 34 could be supposed to cover the acts mentioned in section 33. If you said it was not right to charge a person who had not benefited because some one else had committed a wrongful act, that was an objection which raised the question of joint liability, a principle which was carried throughout this Bill; and he believed the principle of joint liability was always insisted on land-revenue cases, and those cases, one of which they had before them, which were assimilated to land-revenue cases. The principle he understood to be this: that Indian communities knew so much of one another's actions, had so much interest in, and control over, one another, were so bound up together for weal or for woe, that it was both just and expedient to make the whole answerable for the acts of each. If that principle applied in other cases mentioned in the Bill, it was clear that it applied equally in the cases falling under section 33. If the clause under consideration were struck out, you would establish a different principle.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said, with reference to the Hon'ble Mr. Ellis' remark, he would observe that the case for which it was supposed no provision was necessary was one which, unfortunately, happened to a large extent. Many cubic yards of valuable canal-water went weekly, almost daily, to land which did not enjoy any benefit from it. He submitted that the clause under consideration was perfectly just. The point appeared to him to be this. He did not know whether His Honour the Lieutenant Governor bore in mind that this provision applied to private water-courses. Bearing that in mind, how did the case stand? There were certain gentlemen in possession of a water-course. From that water-course a theft was committed. The water had been furtively and designedly taken, to the damage, not only of themselves, but of the community at large. They were bound, and were able, to prevent the theft; they had not done so, and mischief had accrued. They were the persons who were bound to point out the person who had committed the theft, or who had benefited from it. If they could prove either of those things, their responsibility was absolved: if they could not do so, they must be held responsible for the person in default. It was on that principle that this provision was drawn; and SIR RICHARD TEMPLE submitted that it was perfectly just.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that his observations in reply would be short, for he was of opinion that, as far as his amendment was concerned, it was really only a matter of drafting. He did not in the least object to the principle of joint responsibility. He had to some extent already admitted that; but he did not understand how a distinction could be drawn between water which flowed on land so as to benefit no one, and water that ran to waste. If the hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department thought that there was a difference between the two clauses, HIS HONOUR had nothing farther to urge in the matter.

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, to his next amendment he did attach some importance. The amendment was—

That, at the end of section 34, be added the words "if it appear that they are equitably chargeable with the same."

HIS HONOUR'S only objection to the section was, that it seemed to lay down the rule that, whether the parties were guilty or not, they were to be charged for water which went to waste. He therefore proposed to add the words "if they are equitably chargeable."

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON did not understand the meaning of the word "equitably" in the amendment. The principle asserted in this section was, that the persons through whose water-course water was suffered to run to waste should be held to be liable for such waste if they could not prove that they were not liable. That was the only way in which the great ramifications of water-courses in the irrigated districts could be kept in order. The burden of proof must be thrown on the persons who benefited by the overflow of water from these water-courses. If in every case they were assumed to be innocent, and if it must be proved who was responsible for the waste of water, then every water-course in the country would be kept up in a slovenly manner, and the waste of water would be very great. Water, then, would be wasted, and the full benefit of it would not be enjoyed by those who required it. He thought it was not desirable to introduce the words proposed, as they would lead to uncertainty and differences of practice in regard to the provision regarding water-courses which were private channels of irrigation.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE thought the words proposed to be introduced would strike at the root of the principle of joint liability. He did not know for certain what construction would be put on the word "equitably" in the amendment. But he imagined that, finding the principle of joint liability affirmed without qualification in various parts of the Bill, and finding that principle affirmed with qualification in this section, no Judge would say that the pure principle of joint liability applied in the cases under this clause. It would be impossible to say what equitable limit would be put upon this section by a Judge deciding according to English law. He confessed that he understood the principle of joint liability in the case of land-revenue so little, that he could not be considered an authority on that point; but, as at present advised, he thought it would be a dangerous qualification to put in the words proposed. In other respects, he felt that some of His Honour's strictures on this section seemed to be well founded. He thought the Secretary might revise these sections, not for the purpose of importing the principle of equitable liability, but with the object of improving the draft.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE quite agreed with the hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department, not only that it was very important that nothing should be done to strike at the principle of joint responsibility in cases of land-revenue, but that, in these cases, there was another joint responsibility, namely, that of a certain number of Native gentlemen in the position of proprietors of water-courses. That was a responsibility independent of the responsibility which applied to the canals of the Irrigation Department. They were, in those particular cases, necessarily liable. The water-course ran through their fields, and they must be responsible for its preservation and good order. Therefore, in these cases, they would be jointly responsible in whatever part of the country they were. Independently of that consideration, when the question was as to the responsibility of the proprietors of land-tenures in the North-Western Provinces, it was perfectly necessary that their joint responsibility should be practically maintained for the preservation of these particular works.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, with His Excellency's permission, he would alter the wording of his amendment, and substitute, for the words proposed, the following:—

"unless it appear that they are not equitably liable for the same."

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON remarked that it was perfectly competent for a man to prove that he was not liable, and there was nothing to prevent his contention being entertained.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE observed that the alteration of the wording would shift the onus probandi. It would lay the proof on the man on whom the liability was charged, instead of on the Judge. But the question for decision would be still the same. We knew what joint liability was; but we did not know what was meant by the word "equitably."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT understood, generally, that those proprietors of land, or occupiers, who undertook jointly to construct a water-course, were equitably liable, jointly, for the maintenance of that water-course. Therefore, if we put in words which declared that that joint liability did not obtain, we should be raising a great difficulty: he thought that the amendment raised the question whether these persons were equitably liable for the maintenance of that water-course.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, his amendment did not refer to liability, joint or separate. The question was whether or not the persons charged were liable. Suppose a storm burst the banks of a water-course, who was to be held responsible in such a case? It seemed to him that section 34 laid down a hard and fast rule, that the persons over whose land water overflowed should be liable. He was quite willing to concede that, in a country where, as remarked by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, every drop of water was worth its weight in gold, the onus probandi in such cases should be thrown on the persons charged; but that should not be held to prevent the principle of equitable exemption.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOBHOUSE pointed out that, under this section, there was to be no charge for waste, unless it was a waste that happened from the act or neglect of some person.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, the next amendment, that sections 38 to 44 be omitted, he had put on the paper more with the view of obtaining information than with any very definite views of his own. The truth was that he had read over sections 37 to 44 of the Bill with great care and attention two or three times, and the conclusion to which he came was, that no person of his humble understanding could understand them. He should therefore like to have it cleared up to him what was the real object and intention of those sections. He could not quite understand why, when the assessment on land had been permanently settled, or had been settled for a term of years, on the introduction of irrigation, a reduction of revenue should be made. It was a distinct and clear principle that, when the value of land was enhanced by improvements effected otherwise than by the owner, an assessment should be made on the increased value of the land, and if that principle was laid down by these clauses, he should not contest them. But he should like to have it made very clear what would be the effect of that principle upon lands permanently settled. That was a point of some importance as respects this Bill, and of enormous importance if you went beyond the limits of this Bill. He understood the meaning of section 37 to be this. In addition to the occupier's rate, there was to be an owner's rate in canal-irrigated lands in respect of the benefit which the owners derived from irrigation. If HIS HONOUR was to understand that that section proposed one simple unqualified principle, whether the land was temporarily or permanently settled, then the owner's rate might be imposed on all land deriving benefit from canal-irrigation. He would ask whether that was the correct interpretation of section 37. Then, when he came to sections 38 to 44, which, as he had said before, he had not been able to understand, he would like the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill to explain whether it was contemplated that, in addition to the occupier's rate on land, an extra rate should be charged in reality, or as a mere matter of account between the Canal Department and the Land Revenue Department. If it was a mere matter of account, HIS HONOUR thought it necessary that there should be a modification of the wording. We could not estimate the indirect benefit derived from irrigation; he thought we should leave it alone, and there should not be an attempt, as a mere matter of account, to impose a distribution between the owner and occupier. You might either assess the owner or leave him alone; but it appeared to HIS HONOUR a difficult thing to say that, as between owner and occupier, there should be a certain division of the rate.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS said:—"His Honour the Lieutenant Governor says that his object in proposing this amendment is to obtain some information of the reasons on which this proposal to charge an owner's rate in addition to the occupier's rate is based.

"The occupier's rate is paid by the cultivator, and is a fixed charge at so much per acre watered, except for sugar, garden-crops, &c., for which a special rate is charged. If canal-water is given to land previously unirrigated, the landlord at once raises the rent paid by the tenant to the rate paid in the neighbourhood for irrigated land of the same quality. The object of the owner's rate is to enable Government to get the share of this increased rental to which it is clearly entitled; the increase in the annual value of the land being due solely to the canal constructed at the cost of Government, and not to any expenditure incurred by the landlord.

"If the levy of an owner's rate is disallowed, Government must either give up its share of this increased rental, and leave the whole to the owner, or it must attempt to intercept some of it by charging a higher occupier's rate on land previously unirrigated, than that charged on land already irrigated.

"There are many objections to this course; one being the opportunities for extortion that would be given to the Native subordinate canal official, were varying rates for water charged, not only in neighbouring villages, but also in parts of the same village.

"The question is, without doubt, a difficult one. The levy of an owner's rate was recommended by Sir William Muir in a Note on the permanent settlement of the North-West Provinces, recorded in 1865, and has, I believe, been since accepted as the best solution of the difficulty by all who have considered the subject; every one being agreed that the arguments against a differential occupier's rate are unanswerable.

"By the levy of this owner's rate, Government, while charging a fixed price per acre for its canal-water to the occupier, will, when the rent of any land is increased in consequence of the extension of canal-irrigation to it at the cost of Government, obtain its fair share of this increased rental; while, in those cases where no increase in the rent previously paid is caused, no extra charge will be made on the owner."

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON concurred in all that had fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis. He did not think it necessary to enlarge on any point in connection with the principles embodied in this Bill, as he considered they had already been fully discussed during the many years in which the Act of 1871 was under discussion. The question how the land-revenue or the rent of lands which were newly brought under irrigation were to be dealt with had been fully discussed in the papers which were circulated when the Act of 1871 was under discussion. In the Panjáb, the question would apply only to lands temporarily settled. It had been the practice, formerly, when assessing land to the land-revenue, to apply what were called irrigated-rates to the area irrigated at the time of settlement. In cases of land irrigated by canals, where such irrigation-rates applied, although at the time of the settlement the assessment was fair, yet, during the changes which took place after the settlement, the distribution of the irrigation-revenue did not continue to be so fair as it was in the beginning, when the Settlement Officer carried on his operations. Suppose a certain area in an estate was irrigated at the time of the settlement, it did not follow that that area would always remain under irrigation, or that only that quantity of land would remain under cultivation. The area under cultivation might increase; other lands might be brought under cultivation, and the land which was irrigated at the time of settlement might cease to receive water. Under the method provided in the Bill, each acre irrigated would be charged, each season, with the full amount due for irrigation, and the assessment would be distributed more fairly than was otherwise possible.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR did not understand what would happen if the parties did not agree as to the need of irrigation. Was the landlord to be allowed to object to the introduction of irrigation on his lands?

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON observed that this Bill did not provide for the adjustment of disputes between the landlord and his tenants.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY observed that, as the owner of the land was allowed a reduction in the revenue equal to the amount of the irrigation-rate, he was not likely to object to the tenants using the water.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that, as the principle of the amendment to section 35 had been agreed to, the same course might be followed as regards His Honour's amendment to section 45.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR then moved that, in section 46, for the words "Divisional Canal Officer" be substituted the word "Collector." The principle of this amendment was the same as that which had been discussed in reference to section 35. The question whether the revenue was due or not due was to be decided by the Canal Officer. As the clause stood, it enacted that—

"Any sum certified by the Divisional Canal Officer to be lawfully due under this Act, which remains unpaid after the day on which the same becomes due, shall be recoverable by the Collector from the person liable for the same as if it were an arrear of land-revenue."

As HIS HONOUR understood it, by this clause no discretion was allowed to the Collector. The Collector was bound to recover the sum certified to be due by the Canal Officer. HIS HONOUR hoped that the principle which the Council had been good enough to accept in respect to section 35, would also be accepted in regard to the section under consideration.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON thought that the adoption of the amendment before the Council would lead to a great deal of unnecessary complication, and would burden the Collector with a mass of details. The Canal Officer was as much responsible to the Government as the Collector. He was bound down by rules, and it was not to be supposed that he would wantonly and recklessly impose rates upon persons from whom they were not due. MR. EGERTON thought that the Divisional Canal Officer was responsible for the proper working of the law under which the revenue due from water was recovered; and he thought it quite unnecessary to make the Canal Officer's decision appealable to the Collector. The Local Government had the power to make rules for the proper working of the law, and as the circumstances of different parts of the country varied, it would be more advisable to leave the proceedings of the Canal Officers to be regulated by the rules to be prescribed by the Local Government, and not to make their proceedings in such matters subject to the control of the Collector.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR thought that the amendment in section 46 necessarily followed the amendment which had been adopted in section 35. If the Collector was to decide whether the money was due or not, the Canal Officer ought not to have the power of certifying finally that a certain sum of money was due.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS thought the object of the clause as it stood was that the Collector should be compelled to take the certificate of the Canal Officer as conclusive proof that a certain sum of money was due, and that no rules that the Government could make would set aside the declaration in the Act that the decision of the Canal Officer was to be final. Therefore, he should propose, at the next meeting of the Council, an amendment which he thought would meet the objection taken to this section, and which would not have the injurious effect which the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill apprehended, namely, to leave out the words "any sum certified by the Divisional Canal Officer to be lawfully due under this Act," and to insert instead "any sum lawfully due," leaving the fact of its being due to be decided in the same way as other Revenue demands.

This would not necessitate every petty matter of assessment coming before the Collector. MR. ELLIS thought the addition of some such words would leave it to the Local Government to say how far the Canal Officer was to assess the rate, and would not prevent an appeal to the decision of the Collector in such cases.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE did not think the Local Government could make rules in these cases; but, at the same time, he felt with His Honour the Lieutenant Governor that as the Council had assented to the amendment in section 35, it would be inconsistent not to import the same principle in section 46.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT thought the precise wording of the amendment should stand over for consideration, it being understood that some words would be introduced to prevent the clause being interpreted to mean, that the simple certificate of the Canal Officer is final in respect to the legality of the charge. As to the precise words, it would possibly not be desirable to insert them now. The Canal Officer should be responsible for fixing the amount of the rates, therefore you could not take away that responsibility from him.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR moved that section 66 be amended in the same way as section 35. He said that this amendment was an amendment of a different kind, and on a different matter. It was on the question of forced labour. He did not say that the power of obtaining compulsory labour should not be exercised on extreme necessity; but it seemed to him that it was a power which should be exercised with great care, and he would not leave the decision of the question whether it was necessary to enforce compulsory labour to the Canal Officer, unchecked and uncontrolled. HIS HONOUR would therefore propose to impose a similar check in such cases as in the collection of revenue. He thought that this power should be subject to control by the Collector.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS said that, if the power to impress labour was given to any one, the Canal Officer, and not the Collector, was clearly the person who should exercise it. He would be on the spot, and could judge for himself of the exigency of the case. If the Lieutenant Governor's amendment was carried, he would have to write off to the Collector who might be fifty miles away. The Collector, on receiving the Canal Officer's report, must either at once sanction the impressment of labour asked for, or take upon himself all the responsibilities involved in a refusal; or he might go out to the place himself. Long before his reply could reach the Canal Officer, or before he could get to the spot, the damage sought to be prevented would probably have been done. The power given in these sections was intended to be exercised in cases of emergency only, and must be entrusted to the officer who was in a position to judge for himself of the necessity, and this was, MR. INGLIS had no hesitation in saying, the Canal Officer, and not the Collector.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON said the power to be exercised under section 66 was quite exceptional, and as the list of persons who were to supply labourers in such cases was entirely prepared by the Collector beforehand, and as only those persons who were named in such list could be called upon to supply labourers, MR. EGERTON thought there was no need of any further reference to the Collector on this question.

The Hon'ble MR. BULLEN SMITH observed that he could see the force of the objection stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis, that in these cases the emergency was great, and there was no time to collect labourers in the ordinary way. But if it were possible to apply the check which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor proposed to the second class of works mentioned in the section, namely, the clearance of silt, MR. BULLEN SMITH thought that, in those cases, a discretion should not be left to the Canal Officers to say that the clearance must be effected on a certain day.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN thought the Committee had fenced in the power as much as they could, bearing in mind that the section only contemplated cases of emergency.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY thought it very necessary, in the cases contemplated by this section, that the labourers should be collected at once. In some cases, as, for example, the sudde[illegible] of a hill stream into the bed of a canal, the possibility of averting mischief w[illegible]ve, wit[illegible]estion of an hour or two. Even with regard to the clearing of silt, he [illegible] explain that the time within which it could be done was sometimes exc[illegible]gly limited, and it would be almost impossible to collect the needful amou[illegible] of labour in time in any other way.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS thought this was one of those cases in which you must enforce the responsibility of the officer on the spot, and if you did not, it was useless to pass the law. It was not possible to put any check on the officer on the spot, who must be held responsible to employ this provision only in cases of emergency. Indeed, MR. ELLIS was not sure that the exercise of the power was not already too strictly fenced in. For instance, when a torrent of water rushed down and breached the bank of a canal, it was hardly possible to say beforehand how long the labourers would have to be employed. Therefore, he thought this provision leant more on the side of stringency than of laxity.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE agreed with the Hon'ble Mr. Ellis, and would only point out that the Council were quite consistent when they admitted amendments in sections 35 and 45, but rejected that proposed for section 66.

In the one case, they were dealing with judicial acts with plenty of time for consideration; in the other case, they were dealing with a purely executive act. It seemed absolutely necessary to have some official who had every thread in his hands, and who could judge at any moment whether he should exercise this power or not. The Canal Officer therefore received plenary powers in case of danger arising suddenly and from irregular causes. With regard to silt-clearances, MR. HOBHOUSE would observe that this power was not to be exercised, except in places where the judgment of the Local Government and the Governor General in Council had previously decided that the power should exist.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that no one could be more opposed than himself to the system of forced labour. But, at the same time, if there ever could be a case supposed where forced labour was necessary, it was in respect of these irrigation-works, where sudden floods were likely to endanger both life and property. In such cases it would be impossible to enforce any responsibility if you took away the power from the officer in immediate charge of the works. He should oppose any amendment to take away responsibility from the Canal Officer in charge, and place it in any other person in these particular cases.

The amendment was put and negatived.

His Highness THE MAHÁRÁJÁ OF VIZIANAGRAM said, in this section (66) it was provided that the rate paid to labourers impressed for the execution of emergent works, in excess of the highest rates paid in the neighbourhood, should be fixed by the Local Government. He was not sure that he was right in supposing that that meant that the rates were always to be the highest rates paid in the neighbourhood. The custom of impressing labourers was familiar to the Natives in many parts of the country, and he did not think that the labourers would think it oppressive to give their services in cases of emergency even without payment, and he was sure they would be satisfied with the ordinary rates. His Highness would therefore, with the permission of the President, move—

"That for the words 'in excess of' be substituted the words 'the highest maximum rate fixed by the Local Government.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. Egerton understood, from the wording of the section as it stood, that the rates were always to be in excess of the highest rates paid in the neighbourhood for similar work. These rates, he believed, were to be paid in consequence of the inconvenience expected to arise from people being called upon to work without their consent. Although in some parts of the country the custom of calling out labourers in such cases prevailed, in other parts the custom had fallen into disuse, and the enforcement of compulsory labour might excite discontent. Canal Officers, he believed, were of opinion that there should be no such direction in regard to the rate as was contained in the Bill, but that it should be left to the Local Government to fix that rate as His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram proposed. The rate of payment for compulsory labour was fixed by the Act of 1871, and it had been retained in this Bill, the provision being that the rate should be in excess of the highest rates paid in the neighbourhood for similar work.

His Excellency the President observed that the clause as it stood did not say that the rates should be in excess of the highest rates paid in the neighbourhood, but that the rates to be paid in excess of the highest rates should be fixed by the Local Government.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse remarked that the clause imposed the duty of fixing some rate, which should be in excess of the highest rate for labour of the same kind. He thought that it was just to say the contributors of forced labour should be paid something more than the highest rate. There might be cases in which people might be employed so very close to their own homes that payment exceeding by some mere fraction the highest rate might be sufficient; but, on the other hand, there might be cases in which the excess should be something substantial.

His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram observed that, in some cases, the expense incurred under this section would come to a considerable amount.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bullen Smith understood that the Bill absolutely granted to the labourers at least the highest rate payable for similar work in the neighbourhood with as much more as the Local Government might allow.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stewart observed that the section proposed to confer an extreme and exceptional authority in exceptional cases, and he thought that the section should be allowed to stand as it was.

The Hon'ble Mr. Chapman thought the section would operate as a check on executive officers in having recourse to compulsory labour.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was of the same opinion.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bayley observed that there were certain canals the repairs of which were paid out of cesses, and were borne by those who enjoyed the benefit, but the cost was, in the first instance, met by the Government. In some instances, these repairs were effected by the labour of men to whom it was no inconvenience whatever to be called upon for their labour, men, perhaps, whose vocation was day-labour and who lived within a hundred yards from the canal-bank. He thought that, if the rates paid to such labourers were always in excess of the highest rates, the people who ultimately paid the cost of repairs would have a great right to complain. He did not see why an option should not be left to the Local Government.

Major General the Hon'ble H. W. NORMAN remarked that he could conceive many cases in which a man might be engaged in a profitable kind of work and be called upon to leave that work and to labour on canals.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS would support the amendment. He believed the provision in its amended form, which rendered it obligatory on the Local Government to give at least the highest rate of wages, was quite sufficient check on officers resorting to this extreme measure. Ordinarily, and without this pressure, they would be able to get work done for a considerably less sum; but, under this provision, they would have to pay at least the highest rate of wages paid in the neighbourhood. The hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department had already pointed out that it was quite possible for the Local Government to fix such a very small amount in excess of the highest rate; that this provision would be no safeguard whatever. In many parts of the country it had been the immemorial custom that the people benefiting by the water of the canal should assist in doing the work necessary to keep it in ordinary repair, and with them it had been usual to do the work on receipt of a minimum rate of wages. They had been obliged to work for a bare subsistence, and they were now to be called on only on emergency and were to receive the highest rate of wages. They would view that as a great boon, without insisting on anything more. For these reasons, he thought we quite sufficiently guarded against any abuse, and quite sufficiently provided for a fair and full payment to those called upon to work, leaving it to the Local Governments to declare a higher rate of wages payable whenever the people were called upon to labour out of the ordinary course or under special circumstances.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE observed that, when he said the Local Government might fix an insensible amount of excess over the highest rate of wages, he did not mean that they should evade the spirit of the Act. They might make a rule that those who merely did their ordinary work close to their homes should receive a very slight excess of wages, but that other persons should receive a substantial excess.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE observed, that, on the whole, he was in favour of keeping the words of the section as they stood.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT asked whether this clause obliged the Local Government to fix a rate in excess of the highest rates in the neighbourhood? It appeared to him that it did not oblige the Local Government to fix even the highest rate. He considered that the amendment would place the labourers in a better position, as the clause would then declare that the rate should not be less than the highest rate, and should be fixed by the Local Government.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON thought the intention was, that the Local Government should prescribe the rates of payment, and if it prescribed the rates, they should be in excess of the highest rates. Under the wording of the section, if the Local Government prescribed any rate at all, they must be higher than the current rates.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT thought the consideration of the question should be postponed, as it appeared to him that the meaning of the clause was not clear.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR asked leave to amend his next amendment, and would move—

"That after section 71, the following new section be inserted:—

"72. No Canal Officer shall be invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class; but, subject to the control of the Head Revenue Officer of the District, Canal Officers may, under such rules and restrictions as the Governor General in Council may prescribe, be invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second or third class, or of a tahsíldár."

As the Bill stood, there were a good many special offences which were to be tried by Magistrates, and nothing, seemed on the face of it more right and proper. But if it happened that Canal Officers were appointed Magistrates, then the objection he had taken to their exercising the powers of a Collector applied equally here. The hon'ble member in charge of the Bill would correct him if he was wrong. His impression was, that Canal Officers were generally invested with the powers of a Magistrate, and were the judges of their own cases. He would not go the length of insisting that Canal Officers should not exercise magisterial powers; but he did not think they should exercise those powers without appeal. As the law stood, a first class Magistrate would do so absolutely without appeal. His Honour had had experience in the canals to which this Bill would apply. Sixteen or seventeen years ago, he found the people complaining against their decisions. On proceeding to enquire into some cases, he had found great difficulty in getting hold of the record of those cases, and at last, when he did trace out the record, he found the proceedings of the Canal Officer thus recorded.—"The Canal Chaukídár reports that so and so's cattle trespassed on the canal-banks. Ordered that a fine of five rupees be imposed." Against a proceeding of that kind, there could be no appeal whatever. His Honour thought it was most desirable that no Canal Officer should be invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class. He would not oppose Canal Officers being invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second class, and would leave the consideration of that point to the discretion of the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. Egerton did not see that any provision of this sort could properly be introduced in this Bill. The powers of Magistrates were defined by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and no provisions to alter the Code of Criminal Procedure could, with propriety, be inserted in this Bill; and he did not see any necessity to limit the discretion of the Local Government in regard to the magisterial powers which Canal Officers might hold. He did not think it was proper to cast a slur on a whole body of men, and to state that they were unfit to be vested with powers of a particular class, if the Local Government were willing to entrust them with those powers. Under this Bill, it was proposed to invest Canal Officers with very large powers, and their action in such matters would affect the people just as much as any of their acts in their magisterial capacity. The whole of the offences for the punishment of which provision was made in this Bill, were such as could be decided by Magistrates of the lowest grade, and he knew no reason why higher powers should be conferred. But he saw no reason to impose any disability.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse did not think it was desirable that the amendment, even if the principle was correct, should be carried in this form. He did not think that the Council should provide that no Canal Officer should be invested with the powers of Magistrates of the first class. It might be very inconvenient to do so. All the offences under this Bill were petty offences, punishable by a fine of fifty rupees, or imprisonment for one month. Magistrates of the second or third class might try them. What was wanted was, that the decision should be subject to appeal. He thought the object would be met if the section said that persons committing these offences should be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate of such class as the Local Government directs in that behalf, to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, or to imprisonment not exceeding one month, or to both, provided that the Magistrate's decision shall be subject to appeal.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple observed that the suggestion of the hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department would be tantamount to saying that the Local Government should not invest Canal Officers with the powers of Magistrates of the first class.

The Hon'ble Mr. Ellis observed that it would be better to provide that cases under this Act should be subject to appeal.

His Excellency the President thought the amendment imposed a disability to give the powers of a Magistrate of the first class, and would cast a slur on these officers, although he was sure that such was not intended. At the same time, it was a question whether it should be a final decision without appeal.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, that any one who had any practical experience would say that the one subject above all others, which was the subject of contention between the people and the canal authorities, was the trespassing of cattle. Canal Officers thought sometimes rightly and sometimes wrongly, that cows should not be allowed to trespass on canal-banks: they said cows injured the banks. On the other hand, the people said, "you have run canals through our grounds, and have left them unfenced. At certain seasons it is natural that cows will run upon the canal-banks, where the grass is always green and fresh; cows will be cows; they will eat grass; and if you grow grass on the banks, it is the nature of cows that they should seek to eat that grass. It is a hard case that we should be subject to confinement and loss, because our cows trespass on the banks of your canals." He therefore suggested that the trespassing of cattle should be one of the things in regard to which the Local Government should be empowered to make rules. The motion he would make was—

"That after clause (4) of section 76 be added the following, as clause (5):—

"(5) the fencing of canal-grounds and the conditions under which cattle may or may not be impounded when the canals are not fenced or are insufficiently fenced."

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS said that, if the intention of the amendment proposed by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, was merely to give the Local Governments power to frame rules about the fencing of canal-grounds, and the conditions under which cattle trespassing on them might be impounded, it seemed to him quite unnecessary, as the Local Governments could, without this clause, issue any orders they might think requisite on these subjects to their officers. But if the intention of the proposed clause was to compel the Local Governments to fence in all canals to prevent trespass by cattle, MR. INGLIS should vote against its insertion, as this would add a very heavy, and altogether unnecessary, charge to the cost incurred by Government in maintaining these irrigation-works, already quite high enough.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON said that the amendment before the Council was a mere suggestion as to what the Local Government might or might not do in respect to the trespassing of cattle. This clause would not oblige the Local Government to make any such rules. It appeared to him questionable whether it was desirable to suggest in the Act every point on which the Local Government might make rules. He thought the subject was one which did not require an express provision of law. The amendment seemed to him to indicate that it was advisable to adopt a particular management of canal-lands, namely, that they should be fenced. That question had been discussed before; but it was decided that it was not necessary to fence canal-lands any more than to fence in the fields of private owners. As cattle found trespassing on unfenced fields were liable to be impounded under the Cattle Trespass Act, so it was considered that cattle trespassing on unfenced canal-lands should be treated in the same manner: in fact, the canal-lands formed a Government field, and that was why there was no provision for fencing them to prevent cattle trespass.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE thought the amendment was undesirable, because the subject of cattle-trespass was provided for by another Act. The Cattle Trespass Act included such works as canals and drainage-works. When cattle trespassed, the officers of Police were to do certain things—impound them, charge fees, sell them if not released, and so forth. And it might lead to confusion if the Local Government had power to make rules under this Bill for the prevention of any offences which were dealt with fully by another Act.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, it was just because the Cattle Trespass Act existed that the Canal Officers claimed the power to impound cattle under that Act. It was because that Act existed that he was inclined to give the Local Government power to modify the provisions of that Act in regard to cattle trespassing on canal-lands. He had just come from the banks of a canal where the people complained that they were entirely at the mercy of the canal chaukídár. He thought that, under certain circumstances, certain portions of canals should be fenced, and that no cattle trespassing should be impounded, except where they caused injury to the canal. He quite admitted that the Local Government might make rules regarding fencing and pounding, but they never had done so, and therefore he desired to put in this clause as a sign-post.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that, if it was admitted that the Local Government had power to make rules, it was a doubtful principle of legislation to make an unnecessary enactment to the effect that they should have that power. He thought if the Local Government had power to make rules without legislation, that was a good reason for the Council to decline to legislate.

The Motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the Bill be referred back to the Select Committee for consideration with instructions to report in a week.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Bullen Smith and His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram be added to the Select Committee.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PANJÁB MUNICIPAL BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, as amended, be passed.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN said:—"MY LORD, I regret to find myself obliged to oppose the immediate passing of this Bill. I would ask the Council, in the first place, to consider the past history of this measure.

"The present law affecting Municipalities in the Panjáb is to be found in Act XV of 1867. The provisions of that law are very summary and arbitrary, and, in fact, empower the Lieutenant Governor to do very much what he likes in the way of constituting municipalities, imposing taxes, and regulating expenditure. If hon'ble members have read the discussions that took place in 1867 when this law was passed, they will see that, even then, very grave doubts were expressed as to the expediency of entrusting such indefinite authority to the executive. It was at last agreed that the Act should be considered as of a tentative character, and its duration limited to a period of five years.

"Well, time went on, when, about a year ago, the Secretary of the Council drew the attention of the Panjáb Government, by telegram, to the fact that the Act was on the point of expiry, and requested them to state what steps they desired should be taken in the matter. The Panjáb Government thereupon replied that all they wished was that the present law should be re-enacted without limitation as to time.

"The Council will remember how this proposal was received, barely ten months ago, and how very strongly certain members expressed their opinion as to the necessity for imposing by law certain limits on the action of the executive. As the Act was about to expire in a few days, it was eventually determined that it should be re-enacted for one year only, and it was understood that, during that interval, the whole question would be fully considered and dealt with.

"Such, my Lord, is the past history of the measure. The present Bill, which my honourable friend wishes to pass at this meeting, was prepared at Simla, and I have had no opportunity of taking any part in the discussions on it, either in Council, or in Select Committee. It was doubtless a great advantage to have the assistance of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb, and I mention the circumstance of my not having had the opportunity of before expressing my views, not by way of complaint, but merely as my excuse for now troubling the Council at, I fear, some length.

"After what had taken place, I certainly was in hopes that the present Bill would contain some precise and definite sections as to the constitution of Municipal bodies, and especially as to the limits within which taxes might be imposed. I regret to say that, in my opinion, the Bill is, in these essentials, almost as bald as the present Act. I must ask the Council to bear with me while I endeavour, as shortly as I can, to point out the sections in the Bill to which I chiefly take exception.

"In the first place, I would call attention to the two last clauses of section 2. It is probably right and necessary that we should legalize all past actions; but I do not think we should blindly give the stamp of legislative authority to assessments, as to the principles and limits of which we are quite ignorant; and such, if I mistake not, is the effect of these two clauses.

"I next come to section 6, and this, taken in connection with section 17, confers, without an attempt at specification, the most absolute powers in respect to the constitution of these Municipal Committees. I have no doubt my honourable friend, Mr. Egerton, than whom there is no higher authority in all matters connected with Panjáb administration, will say that, in the state and under the circumstances of the province, it is necessary that this power should be vested in the executive. I venture with much diffidence to think that it is a mistake not to recognize in the law the distinction between great cities and centres of trade, like Dehli, Lahor and Amritsar, and small towns in remote and uncivilized parts of the country. I think a clear and defined difference should be recognized in the case of cities where there is a numerous, wealthy and intelligent population, and where a certain degree of public opinion exists. I think provision should be made by law for giving such places something in the shape of a constitutional self-government. The Council will perceive that, in the section I have referred to, all places are treated alike; that the Local Government may appoint whom they like; a majority composed of three-fifths of the members may be officials; and no qualification whatever is insisted upon, either in respect to residence within municipal limits, or contribution towards municipal taxation. The next section to which I wish to draw attention is section 8. The Council will observe that here, again, the Executive Government has unlimited power to make rules "as to the persons by whom, and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed." In fact, this section simply re-enacts the powers contained in the old law, to which so much exception was, as I think justly, taken in 1867, and again as recently as within the last few months. I should add that two modifications have been introduced: first that the rules are to be made in conformity with the orders of the Government of India; and, secondly, that the proposals for taxation are to originate with the Committees themselves. As regards the first of these modifications, I must state my preference for the authority to levy taxes of any kind being precisely specified in the statute-book, and not left to the judgment and discretion of the Executive Government, which must vary according to the opinions of the members for the time being. Why, it is barely four years ago that some member of the Government of India discovered that octroi duties were wrong in principle, and opposed to sound views of political economy, and forthwith an edict was issued prohibiting their levy throughout Northern India, although it was afterwards discovered that the people paid these duties with less reluctance than they would any other form of taxation which the wit of a Political Economist could devise. Then, as to the privilege of initiating taxation, when it is considered that three-fifths of the Committee are to be officials, and that no member need himself be either a resident or taxpayer, it will be seen that the value of this privilege, as representing popular opinion, is, in a great measure, diminished. I am well aware of the objection your Lordship took to defining too precisely the limits within which taxation should be allowed, and the great danger there would be of the Committee at once working up to the authorized maximum. There is no doubt much force in this objection; but the Executive Government would always have it in their power to withhold their sanction if they considered it unnecessary to have recourse to the maximum. The limitation is wanted more as a check against the Government themselves, and their officials, who will exercise such overpowering authority in these Committees. There is only one section wanted to complete the arbitrary character of this Bill, and that is one to the effect that the Committees should not be amenable to the jurisdiction of any Court of law for their actions. I must give my hon'ble friends who have prepared this measure credit for not having gone so far as this. They have, on the contrary, provided for suits being brought against the Committees; but when I see by the rules that almost all judicial functionaries are ex officio members of these Committees, the value of this safe-guard is much lessened.

"I have now noticed what I conceive to be the chief objections to the Bill. They resolve themselves into these:—first, that there is no provision for popular representation in the constitution of the Committees; and, second, that there is no limit to the extent to which taxation may be imposed. It may be very desirable to discard all pretence at anything approaching self-government in many towns of the Panjáb; but, as I said before, there are probably cities where such an experiment might be tried with advantage, and at all events it seems to me a mistake in a law of this importance not to recognize this distinction. On the second point I am very decidedly of opinion that it is our duty not to pass any law which will give an unlimited and undefined power of taxation. We have heard a great deal of late of the impatience and irritation which recent and varied fiscal burthens have evoked. I entertain a strong belief that a great deal of this discontent is due to the vexatious and oppressive nature of these so-called municipal and local taxes, and I think we cannot too closely define by law the limits within which they shall be imposed.

"I would beg my hon'ble friend to bear in mind that there is no immediate hurry in this matter, and that a brief declaratory Act can at once be passed prolonging the operation of the existing law. By this means an opportunity will be afforded of dealing with this important question in a comprehensive and satisfactory manner, and with the light that has been brought to bear on it by the discussion in the Bengal Council and elsewhere. Above all, I would beg the Council to consider, that the important principle as to whether undefined and unlimited powers of taxation are to be continued to the Government of the Panjáb is involved in this motion."

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON said, this Bill was framed with the concurrence of the Local Government. It was duly considered in Select Committee, and again by the whole Council. It had been before the public for about three months. It reproduced the main provisions of Act XV of 1867, and the plan upon which both the Act and the Bill were framed was identical. It was to this general plan, which left so much to the discretion of the Local Government, that the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman objected. This principle had been deliberately adopted as being best suited to the country to which the Bill applied.

In regard to the unlimited powers of taxation which the present Bill granted to the Local Government, MR. EGERTON concurred fully in the remarks made by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb when the Bill was introduced, and which, with His Excellency's permission, he would read to the Council. They described his opinion on the question of taxation shortly and forcibly. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb said:—

"The Executive Government was vitally interested in the judicious limitation of local taxation. It must accept all the odium of mistakes and abuses without sharing in the ways and means resulting. But continued peace and prosperity with increased population inevitably created new wants, new difficulties, new expenses. These could be met only by new taxation, and the problem was, not how to fix this in perpetuity, but to impose it, as far as possible, in harmony with the wishes of the people. This, His Honour contended, could only be done experimentally. It was only within the last few years that octroi duties had, with the sanction of the Government of India, come to form the bulk of municipal resources in Northern India. Theoretically, they were open to many objections; in practice, deviations had constantly to be made from the system regulating such duties in Europe. They had been long and warmly pressed on Local Administrations by the leading inhabitants of towns; they had been reluctantly allowed by the supreme authority. His Honour was under no obligation to defend them in the abstract, but cited their general adoption as an instance of the inexpediency or the futility of forecasting according to preconceived ideas the future circumstances of a changing society. Neither the Council nor the Executive Government could a priori select, adjust or limit, with any reasonable chance of success, municipal taxes. Experiment and discussion were essentially necessary to a right determination of their amount and incidence in so many different places, under circumstances so various."

The question of taxation was probably the most important point in the Bill, and MR. EGERTON's view entirely agreed with the opinion of Mr. Davies. We had not the knowledge requisite to prescribe a particular kind of tax, or its amount, for each place in the country. The Lieutenant Governor had every facility for doing so in such a way as to meet the varying circumstances of each place. And till our knowledge on the subject was more certain, and our experience greater, it was unadvisable to restrict the Local Government, and take away, in fact, its responsibility.

With regard to another remark made by the hon'ble member, that he would make provision in the Bill for the appointment of committees of various kinds according to the size of the municipality and its importance, and would prescribe rules for electing or appointing the members, and would not leave those matters to the discretion of the Local Government. The Local Government, MR. EGERTON thought, was the best judge of the requirements of each place. Unless a separate enactment was made for each place, it would be impracticable to provide satisfactorily for the requirements of municipal committees in towns of various sizes according to their importance under the system recommended by the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman.

With regard to the limit of taxation, and the provision for popular representation, which the hon'ble member considered necessary, MR. EGERTON thought the Local Government, acting under the general instructions of the Governor General in Council, would make proper provision both for popular representation and limiting taxation. The control of the Supreme Government was a most important provision, and would enable the Government of India to regulate from time to time the proceedings of the municipal committees in all matters connected with taxation. It was much safer and much more convenient that the matter should rest in that way, than that it should be laid down now authoritatively in the Act with the limited knowledge we possessed.

As regards the irritation and discontent to which the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman referred, MR. EGERTON had not observed it in the country to which this Bill would apply. In other parts of the country it might exist; but he could state positively that no such irritation from excessive taxation existed in the country from which he came. Any discontent or grumbling which might be heard arose more from that unwillingness to pay any tax at all, which the inhabitants of this country as well as other countries always felt. He did not at all admit that the statement with regard to irritation being prevalent, and being caused by municipal taxation, was in any way applicable to the Panjáb.

With regard to the proposal to recommit the Bill and postpone its consideration and to re-enact Act XV of 1867 for another year, MR. EGERTON thought that, after all the discussions that had taken place, after the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb had been taking a part in fixing the provisions of the Bill, and after the long consideration which the Bill had had, it would be a waste of time to recommit the Bill. And he therefore opposed the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. STEWART wished to ask a question with reference to clause 3 of section 2 of the Bill. He wished to ask whether that applied to the extent of excluding the control of the Governor General—whether it barred the interference of the Governor General in Council under section 7. Suppose the Governor General in Council should disapprove of some assessments, bye-laws, rules or regulations which had heretofore been made, was it competent to the Governor General in Council to disallow the same?

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE said that the intention of clause 3 of section 2, was to provide against the necessity of issuing new regulations, or against the risk of there being some gap of time during which there should be no regulations. Practically speaking, the Government would, he thought, have power to annul any regulation found to be injurious.

The Hon'ble MR. STEWART intended to vote against the amendment. He had, on a previous occasion, taken the opportunity to say that, in his opinion, any legislation for purposes of local or municipal taxation, proposed by the Local Governments, should be regarded with extreme care and rigour; and that the power of indefinitely taxing the people, even for purposes in themselves laudable and desirable, should not be lightly committed, or, when committed, lightly continued, to any Local Administration. And he was still of the same mind. But he thought he might consistently hold these views, and yet feel justified in seeing this Bill pass. He saw in it an extremely important qualification, which subjected the proceedings of the Local Government to the rules and orders of the Governor General in Council. He thought that there was a good deal to be said in favour of fixing a maximum limit of municipal taxation, and that, as the President said at Simla, there was also a good deal to be said on the other side of the question; and believing, as he did, that the Government of India was fully alive to the necessity of carefully watching the progress of local and municipal taxation, believing also that they would not hesitate to interfere when necessary, he felt justified in voting for the Bill.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, it would not be for him to attempt to controvert the arguments of the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman against this Bill, because the direction he had pointed out as the direction that ought to be taken in respect to this Bill, was the direction His Honour had himself taken in a similar measure lately passed by the local Council for Bengal. It seemed to him that a Bill for municipal purposes might be of two kinds; first, a Bill laying down broad lines, leaving the Local Government to make rules within those lines, or a Bill which attempted to define more minutely the constitution of municipalities, the limits of taxation, the prosecution of nuisances, and other details. He believed the human nature which indisposed people to pay taxes was common to all countries; and you might say, in regard to tax-payers in general, and municipal tax-payers in particular, hit high, hit low, there was no pleasing them. If a Bill was brought in in general terms, they said you should be particular; if in particular terms, they said you burden us with too many details.

HIS HONOUR believed there was a good deal of force in the arguments used by the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman, if you supposed that the Local Government was inclined to be oppressive in enforcing the Act. No precaution which you could lay down would really prevent the Local Government from doing mischief enough to set the country in a blaze. Whether you had a general or a particular Bill, you must assume that the Local Government was inclined to do its duty. If the Local Government failed to do its duty, the members of that Government should be turned out. You selected and trusted the man and gave him large powers, and trusted to those powers not being abused. Large powers must be entrusted to the Local Government subject to the control of the Governor General in Council. The Bill had been considered carefully and long, and by men who were best acquainted with the character of the people with whom they were dealing. Seeing that municipalities had been more successful in the Panjáb than elsewhere; seeing that the Government of the Panjáb had not abused their powers, he was inclined to support the Bill. He would rather that this Bill should be passed, and that some day a more perfect Bill be, if necessary, brought in for consideration.

HIS HONOUR thought the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman were a little exaggerated, and he might be permitted to say that the hon'ble member was very particular as regards any measure that came from the Panjáb. He strained at a Panjáb gnat and swallowed a Bombay camel. He asked the Council to accept Bills coming from Bombay as a matter of course; Bills which came from the Panjáb were minutely criticized. HIS HONOUR took up a report lately prepared by his orders, to see how the matter stood as between Bombay and other Provinces. He found that, in the Presidency of Bombay, out of a population of fourteen millions, there was 20½ lákhs of municipal taxation; in the Panjáb, out of a population of nineteen millions, only 17½ lákhs; in the North-Western Provinces, out of a population of thirty millions, only 19½ lákhs; and in Bengal, out of a population of sixty-five millions, only 11½ lákhs. With these figures it was evident that, in point of municipal taxation, the Local Government of Bombay had gone far beyond other Governments in the extent of its municipal taxation. He could not say what powers they had in Bombay in respect of municipal taxation. He was informed that very many of the municipalities in Bombay were constituted under Act XXVI of 1850. That was one of the old Acts regarding municipalities, and was very much the same as the Panjáb Act. The material difference between that Act and the present Bill was, that whereas, in the Act used in Bombay, there were no restrictions on the authority of the Local Government, in this Bill the power of imposing duties was liable to limitation by rules to be made by the Governor General in Council. That was a very important limitation. In other respects this Bill was on all-fours with the Act of 1850. The Act of 1850 might be introduced in any town or suburb whatever. The only qualification was, that the Commissioner was to be an inhabitant of the municipality. Then, as regards the power of taxation, it was absolutely without limit, and sometimes the power had been very severely used. There was no maximum of taxation; no limit of assessment; no definition of nuisance. It seemed to His Honour, therefore, that, in Bombay and the North-Western Provinces, there were Acts of this sort, and he did not see why we should deny the same thing to the Panjáb, subject to the limitations provided by the Bill.

Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman said, although he could not say he agreed with a good deal that had fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman, he agreed with him as to the expediency of fixing a maximum of taxation for municipal purposes. General Norman had expressed himself to that effect when this Bill was discussed at Simla. In the Select Committee on the Bill, of which he was a member, various alterations had been made, both with a view to placing taxation under check, and to limit expenditure from municipal funds to works of real public utility; but the Committee did not see its way to fixing an absolute general limit on the amount of taxation, and, perhaps, the members did not all agree in the propriety of such a measure. If he (Major General Norman) had, at that time, seen the Bengal Municipal Bill, he would have urged the Committee to adopt the plan of limitation therein contained. He could not admit that it would be at all true that, even in the Panjáb, some limit of taxation would not be desirable. He knew that, in one or two cases, the taxes were high. This, he understood, arose from octroi-duties, which had in some degree assumed the shape of transit-dues contrary to rule. Possibly, if a maximum of taxation had been fixed, there would have been no resort to such duties. On the whole, however, he would now leave the matter in the hands of the Local Government, subject to interference if found necessary by the Government of India, and he would not support the proposal to re-commit the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. Ellis considered the observations of the hon'ble mover of the amendment had been sufficiently met by the speeches of the hon'ble members who had followed him. He would take leave, however, to demur to the accusation of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, who had charged the Bombay Government with exaction in the matter of municipal taxation. For the charge was founded on figures which did not afford a proper basis for forming a judgment. His Honour took the figures of the whole population, and then showed from them the incidence of municipal taxation. Whereas it was evident that he should have brought figures to show the number of inhabitants in the places where municipal taxation was levied, and then the Council would have been able to compare the incidence and the extent of such taxation in the several provinces. But it was no proof of the heavy incidence of taxation to show that the taxation was heavy in proportion to the number of inhabitants of the whole province, these figures including the agricultural classes, and others not resident within the limits of municipalities.

With regard to the observations of the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman, the only point which required an expression of opinion from Mr. Ellis was Mr. Chapman's objection to the scheme of the Bill for levying taxes, and his demand that we should recast the Bill for the purpose of specifying the sources of taxation. Mr. Ellis considered the procedure of the Bill in every way preferable to such a course. This Council was not the best tribunal to consider the details appropriate in the distant Panjáb, and he was quite certain that the Local Government, subject to the control which was put on it under the provisions of the Bill, was a much better judge of the varying circumstances of the Panjáb towns and cities, and of the varying modes of taxation which would suit those circumstances. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal had, in a recent Bill, adopted a different course of proceeding, and in that Bill had set forth, in great detail, a variety of modes of taxation—

[His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that the hon'ble member could not allude to the provisions of a Bill which was not before the Council.]

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS resumed—He merely wished to say that such details might be desirable in the law-loving Province of Bengal, but were most undesirable in the differently constituted Province of the Panjáb; and therefore the reference made by the hon'ble mover of the amendment to the provisions of the Bengal Bill seemed wholly inappropriate. He would vote against the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE had read the proceedings in connection with the Panjáb Municipal Acts from beginning to end, and they left on his mind the impression that we ought not to discuss the matter further. When the Bill was first introduced, it was keenly opposed and vigourously debated. All the arguments were set forth which the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman had adduced to-day—the danger of municipal taxation, and the danger of giving too much discretion to the Local Government; but before the Act was passed, every member of the Council was convinced that it ought to pass. It was shown that the Panjáb authorities had been establishing municipalities without any law; that they had been attended with great success; and that they should now be allowed to proceed according to law. The Bill was passed with the expression of Lord Lawrence's opinion that it should be passed for five years, and if there was discontent, he said we should hear an outcry. The five years had gone, and another year to boot. There had been no outcry. On the contrary, the experience of the Government of the Panjáb was, that the working of these municipalities had been very successful, and there was not a scrap of evidence to the contrary. If we were now proposing to enlarge the powers previously given, we ought to discuss the matter over again; but we were not enlarging those powers. With one slight exception, the alterations were all in the direction of greater caution. In section 4, there was a clause by which notice must be given of the intention to extend the Act to any town, and provision was made for objections to such extension. In section 6, there was a limitation of the number of official members; not less than two-fifths must be persons other than salaried officers of Government. In section 7, which provided for the subject of taxation in relation to both persons and things, there was a provision that the Government should give notice of its intention to impose certain taxes, and a provision for the hearing of objections to such taxation. In one section (11), we dealt with the subject of expenditure for works of local improvement. The words "local improvement" were expunged on the motion of General Norman, with the object that the funds should be expended only on works of utility, and that the Act should not contain expressions which might cover expenses on mere ornament. By section 6, again, the Supreme Government had power to make rules under which the Local Government was to act, a restriction which was not to be found in the existing Act. The only provision enlarging powers was one which gave a right of entry on private premises to abate nuisances. With this exception, every alteration had been made in the direction of caution, and he thought the Council might most safely entrust the working of this Bill to the Executive Government.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said that, having served as a member of the Committee on this Bill, and also in justice to the Local Government of the Panjáb, he felt it his duty to make a few observations. In effect, this Bill merely continued, with additional reservations, a power long enjoyed. These municipal taxes in the Panjáb had lasted now for many years, and we had actual experience, of them, and that experience had been eminently satisfactory. His hon'ble friend, Mr. Chapman, might think otherwise; but SIR RICHARD TEMPLE believed it would be impossible to produce the slightest evidence to prove that these taxes had worked otherwise than with entire satisfaction. We had obtained practical experience, and that test was entirely in favour of the Bill. As to discontent, he believed that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill had given a correct account of the state of things in that respect. It was to be remembered that, originally, in the Panjáb cities, there were various direct taxes levied for municipal purposes. That did give cause for local discontent. He spoke of times within the recollection of one or two members of this Council. Afterwards, in supersession of the direct house-tax, indirect octroi-duties were imposed; and he believed that in no part of India had such an amount been raised for so long a period, with such absolute content as those duties. They gave great satisfaction wherever they were introduced. And although he could not claim such recent knowledge of the Panjáb as his hon'ble friend, Mr. Egerton, yet he once knew those people well, and he was still acquainted with the principal Natives in that part of the country, and, to the best of his belief, the people were quite contented. The system was now to be further regulated by this Bill.

The main point to which his hon'ble friend Mr. Chapman objected was the question of taxation. That point was thoroughly considered by the Committee, and they arrived at the conclusion that it would be impossible for the Council to legislate satisfactorily in detail. Any regulation which should prescribe the details of taxation must provide certain general schedules the effect of which would never be the same in any two cities. The articles of tariff would not be the same. If we were to take that course, as the Act must comprise all municipalities, it must have a schedule comprising all the articles imported or introduced into every town in the Panjáb. It would be a very long and complicated schedule. If such a schedule was to be tacked on to the Bill, the Local Government, in its executive capacity, must exercise immense discretion in selecting the articles for taxation in each particular place. It must proceed to make a special tariff for every single town. It must exercise the very widest discretion, in fact the very kind of discretion to which the hon'ble member objected. Therefore, it would be better not to attempt in this Council to frame such a schedule.

Then as to the kinds of taxation. In some towns they might select a low rate on a large number of articles; in others a high rate on a small number. Then in some towns there was no such thing as an ad valorem duty. If a rate of duty was fixed by the Bill, it would be, say, five or ten per cent. ad valorem. But ad valorem duties were not known in many towns, at least in respect of many articles. Every tax was not levied, as in the Customs, by an ad valorem duty; but in some cases the duty was levied at so much per load. It would require local enquiries in every single town as to what the rates per man-load, per donkey-load, or per cart-load, was equivalent to the ad valorem duty. So that, if this Bill prescribed the rates of tax, it must be some high ad valorem rate, which would be liable to modification by the Local Government in every city. There, again, would be an immense discretion permitted to the Local Government. Therefore his distinct answer to the hon'ble Mr. Chapman's objection was this,—if you objected to any discretion being allowed, you must permit such discretion by prescribing a general ad valorem rate of duty in a very extensive schedule. So that SIR RICHARD TEMPLE hoped he made it in some degree clear to the Council that it would be in the nature of the case impossible to avoid giving a discretion to the Local Government.

Then, he understood his hon'ble friend to object that they were not importing more conditions regarding the appointment of members of Committees. He indicated that such appointments ought to be made by the people, who should nominate their own representatives.

[The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN observed, that he alluded to the qualification of members, not to their election.]

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE resumed—As to qualification, his hon'ble friend Mr. Hobhouse had pointed out that the Committee had prescribed an important provision, that a certain proportion of members should be non-official. In a country like the Panjáb, non-official members must be Native gentlemen residing in or near the town. How could any one else accept the office of a member? The Local Government could not compel people to serve. Therefore it was a matter of common sense and experience that the limitation applied to persons resident on the spot.

Then his hon'ble friend also objected to the European officers in the district serving on these Committees, on the ground that they might be called upon to adjudicate cases in which the Committee was concerned.

[The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN remarked that he did not make that objection.]

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE continued—He understood the hon'ble member's objection to be this, that the European officers ought not to serve on these Committees because they were judicial officers.

[The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN explained, that what he said was that, in order to make the arbitrary character of the Bill complete, the jurisdiction of the Courts should not have been admitted at all, but that the Bill had not gone to this extent, and the acts of the Committee were liable to be brought within the cognizance of the Courts. He had said that he considered this concession had been a good deal qualified by the fact that, under the rules, all judicial officers were themselves members of the Committee, and, consequently, would have to adjudicate on their own acts.]

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE resumed—But the hon'ble member remarked, in a tone of seriousness, regarding the fact that all the European officers of the district would be bound to serve on these Committees, notwithstanding that they would be the very persons to decide on disputes between these Committees and the people who had the Committees in order. That was the apparent drift of his hon'ble friend's meaning. Such was the objection taken to the European authorities of the district serving on these Committees. He said, virtually, who was to keep these Committees in order, when the custodians of public right and order were themselves members? That was the real substance of the hon'ble member's objection. If he did not mean that, SIR RICHARD TEMPLE could not understand what he meant. His answer was, that that state of things was a necessary sequence of the system of administration in the Panjáb. In other parts of the country the judicial officers were separate from the administrative officers. But, in the Panjáb, you had the judicial and administrative control in one and the same officer for the whole district; and anybody who knew anything of the country would admit that you ought to have the administrative officers on these Committees. It followed that you could not object to their serving on the ground that they were also judicial officers. When you united the judicial and executive functions in one set of men, you must accept that condition of things in these Committees. It was monstrous to suppose that the head of the District, the Collector, Magistrate, and Civil Judge combined in one person, holding that important and responsible position, would not do justice as between the Committee and the people; and that remark applied with still greater force as regards the Commissioner of the Division. Moreover, that state of things could not be altered until the Government of India, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, altered the system of administration in the Panjáb. It had been truly urged in behalf of this Bill, that the rules to be framed by the Local Government would be subject to the control of the Government of India. One would suppose from the tenor of the hon'ble member's remarks that that control would not be strict and rigid. SIR RICHARD TEMPLE would appeal to the Resolution passed by the Government of India in 1868, which was carefully elaborated by some members of Government still present, as proof of the strict and comprehensive supervision exercised by the Supreme Government. The Government of India had every motive for exercising a strict supervision; for if the Local Governments were irresponsible in the matter of municipal taxation, such taxation might seriously interfere with many sources of imperial revenue: and he believed he might confidently say, that neither the present Financial administration, nor those who succeeded him, would acquiesce in that. On all these considerations, he hoped the Council would negative the amendment.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"This question has been so fully discussed by the Council that I have little to say upon it.

"Some minor points may, I think, be put aside, namely, the objections raised by the hon'ble member to the two last paragraphs of the second clause, which simply confirm the action taken under the former Acts which will be repealed by the Bill; and also his apprehension lest persons unconnected with the municipalities should be placed upon the Municipal Committees. I am glad to have the opportunity of mentioning that, during my recent visit to the Panjáb, I received from the Lieutenant Governor and other officers assurances that the Native members of the Municipal Committees had performed their duties with zeal and intelligence, and had been of great assistance to the Government.

"The real question raised by the hon'ble member is, whether it is more wise to include in this Bill definitions of taxes, and limitations as to amounts which shall be levied, than to leave these particulars to the Municipal Committees, subject to the approval of the Local Government and to the sanction of the Government of India, after due notice has been given to the people, and they have had an opportunity of expressing their opinions upon any tax which the Municipal Committee desires to levy. The circumstances of places in India to which municipal institutions are applied, are very different, especially in the Panjáb. It is impossible, for example, to conceive two places more differently situated in respect to municipal taxation than Simla, on the one hand, and Amritsar on the other. It seems to me that the Legislative Council have adopted a wise course by not laying down any rigid rules in this Bill. Moreover, it must be clear to those members of the Legislative Council who were not present during the discussions which took place on this Bill in the course of last year, after the explanations which have been given by my hon'ble friend, Mr. Hobhouse, that, in several important alterations of the present law, which have been made in this Bill, the Legislative Council have carefully considered the responsibility that rested upon them, and have not entrusted too large powers, either to the Committees, or to the Local Government, in respect to taxation.

"I can assure the Council that the importance of watching over local and municipal taxation is fully recognised by the Government of India.

"The responsibility for all taxation in India, whether local or imperial, must, in my opinion, rest, in the main, upon the Government of India, and, accordingly, the seventh clause of this Bill was introduced for the express purpose of giving to the Government of India full power to direct and control the action of the Government of the Panjáb in this matter.

"I wish to say, in conclusion, that the powers which the Government of the Panjáb have for some years now possessed in respect to municipalities, have, in my opinion, been wisely and carefully exercised, and I have not heard from any quarter any serious remonstrances against, or objections to, the system of municipal taxation which now prevails in the Panjáb, excepting in one solitary instance.

"So far as I am able to judge, the octroi, by which almost all of the municipal taxation in the Panjáb is raised, is in accordance with the feelings of the people.

"The Government will, however, have to take care that the octroi does not degenerate into a transit-duty; and I know that the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb is fully alive to this necessity.

"I hope that the expression of opinion which has been given to-day by the members of the Council will satisfy the hon'ble member, that the Bill has already been carefully considered, and that he will not think it necessary to press his amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN said—"My Lord, as I see the general sense of the Council is against my amendment, it is not my intention to notice, in any detail, the arguments that have been advanced against it. I wish, however, to set myself right on one or two points. In the first place, when I alluded to the discontent that local and municipal taxes had evoked, I did not mean to refer so much to the excessive amount of these burthens as to their fluctuating and ever-varying character. The people never know what to expect next, and are kept in a constant state of harassing doubt and uncertainty. It seems to me, therefore, most necessary that the principle on which, and the extent to which, taxation of this kind should be resorted to, ought to be precisely laid down in the law, and not left to the will and caprice of the persons in authority for the time being. Take, for instance, a house-tax. Some authorities may consider this the fairest and best means of raising a municipal revenue; but surely it is advisable to place some limit on the lengths to which they may proceed, by fixing a maximum rating. This principle of limitation and specification of amount is recognised in every law that I am acquainted with; for example, in those authorising the levy of tolls, of fees for the maintenance of cattle-pounds and the like, and I cannot see why it should be set aside in the present Bill.

"From the remarks that have fallen from some of my hon'ble friends, it would seem that they consider I have taken upon myself to sit in judgment on the Panjáb administration. It would have been highly unbecoming and improper of me if I had done so, and I beg most distinctly to disclaim the imputation. Excellent and vigorous as the Government of the Panjáb no doubt is, it seems to me that I have a perfect right to express my opinion that it should be guided in the important matters under discussion by law rather than by rules. However honest and excellent the intentions of a Government may be, I believe it is impossible for it to exercise the same check over its officials by rules as by laws.

"Next, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has twitted me with the short-comings of the Bombay Government in respect to municipal administration, and has pointed out that, in that Presidency, Act XXVI of 1850, conferring as it does the most vague and indefinite powers, is still the only law we have on the subject. I need hardly say that, occupying as I do a subordinate position under that Government, I am not answerable for all its sins and short-comings; but I may state that the subject has not been lost sight of, and that a very carefully prepared measure for regulating our municipalities on the principles which I have endeavoured to advocate, has, for some time past, been under the consideration of the Bombay Government. One of my main reasons for begging the Council would not deal with this Bill in a final way was, because I think it highly expedient that they should have the benefit of the experience and knowledge that would be derivable from the Bengal and Bombay Bills.

"It is not my intention to trespass at this late hour any longer on the time of the Council. It really seems to me that it would be quite as well, instead of the present comparatively long Bill, to pass a brief law somewhat to this effect:—'Whereas it is expedient to invest, under such rules as the Government of India may from time to time approve, the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb with full power to raise municipal taxes and to provide for municipal administration, power to this effect is hereby conferred on the said Lieutenant Governor.' I am sure such a brief Act will meet with the approval of the learned Secretary, who is so desirous to compress the statute-book into the smallest possible compass."

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS moved—

"That in section 12, line 3, after the word "sum," the following words be inserted, "not exceeding one-half the revenue raised."

Also that, in the same section, line 5, for the word "establishment" be substituted the words "employed on Town duty."

The object of his amendment was to put some limitation on the demand on Municipal Funds for Police purposes. Ample check had been provided in respect of taxation, and of all other matters treated of in the Bill. But in respect of this one item there was no check. Absolute power was given to the Government to take the whole proceeds of the taxes of any municipality for the purpose of maintaining the Police; not only for the town Police, but to pay the Police stationed in the town, but employed on duties altogether beyond the limits of the municipality. The object of the amendments was to lay down by law some limit to the proportion of funds to be expended for Police. The only objection that he could anticipate to the first of the amendments, namely, that the maximum amount should not be more than one-half, was the general objection that, by prescribing a maximum, you induced the working up to that maximum, and induced the levying of much taxation that was not wanted. That was a reasonable objection to prescribing a maximum of taxation when the decision rested with municipal bodies, but was hardly applicable to the Local Government; for it was hardly probable that they could mistake a prohibition to take more than a certain proportion to be an indication to work up to that proportion. A second objection might be taken, that it was possible that the Government would insist upon taxation being raised to a sufficient amount to produce double the sum required for Police. He believed they would rather find that placing a limit would induce the adoption of wholesome economy, as it would make the Government enquire whether, with such a large proportion as one-half the proceeds of municipal taxation devoted to the maintenance of Police, there was not a superabundance of Police; and further, if the Local Government ascertained that the payment on account of Police was not in excess of the wants of the town, and that the town was sufficiently taxed, it would probably be deemed wrong to fix such a large proportion, and a donation for Police purposes would then be assigned from the grant for Provincial services. Other courses than additional taxation would thus be suggested to the Government in the event of the proportion of one-half being found insufficient for the maintenance of municipal Police.

The second amendment was little more than a verbal one. MR. ELLIS conceived that it was never intended that municipalities should be called upon to pay for anything more than the town Police. In some parts of the country, it was the custom to station, in large towns, a considerable body of Police with highly paid officers required for the care of the district around the town. Where that was the custom, the wording of the Act might have an injurious effect, inasmuch as the municipality might be called upon to contribute to the maintenance of Police which were not required for the town. The second amendment would restrict the contribution to the maintenance of Police required for the town.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS hoped the amendment to limit the amount that might be spent on the Police of any town to one-half the sum raised under the Act would not be carried, as he was certain it would only do mischief.

It was impossible to lay down any rule regulating the proportion the cost of the Police of any town should bear to the total income received by the municipality. In large, opulent, compactly built towns, the cost of the Police employed was probably not more than fifteen or twenty per cent. of the income raised by local taxation; while, in other towns, to which the Act might be extended with the sole object of raising a sum sufficient to pay for the Police employed in them by some of the taxes leviable under it more in accordance with the feelings of the people than a house-tax, there was perhaps no surplus left. The result in these cases, if the Hon'ble Mr. Ellis' amendment were carried, would be to compel the Local Government to double the taxation already imposed on such places, in order to obtain a surplus which nobody wanted.

The number and cost of the Police required for any town was a matter which should be left entirely to the discretion of the Local Government.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON quite concurred with what had fallen from the hon'ble Mr. Inglis. The Act would be introduced in many places merely for the purpose of raising money for Police purposes. It was the only Act which empowered the Local Government to raise money by rates and taxes for such purposes, and it was desirable to keep it free from any restriction of such kind as would lead to inconvenience in that respect. The Local Government was not inclined to take advantage of the provisions of the Act in any such way as was anticipated by the amendment. There was no wish to apply the funds raised for paying the Police of towns for the maintenance of Police not belonging to the town. The provisions of the Bill were sufficient to prevent misapplication of funds in this respect as in any other case. And it would not be possible to apply funds raised for Police purposes in the town to the maintenance of Police not employed in the town. For these reasons he considered it unnecessary, either to fix the maximum sum to be devoted to the maintenance of Police, or to provide that the Police so maintained should be employed solely in the town.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR agreed with what had been stated, that there were some towns in which the municipal taxation was solely, or almost solely, for the maintenance of Police; and if in such towns we had to raise rupees one hundred for Police, it was hard that we should be obliged to raise rupees one hundred for other purposes.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS observed, that he did not say that the same percentage should be taken in all places. He wished to fix a maximum, so that Government should not, under the pretext of creating municipalities, raise money merely for Police purposes. It was stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis that this was another mode of doing what was done by the old Chaukídárí Act rather than that that Act should be revised. If it was desired to legislate for village Police, let a new Chaukídárí Act be passed, but the present Bill was one for forming municipalities. What MR. ELLIS considered to be the meaning of this clause was, to give power to contribute municipal funds for the maintenance of the District Police stationed within municipal limits for town duty, and it was in that spirit that he wished to limit its operation. If he was wrong, the hon'ble Member in charge of the Legislative Department would correct him. He must say that, in respect of Police, there had been a pressure put on municipalities in some provinces to an extent far beyond what was necessary or just. It was to check this injustice that he proposed the amendments, and he would press their adoption.

The first amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS observed, with reference to his second amendment, that the country was parcelled out into Police-stations. There were stations for the Police of towns, and stations for Police entertained for the prevention of crime in the rural districts around those stations. These latter stations were situated in large towns, and, according to the wording of the Act, the Police establishment in a town would embrace Police employed in duties outside of the town, and therefore he proposed to add the words "employed on town duty," to show that Police stationed in a town, but employed outside of the town, were not to be maintained from municipal funds.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON explained that there were two separate establishments of Police stationed in some towns; one was the Police of the district, the other the Police of the town. But the District Police were not paid from municipal funds. They were quite separate: there were two stations and two sets of Police, and they were very frequently under the control of one and the same officer. They were to some extent mingled, but there was no such misappropriation of municipal funds as the Hon'ble Mr. Ellis had supposed. MR. EGERTON thought it would be highly inconvenient to limit the employment of the Police of any town to that town. On the occurrence of a disturbance, you might require to transfer large bodies of Police from one town to another; whereas the proposed amendment would ordinarily prevent the employment of the Police of a town in any place beyond the limits of that town.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that the practise was as had been suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Egerton, and he thought it would be a great abuse of power if there were any other practice.

The second amendment was put and negatived.

The Motion that the Bill be passed was then put and agreed to.

LAND REVENUE (NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to land-revenue in the North-Western Provinces of Bengal be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in six weeks. He said:—"My Lord, this Bill has, since its introduction last April by the Hon'ble Mr. Stephen, been carefully considered by the Government of the North-West Provinces. Some alteration in the arrangement of the chapters is suggested; the addition of some sections embodying the provisions of certain Regulations, inadvertently omitted from the repealing schedule of the original Bill, is proposed; and some changes in the existing law, which I shall now proceed to notice, are recommended.

"The most important changes suggested are in the chapters relating to Settlement. It being recommended that power should be given to Settlement Officers to determine the classes to which tenants belong; and the rent payable by them according to their class; the order passed by the Settlement Officer in such cases being made appealable to the Revenue authorities instead of the Civil Court; and, also, that tenants cultivating land in an estate in which they formerly possessed the proprietary right should be recognized as a separate class of occupancy tenants, with rights and privileges superior to tenants who may have acquired a right of occupancy by prescription under section 6 of Act X of 1859.

"I will, with your Lordship's permission, read an extract from a Note recorded by the Hon'ble Sir William Muir last July, on the rights and position of these ex-proprietary cultivators. He says:—

"'In the draft Bill now before Government for amending the Rent Law of the North-Western Provinces, the Board of Revenue have introduced a new provision (paragraphs 5, 20 and 21), recognizing ex-proprietary tenants as a privileged class, whose rents should not be liable to enhancement excepting at revision of settlement, and then only at a privileged rate.

"'2. I am in favour of such a provision on grounds of strong expediency and even of justice.

"'3. Ex-proprietary cultivators are described in paragraphs 126 to 135 of Directions to Settlement Officers; they may have lost their rights in any of the following ways:—

I.—Ex-proprietary cultivators by reason of revenue sales.

"'4. First, they may have been reduced to the position of cultivators by reason of their estate having been sold for arrears of revenue. It was held by Mr. Thomason that the effect of such a sale was the loss of proprietary rights only. "If they were cultivators also," he says, the ex-proprietors "retain their rights in that character, and, as regards their own or seer land, are entitled to hold at fixed rates." But no very definite rule is laid down as to what these "fixed rates" should be. They are "liable to an equitable adjustment of the rent, if it was before too low, and should be made to pay the same that other non-proprietary cultivators in the neighbourhood of the same class pay for similar land." The adjustment is admitted to be difficult, and recourse is recommended to a jury. The result practically has been, I believe, that this class (unless too strong for the auction purchaser) has fallen to the ordinary level of the hereditary cultivator, who holds merely in virtue of a twelve years' prescription.

Directions to Settlement Officers, paragraph 132.

II.—Ex-proprietary cultivators by reason of sale in execution of decree of court.

"'5. The result of a sale in execution of decree of court, on the other hand, was held by Mr. Thomason to extinguish all rights, both cultivating and proprietary. The ex-proprietor "then becomes a mere tenant-at-will, and is liable to be entirely ejected from his land"; he can acquire new rights only by contract or a new prescription. Herein lies the sting of the sale-law, and its inapplicability to the habits and circumstances of Upper India. The immediate possession of the land, as a rule, is not changed. The ex-proprietors cling to their ancestral acres; they have in fact nowhere else to go; no other employment to take up. They remain as cultivators with all the traditions of their ownership, and every infringement of their position by the new proprietor embitters them against him, and against the British Government to which they trace their fall. In Oudh, when proprietors were ousted, or, when they parted voluntarily with their right to contract with Government; they retained, either tacitly or by agreement, their seer or khudkasht land. If some arrangement of this kind had been recognized in case of sale under decree, it would have mollified the hardship of the ex-proprietor's new position. And I believe it might have been done on the principle that, by the custom of the country, the cultivating title is not saleable; and that what is sold is therefore the title to proprietary management and profits, not the rights and privileges of cultivating tenancy.

Ibidem, para: 133.

"'6. As it is, the state of the law and the action of our Courts have thrown the new proprietors and the old cultivating communities into a bitter antagonism, which ends too often in riot and bloodshed. Mr. A. Colvin writes:—

"'There are villages here, within sixteen miles of the table at which I am writing, where it is as much as the auction purchaser's life is worth to shew his face unattended by a rabble of cudgellers. He may sue his tenants and obtain decrees for enhanced rents; but payment of these rents he will not get. A long series of struggles, commencing in our courts, marked in their progress certainly by affrays, and very probably ending in murder, may possibly lead him at length to the position of an English proprietor. But in defence of their old rates, the Bráhman, or Rájput, or Syyad community, ignorant of political economy, and mindful only of the traditions which record the origin and terms of their holding, will risk property and life itself." (Memorandum on revision of Land Revenue Settlements, by Mr. A. Colvin, 1872, page 114.)

III.—Ex-proprietors reduced by voluntary sale.

"'Ex-proprietors reduced to the grade of cultivators by the voluntary sale of their estates, may be very similar in condition to Class II. They may have been caught in the meshes of the money-lender. Under the Native system, they would have been responsible only in their persons and their personal property,—their tenure would never have been thought of as a transferable asset. Land being now invested with a saleable value, their evil fortune prompts them, perhaps, first to mortgage their fields under a rash deed of conditional sale; then they prefer to complete the transaction by a voluntary sale, rather than run the chance of a smaller price at a public auction. With the sale, goes the entire right, both cultivating and proprietary. It is seldom that the seller has the foresight to stipulate for the retention of his holding at favourable rates, or at any rate at all. And the general result will often not be very different from that of an enforced sale.'

* * * * * * * * * *

"'13. Whatever reasons there may be, in the abstract, for creating or maintaining privileges in respect of the above classes, or of any one or more of them, these are strengthened by the experience of recent years.

"'14. The history of rent in these provinces has been sketched by Mr. A. Colvin with much research and ability in his recent treatise on the Revision of Settlements. His position is that, what, with us, are "rent-rates," were, under the systems preceding us, strictly revenue-rates, determinable by custom, or otherwise, at discretion, by Government agency; the head of the community or other person contracting with Government being remunerated by land or by a drawback. Originally, in these provinces, rent continued during the thirty years' settlement to be singularly stationary. But new influences are at work. Prices have risen, and rent is beginning slowly to respond: in so far as the rise is the legitimate result of enhanced prices, and no more, the old classes of cultivators have nothing to complain of,—the increased rent representing simply the increased value of the share of the produce which would otherwise have gone to Government. But there are other causes. Act X, 1859, affords a ready and effective machinery for enhancement, where there was none before. The new settlements, so soon as they are completed, become the signal for enhancement-operations. Wherever the revenue is raised, there the people (true to the old tradition of revenue-rentals) arrange for a corresponding rise in their rents.

"'15. Now, so far as regards the non-privileged classes,—those whose traditions fail to connect them with an original interest in the soil,—the process may be left to work itself to an equilibrium, and the proprietors to push their claims to the utmost. The modern Maurúsí, whose right of occupancy rests on the simple prescription of a twelve years' tenancy, may be left to fight his battle with the proprietor. But to leave those whose traditions do connect them with the soil at the mercy of the new proprietors, backed by the force of law, will be to permit a state of things neither just to them nor consistent with the peace of the country. I cannot do better than quote here Mr. Colvin's conclusions:—

"'If the Government raises its demand on the land, the proprietor can only recoup himself by raising his demand for rent. But if the view I have taken of the original nature of what we call his rents is correct, what does this process of raising them entail? It entails a long and bitter struggle between those whom we have made full proprietors, vesting them with powers which none but the Government ever claimed before, and those who believe themselves to be the original occupants of the land. The power of the Government, and the strength of its Courts, must be on the side of the unpopular cause. The process of raising rents introduces and forces into activity a new and most dangerous element of discord. The extent of the change which we introduced into the tenure of land will only be fully known when the proprietors commence to use more freely the powers we have given into their hands. Not only those to whom, at cession or conquest, we gave proprietary rights, but the hundreds who, by sale or mortgage, have since acquired them, will attempt, each in his own way, and each with varying success, to destroy the old traditional rates.' Page 120.

"'16. And again:

'The political aspect of the question does not come within the scope of this paper. But I may repeat, in concluding, that, in the new agency we have introduced, namely, the newly acquired power of our proprietors to enhance their rents, which we have seen so sturdily combated by Mr. Bird, there lie very serious elements of social discord and agrarian discontent. It has been my object to show why, during the last settlement, that power was very little understood. The Rent Law of 1859 first brought it to the immediate notice of those whom we have recognised as proprietors. The progress of the country and the revision of settlements have forced the power into active use. We are now, for the first time, fairly watching its effects; and, under the guise of adjusting rents, I believe we are introducing what is little less than a revolution into the status of a large section of the agricultural body. For the present, doubtless, Act X of 1859 is not largely used by proprietors to raise rents independently of Government pressure, but mainly as an indispensable and necessary complement to the authority exercised by Government in periodically enhancing its revenue. But this is for the present only. The proprietary body have been given the power, and, more recently, they have been taught its advantages. Under former Governments, the interests of the proprietary and the mere cultivators were identical. Now they are directly antagonistic. We have an apparent increase in the number of tenants in whom we have recognized rights of occupancy; but, in reality, a violent attack on the only security by which they hold. We have abandoned the exercise of a direct control over the land-rates: and while deriving larger revenues therefrom, can reach them only by inviting proprietors to drag their tenants into Court.

The remedy certainly does not lie in merely enhancing the revenue on the landlords; but, I believe, in recognizing the historical aspect of these so-called rents. The remedy will be found in arranging, at time of settlement, for the fair and full valuation of rents, not by law Courts and vain formula of enhancement, but by the only officer competent to do it, the Settlement Officer, who stands to-day in the place of Akbar's Amil, and who has, to guide him, a mass of data which he only can effectively handle. During the term of settlement, the rents so fixed I would, with certain exceptions, maintain. A far larger revenue would be gained with a smaller amount of heart-burning. The treasury would be satisfied, and the people more content." Ibid, page 136.

* * * * * * * *

"'19. I cannot conceive that any impartial person will oppose the protection of these classes as an infringment of the rights of the proprietor. The State has always held itself at liberty to restrain the zamíndár for the benefit of the tenants. No absolute and exclusive right in the zamíndár has ever been admitted or declared. There is nothing in the previous position of the zamíndár that would bar the Government in upholding the rights of any class of cultivators; and in recognizing the zamíndár as proprietor—not merely as the passer on of the rental, but as entitled to all the profit arising from the limitation of the Government demand,—it has nowhere been conceded that he is possessed of any indefeasible power of enhancement. The proprietor cannot, therefore, complain if we limit his power of enhancement in respect of certain assecls possessed of an anterior interest in the soil.

"'20. At the same time, I would create no new rights. I would raise into the privileged class none who are not already, by the feeling of the country and the traditions of the people, entitled to hold at easy rates.

"'21. And, further, there would be no interference with existing rents. It is not proposed that, in any case, the privileged cultivator should be empowered to claim reduction of the rent he is paying. Proprietors cannot, therefore, complain that the measure lowers the assets upon which the settlement of the revenue was concluded with them.

"22. 'The project simply provides that no suit for enhancement will lie against a cultivator of the privileged class during the term of a settlement; and that the rent of such cultivator may be enhanced at the revision of settlement by the Settlement Officer only, and so as that it may be enhanced up to 25 per cent. below market-rates and no higher.

* * * * * * * *

"'25. The Board propose that privileged rents should not be enhanced above 75 per cent of market-rates. I am not sure that so great a difference is required. I think two annas in the rupee, or 12½ per cent., which has been fixed in Oudh, would suffice.

"'26. The measure now proposed should be brought before the Committee at present sitting on the Bill for the consolidation of the Revenue Law, North-Western Provinces, with the view of a provision being entered in the settlement-section for the purpose.'

"It is recommended that a section drawn in accordance with the opinion expressed in this Note should be inserted in the Bill. The proposed section runs thus:—

Tenants holding at privileged rates.

"'All tenants in a village who have lost their proprietary rights in such village, or whose ancestors have lost such rights since the instruction of British rule in any of the ways following, namely,

(1) by sale for arrears of revenue;
(2) by sale in execution of a decree of the Civil or Revenue Court;
(3) by private agreement, sale, or mortgage;
(4) by confiscation under Acts Nos. XI and XIV of 1857, shall be recorded as privileged tenants in any land in such village cultivated by them at the time of the passing of this Act, or at the date of their ceasing to be proprietors, if such date is subsequent to the passsing of this Act.

Enhancement of rent of privileged tenants.

"'If the proprietor make application to the Settlement Officer to enhance the rent of a privileged tenant, the Settlement Officer shall enhance the rent of such tenant to a rate which shall be two annas in the rupee less than the rate fixed by the Settlement Officer for land of a similar quality with similar advantages held by occupancy tenants in the same circle or tahsíl.

Period for which rent of such tenants to be fixed.

The rent of all privileged tenants shall be fixed for the term of settlement in the temporarily-settled districts, or, in the permanently-settled districts, for thirty years, at the rate thus determined; or, if no application have been made, at the rate hitherto paid by them.'

"The next section relates to tenants who have acquired a right of occupancy under section 6 of Act X of 1859. It is proposed that the rent payable by this class of tenants shall be determined by the Settlement Officer by the standard of the current rate of rent for similar land, or by the standard of the rent-rate mentioned by the Board of Revenue for the circle or tahsílí in which the holding of the tenant is situated; and that the rent thus fixed should not be liable to enhancement for fifteen years from that date, except—

'(1)—in cases in which land has been gained by alluvion after the date of such order;
(2)—in cases in which the area of the tenant's holding has been added to since the date of such order;
(3)—in cases in which the productive powers of the land have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant after the date of such order.'

"The power of determining the rent payable by tenants, which it is thus proposed to give to Settlement Officers, does not differ materially from that which they exercised under section 22 and the following sections of Regulation VII of 1822, before their repeal by Act X of 1859, and so far the proposed measure is merely a return to the practice heretofore existing at time of settlement and is certainly in accordance with the feelings of the people, who think that the time when the Government demand on the landlord is determined is the proper time for fixing the rents payable by the tenants, and that the officer who fixes the one should fix the other also; but as larger facilities for enhancing rents are given to landlords, it is thought right that tenants should be protected against fresh enhancement for a certain term, except under certain specified conditions, so that the benefit derived by landlords from the long leases granted by Government should be, though to a less degree, extended to tenants with a right of occupancy; and as the data on which a Settlement Officer will determine the rent payable by tenants are mainly identical with those on which he will fix the Government revenue-rate based on those rents; and as the standard of rent for comparison is made the current rate of rent for similar land, or the rent-rate sanctioned by the Board of Revenue for the circle or tahsíl, it is proposed that, in cases where the rent fixed by the Settlement Officer is disputed, the appeal shall lie, not to the Civil Court, but to the Revenue authorities, as it is believed that they are in a far better position to pronounce on the applicability of the rent imposed than the Civil Court can be, the issue being one, not of law, but of fact, and resting on considerations coming within the daily observation of Commissioners and the Board of Revenue, though but little familiar to the Civil Courts. The procedure recommended will also relieve both landlords and tenants, to some degree, from the heavy expense they are now put to in re-adjusting the rental of an estate to the revised jama fixed upon it by the Settlement Officer. The revised assessment of an estate is not based on the actual rental received at the time of revision by the landlord, but on the rental the estate would yield were the current rent prevailing in the neighbourhood for similar land enforced. This assumed rental is frequently higher than the actual rental obtained at the time; and, consequently, landlords are forced, in order to get their fair profit after payment of the Government demand, to enhance the rent of those of their tenants who may be holding at rents below the current rent prevailing for similar land in the neighbourhood. They can do this at present only by expensive suits under Act X of 1859, the cost of which is liable to be considerably increased should an appeal be made to the Civil Court, the result being, if the landlord is successful, that the tenants are burdened, not only with the payment of an enhanced rent, but with all the heavy costs of the suit in the Original and Appellate Courts. The procedure now recommended will, in a great measure, remedy this evil.

"The other changes recommended by the Government of the North-Western Provinces may be more briefly noticed. In chapter II, it is proposed to define clearly the position of the Collector of the District as the chief controlling authority in the Revenue Department, and also that all Collectors should be divided into two classes, the power to be exercised by each class being laid down in a subsequent chapter.

"In the chapter relating to the Partition of Estates, it is proposed to re-enact the present law in a more concise and simple form, the only alterations proposed being, first, that no partition shall be disallowed solely on the ground of incompactness, and, secondly, that—

'Rule as to land cultivated for twelve years by one sharer being included in estate assigned to another.

'No land that has been cultivated continuously for twelve years by any co-sharer shall be included in the estate assigned to another co-sharer, unless with the consent of the co-sharer who cultivates it, or unless the partition cannot otherwise be carried out.

'If such land be so included, and after partition such co-sharer continue to cultivate it, he shall be a tenant with right of occupancy in such land, and his rent shall be fixed by the Collector accordingly.'

"In the chapter on the Collection of the Land-revenue, the only alteration requiring notice is in the section which provides that—

Proprietor of estate attached, &c., holding seer land therein, to be recorded as privileged tenant.

'Any proprietor of an estate or portion of an estate that is attached, transferred, held under direct management, farmed, or sold under the provisions of this Act, who may hold seer land in such estate or portion of an estate, shall be recorded as a privileged tenant of such seer land; and the rent to be paid by him for such land shall be fixed by the Collector of the District under the provisions of section of the North-Western Provinces' Rent Act.'

"In the last chapter, dealing with Appeals, it is proposed that the order passed by a Commissioner on an appeal from the order of a Collector of the District, or of a Settlement Officer passed on a decision given by an officer subordinate to him, shall be final, a general power of revision in such cases being reserved to the Board of Revenue.

"I have now to move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. Should the Committee decide on adopting the alterations recommended by Sir William Muir, I would propose that they submit a preliminary report at an early date, and that the amended Bill be published in the Gazette for general information."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT then adjourned the debate.

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 28th January 1873.

An Act for regulating Ferries in British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate the public ferries within the Province of British Burma; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Ferries' Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

II.—Public Ferries.

Power to declare and establish public ferries.

2. The Chief Commissioner may declare what ferries within any part of British Burma shall be deemed public ferries, and the district in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate, and may at any time hereafter establish new ferries, where, in his opinion, they are needed, and may, from time to time, change the course of any public ferry, or discontinue any public ferry which he deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette.

Superintendence of ferries.

3. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as hereinafter provided, be vested in the Deputy Commissioner of the district in which they are situate, and he shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

Management may be vested in local Municipality;

4. The Chief Commissioner may direct that any public ferry situated within the limits of a town may be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town, and proceeds paid into Municipal Fund.

and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry shall be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town, and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

Letting ferry-tolls by auction.

5. The tolls of any public ferry may be put up to public auction for such term not exceeding three years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry, and may be called upon by the officer putting the tolls of the ferry up to auction to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer may deem fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason duly recorded in writing, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

Power to make rules.

6. Subject to the revision and confirmation of the Chief Commissioner, the Commissioner of each Division shall have power to make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division;

for regulating the time and manner in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries;

and for fixing the limits of the same:

and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, he shall have power (subject as aforesaid) to make additional rules—

for regulating the number and kinds of boats and their dimensions, and the number of crew for each boat, which the lessee of the tolls will be required to keep;

the hours during which he shall be bound to ply, and the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip;

and for the keeping of such boats continually in good condition for the safe conveyance of passengers and property.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

Private ferry not to ply within certain distance of public ferry without sanction.

7. No person shall, except with the sanction of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry-boat for the purpose of plying for hire within the limits of such public ferry.

Nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, or apply to boats which the Chief Commissioner expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

III.—Tolls.

Tolls.

8. Tolls, according to such rates as are from time to time fixed by the Chief Commissioner, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things carried by means of any public ferry:

Provided that the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section five, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Chief Commissioner.

Table of tolls.

9. The lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Deputy Commissioner or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

Tolls or rents to be credited to district fund.

10. All tolls or rents received under this Act shall, except in the cases provided for by section four, be credited to the district fund.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty for failing to affix, or for removing, &c., table of tolls.

11. Every lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of a public ferry, who neglects to affix and keep in good order and repair the table of tolls mentioned in section nine, or who wilfully removes, alters or defaces such table, or allows it to become illegible, or who fails to produce, on demand, the list of the tolls mentioned in section nine,

shall be liable to fine not exceeding twenty rupees.

Penalty for taking unauthorized toll,

12. Every such lessee or other person as aforesaid asking or taking other than the lawful toll, and for causing delay.

or without due cause delaying any person, animal or other thing,

shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees.

Cancelment of lease on breach of rules.

13. In the event of any breach by a lessee of the tolls of a ferry, of the rules for the management of such ferry made under section six,

the Deputy Commissioner may impose upon him a fine not exceeding twenty rupees, and in that event, or in the event of repeated liability to the penalties respectively provided by sections eleven and twelve,

the Deputy Commissioner may also, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, cancel the lease of the tolls of such ferry and make other arrangements for its management during the whole or any part of the term for which the tolls were let.

Penalties on passengers offending.

14. Every person crossing at any public ferry who refuses to pay the proper toll, or who, with intent of avoiding payment thereof, fraudulently or forcibly crosses any ferry-station without paying the toll, or who obstructs any toll-collector or lessee of the tolls of a public ferry, or any of his assistants, in any way in the execution of their duty under this Act, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees over and above the value of the damage, if any, which he has done.

Penalty for plying within public ferry-course without license.

15. Whoever conveys for hire any passenger, animal, cart, carriage or other vehicle, or any goods or merchandise, to or from any point within the limits assigned to each public ferry, in contravention of the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be liable to fine not exceeding fifty rupees.

Where the tolls of such ferry have been let under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the whole or any portion of any penalty realized under this section or section fourteen may, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, be paid to the lessee.

Officers by whom offences are triable.

16. All offences against this Act shall be heard and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates; and any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates trying offences under this section may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (if any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned, and shall order the amount of such value to be paid by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

3. The number of District (heretofore designated Zila) Courts to be established or continued under this Act, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no increase to the number of such Courts shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs.

4. The number of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs to be appointed under this Act for each District, shall be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, by the Local Government:

Provided that no addition to the number of such officers shall be made by such Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

Court's locality.

5. The place at which any Court under this Act shall be held may be fixed, and may from time to time be altered, in the case of a District Court or a Subordinate Judge's Court, by the Local Government, in the case of a District Munsif's Court, by the High Court.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Judge or Subordinate Judge.

6. Whenever the office of the Judge of a District Court (hereinafter called a 'District Judge') or of a Subordinate Judge under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Judges or Subordinate Judges under the provisions of section three or section four,

the Local Government shall appoint to the office such duly qualified person as it thinks proper.

Appointment to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

7. Whenever the office of a District Munsif under this Act is vacant, or whenever the Governor General in Council has sanctioned an addition to the number of District Munsifs under the provisions of section four,

the High Court shall appoint to the office such person as it thinks fit:

Provided that he possesses the qualifications for the time being required by the rules in this behalf which the High Court, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, are hereby empowered to make and alter.

Publication of appointments.

Every appointment made under this section shall be published in the same manner as appointments made by the Local Government.

Annulment of appointments.

The Local Government may, for good and sufficient reason, annul any appointment made under this section.

District Courts, Subordinate Judges, and District Munsifs.

8. The present Zila Courts, Principal Sadr Amins, and District Munsifs, shall be respectively the first "District Courts," "Subordinate Judges," and "District Munsifs" under this Act.

Seal of Court.

9. Every Court under this Act shall use a seal of such form and dimensions as are, for the time being, prescribed by the Local Government.

PART III.

JURISDICTION.

Local limits of jurisdiction of District Court or Subordinate Judge.

10. The Local Government shall fix, and may from time to time vary, the local limits of the jurisdiction of any District Judge or Subordinate Judge under this Act:

Local limits of jurisdiction of each of several Subordinate Judges.

Provided that, where more than one Subordinate Judge is appointed to any district, the District Judge may assign to each such Subordinate Judge the local limits of his particular jurisdiction within such district.

The present local limits of the jurisdiction of every Civil Court (other than the High Court) shall be deemed to have been fixed under this Act.

Local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

11. The High Court shall fix, and may from time to time modify, the local jurisdiction of District Munsifs.

Jurisdiction of District Judge or Subordinate Judge in original suits.

12. The jurisdiction of a District Judge or a Subordinate Judge extends, subject to the rules contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, to all original suits and proceedings of a civil nature.

Jurisdiction of District Munsif.

The jurisdiction of a District Munsif extends to all like suits and proceedings, not otherwise exempted from his cognizance, of which the amount or value of the subject-matter does not exceed two thousand five hundred rupees.

Appeals from decrees of District Courts.

13. Regular or special appeals, or appeals under Madras Regulation XI of 1832, section nine, shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie from the decrees and orders of a District Court to the High Court.

Appellate jurisdiction of District Court.

Appeals from the decrees and orders of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall, when such appeals are allowed by law, lie to the District Court, except when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds rupees five thousand, in which case the appeal shall lie to the High Court:

Appellate jurisdiction of Subordinate Judge.

Provided that, whenever a Subordinate Judge's Court is established in any District at a place remote from the station of the District Court, the High Court may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, direct that appeals from the decrees or orders of District Munsifs within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Subordinate Judge be preferred in the Court of the latter:

Disposal of appeal by District Judge.

Provided also, that the District Judge may remove to his own Court, from time to time, appeals so preferred, and dispose of them himself, or may, subject to the orders of the High Court, refer any appeals from the decrees and orders of District Munsifs, preferred in the District Court, to any Subordinate Judge within the District.

Valuation of suits for immovable property.

14. When the subject-matter of any suit or proceeding is land, a house or a garden, its value shall, for the purposes of the jurisdiction conferred by this Act, be fixed in manner provided by the Court Fees' Act, 1870, section seven, clause v.

Power to require witness or party to make oath or affirmation.

15. Every Court under this Act may require a witness or party to any suit or other proceeding pending in such Court to make such oath or affirmation as is prescribed by the law for the time being in force.

Law administered by Courts to Natives.

16. Where, in any suit or proceeding, it is necessary for any Court under this Act to decide any question regarding succession, inheritance, marriage or caste, or any religious usage or institution,

(a.) the Muhammadan law in cases where the parties are Muhammadans, and the Hindú law in cases where the parties are Hindús, or

(b.) any custom (if such there be) having the force of law and governing the parties or property concerned,

shall form the rule of decision, unless such law or custom has, by legislative enactment, been altered or abolished.

(c.) In cases where no specific rule exists, the Court shall act according to justice, equity and good conscience.

Judges not to try suits in which they are interested;

17. No District Judge, Subordinate Judge or District Munsif, shall try any suit to or in which he is a party or personally interested, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with, or arising out of, such suit.

nor to try appeals from decrees passed by them in other capacities.

No District Judge or Subordinate Judge, shall try any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself in another capacity.

Mode of disposing of such suits and appeals.

When any such suit, proceeding or appeal comes before any such officer, he shall report the circumstances to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate.

The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, section six.

Nothing in the last preceding clause of this section shall be deemed to affect the extraordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court.

PART IV.

MISCONDUCT OF JUDGES.

Suspension of Judge by Local Government.

18. Any District Judge, Subordinate Judge, or District Munsif may, for any misconduct, be suspended or removed by the Local Government.

Suspension of Subordinate Judge by High Court.

19. The High Court may, whenever it sees urgent necessity for so doing, suspend a Subordinate Judge pending the orders of the Local Government.

The High Court shall immediately report the circumstances of such suspension, and the Local Government shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

Suspension of District Munsif by High Court. Commission of Inquiry.

20. The High Court may suspend any District Munsif who is alleged to have misconducted himself, or may appoint a commission for enquiring into his alleged misconduct.

Exercise by High Court of powers conferred on Government by Act XXXVII of 1850.

The provisions of Act No. XXXVII of 1850 (for regulating enquiries into the behaviour of public servants) shall apply to enquiries under this section, the powers conferred by that Act on the Government being exercised by the High Court.

On receiving the report of the result of any such enquiry, the High Court may, if it think fit, remove the Munsif from office, or suspend him, or reduce him to a lower grade.

Suspension of District Munsif by District Judge.

21. The District Judge may suspend from office, whenever he sees urgent necessity for so doing, any District Munsif under his control.

Report to High Court.

Whenever a District Judge exercises the power conferred by this section, he shall forthwith send to the High Court a full report of the circumstances of the case, together with the evidence, if any, and the High Court shall make such order thereon as it thinks fit.

PART V.

MINISTERIAL OFFICERS.

Appointment, suspension or removal of Ministerial Officers of District Courts.

22. The Ministerial Officers of the District Courts shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed, by the Judges of such Courts, whose orders in such matters shall be final.

Appointment, &c., of Ministerial Officers of Subordinate Courts.

23. The Ministerial Officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall be appointed, and may be suspended or removed from office, by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, respectively, subject to the approval or confirmation of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction such Courts are situate.

Rules regulating such appointments.

24. Every appointment under this Part shall be made subject to such rules as the Local Government from time to time prescribes on this behalf.

Duties of Ministerial Officers.

Every person appointed under this Part shall perform such duties as may from time to time be imposed upon him by the presiding officer of the Court to which he belongs.

Present Ministerial Officers.

The present Ministerial Officers of the Courts under this Act shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Part.

PART VI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Temporary discharge of duties of District Judge.

25. In the event of the death of the District Judge, or of his being incapacitated by illness or otherwise for the performance of his duties, or of his absence from the station in which his Court is held,

the senior Subordinate Judge of the District shall, without interruption to his ordinary duties, assume charge of the District Judge's office, and shall discharge such of the current duties thereof as are connected with the filing of suits and appeals, the execution of processes and the like, and shall continue in charge of the office until the same is resumed or assumed by an officer duly appointed thereto.

District Judge may nominate to vacancy in office of District Munsif.

26. The District Judge, on the occurrence within his district of any vacancy in the office of District Munsif, may, pending the orders of the High Court thereon, appoint such person as he thinks fit to act in such office;

and he shall at once report to the High Court the occurrence of every such vacancy and such appointment.

District Judge to control Civil Courts of District.

27. Subject to the other provisions of this Act and to the rules for the time being in force and prescribed by the High Court in this behalf, the general control over all the Civil Courts under this Act in any District is vested in the District Judge.

Investiture of Subordinate Judge with Small Cause jurisdiction.

28. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest, within such local limits as it shall from time to time appoint, any Subordinate Judge with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the amount of rupees five hundred, and any District Munsif with the same jurisdiction up to the amount of rupees fifty,

Investiture of District Munsif with similar jurisdiction.

and may, by like notification, whenever it thinks fit, withdraw such jurisdiction from the Subordinate Judge or Munsif so invested.

Power to invest Small Cause Court Judge with powers of Subordinate Judge.

29. Section fifty-one of Act No. XI of 1865 shall be read as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words "Subordinate Judge" were substituted.

Amendment of Madras Act I of 1868.

Sections one, eight, nine, ten and twelve of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of civil and criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) shall be read as if, for the words 'Civil' and 'Zillah', used therein with reference to a Civil or Zillah Judge or Court, the word 'District' was substituted, and as if, for the words "Principal Sudder Ameen," the words 'Subordinate Judge' were substituted.

But save as provided in this section nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the said Madras Act.

Vacation.

30. The High Court may permit the Civil Courts under its control to adjourn from time to time for periods not exceeding in the aggregate two months in each year.

An Act to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the appointment of Municipal Committees in towns in the Panjáb, and for police, conservancy, local improvements, and education in such towns, and for the levying of rates and taxes therein; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends only to the territories under the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Acts.

2. Act No. XV of 1867 (to make better provision for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Panjáb, and for other purposes) and Act No. II of 1872 (to revive and continue the operation of Act XV of 1867) are repealed; and Act No. XXVI of 1850 (to enable improvements to be made in towns), is repealed so far as it affects the Panjáb.

Existing extensions and appointments.

But all extensions and appointments made, and all limits defined, under the said Act No. XV of 1867, shall be deemed to be, respectively, made and defined under this Act. And an extension of any particular provision of Act No. XV of 1867 shall be deemed to be an extension of the corresponding provision of this Act.

Existing assessments and bye-laws.

And all assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations of any kind, relating to matters provided for by this Act, which may heretofore have been made or approved by the Local Government, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act.

Former proceedings.

And all proceedings taken under any such assessments, bye-laws, rules and regulations shall be deemed to be as valid as if they had been taken under this Act.

"Committee" defined.

3. In this Act "Committee" means a Municipal Committee under this Act.

Power to extend Act to towns.

4. The Local Government may, by notification published in the Panjáb Gazette, declare its intention to extend this Act, or any of its provisions, to any town in the said territories.

Objection to such extension.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such extension may, within six weeks from the said publication, send his objection in writing to the Secretary to the Local Government, and the Local Government shall take such objection into consideration.

Procedure thereon.

When six weeks from the said publication have expired, the Local Government, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been so sent in) if, in its opinion, they are insufficient, may, by like notification, effect the proposed extension.

Power to define limits of towns to which Act extends.

5. For the purposes of this Act, the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the Panjáb Gazette, declare what shall be deemed to be a town for the purposes of this Act, and define the limits of any town to which this Act has been extended.

II.—Appointment, Duties and Powers of Committees.

Appointment of Committee.

6. In every town to which this Act is extended, the Local Government shall appoint, or cause to be appointed, a Committee consisting of not less than five members.

Such members may be appointed as the Local Government from time to time directs, either ex-officio, or by nomination, or by election, or some by one and some by any other of such methods:

Provided that (except with the approval of the Governor General in Council) not less than two-fifths of the members of a Committee shall be persons other than salaried officers of Government.

The Local Government may—

(a) from time to time remove any of the members of any Committee, add to their number, and fill up vacancies occurring among them;

(b) determine the time and manner of the election of those members whom it may direct to be appointed by election, and the persons by whom they shall be elected, and generally make such rules as it thinks fit for regulating such election;

(c) appoint the President and Vice-President, or either of them, of any Committee, or authorise any Committee to appoint, by election from their number, such President, or Vice-President, or both.

No appointment under this section, other than the appointment by election of a Vice-President, shall be valid unless and until it is notified in the Panjáb Gazette.

Power to levy rates or make assessments.

7. Subject to any general rules or special orders which the Governor General in Council may from time to time make in this behalf, every Committee intending to impose taxes for the purposes of this Act shall, from time to time, give public notice of such intention, and shall in such notice define the persons or property within the town to be taxed for the purposes of this Act, and the amount or rate of the taxes to be imposed hereunder.

Objection to rates.

Any inhabitant of such town objecting to such notice may, within a fortnight from the date of the said notice, send his objection in writing to the President of the Committee, and the Committee shall take such objection into consideration and report their opinion thereon to the Local Government.

Procedure thereon.

When a fortnight from the date of the said notice has expired, if no such objections have been sent as aforesaid, or (where such objections have been sent in) if, in the opinion of the Committee, they are insufficient, the Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to be notified in the Panjáb Gazette, define the persons or property and the amount or rate of the taxes aforesaid, and may then impose such taxes accordingly.

Power to make rules for collection and application of rates.

8. The Local Government may from time to time make rules—

as to the persons by whom, and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed, and for the collection of such taxes;

and for the safety and due application of them when collected;

and for the rendering and publishing of such estimates and accounts relating to the expenditure of the Municipal Funds, in such form as it may think fit.

No tax shall be collected under this Act, until the assessment thereof has been confirmed by the persons and in manner for the time being prescribed by such rules.

Recovery of rates.

9. Rates and arrears of rates imposed under this Act may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

Municipal Fund.

10. All sums received by the Committee of any town to which this Act extends, and all fines levied under this Act, shall constitute a fund, which shall be called the Municipal Fund of such town, and shall, together with all property which may become vested in such Committee, be under their control, and shall be applied by them as trustees for the purposes of this Act.

Duties and powers of Committees.

11. Every Committee, so far as the Municipal Fund at their disposal permits, shall, after providing out of such Fund for a police establishment in manner hereinafter mentioned, keep the public streets, roads, drains, tanks and water-courses of the town for which they are appointed clean and repaired;

and, generally, may do all acts and things necessary for the construction, repair and maintenance of local public works of general utility;

and may also make provision, by the establishment of new schools or the aiding of already existing schools or otherwise, for the promotion of education;

and may also make provision for promoting the public health, safety, comfort and convenience.

Provision for police.

12. Every Committee shall set apart out of the Municipal Fund such sum as the Local Government from time to time requires for the maintenance of the police establishment in the town for which the Committee is appointed.

Power to make rules as to business and officers.

13. Every Committee may make rules for regulating—

the time and place of their meeting;

the conduct of their business;

the division of duties among the members of the Committee;

the duties, salaries, appointment, suspension and removal of the officers and servants of the Committee;

and other similar matters.

Power to make bye-laws.

14. Any Committee may make bye-laws—

(a) for defining, prohibiting and abating nuisances which are not public or common nuisances under the Indian Penal Code, or under Act No. V of 1861 (for the regulation of Police):

(b) for defining the cases, manner and times in and at which the officers of the Committee may enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances:

(c) for securing a proper registration of births and deaths;

(d) and for carrying out all or any of the purposes of this Act.

The Committee may, from time to time, repeal, alter or add to any bye-laws made under this section.

Bye-laws to be confirmed and published.

15. No bye-law, and no alteration or repeal of or addition to a bye-law, shall have effect until it has been confirmed by the Local Government.

All bye-laws made under this Act, and all rules made under section thirteen, and all alterations and repeals of and additions to such bye-laws and rules shall, before coming into force, be published for such length of time, and in such manner, as the Local Government from time to time directs.

Power to enter on private property.

16. The officers of the Committee shall have power to enter upon private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances when the Committee shall, under section fourteen, clause (b), have made bye-laws regulating the exercise of such power.

Power to suspend or limit powers of Committees.

17. The Local Government may, by order, suspend or limit all or any of the powers of any Committee, and may also cancel any of their proceedings, rules or bye-laws, and remit or reduce any tax which they have imposed.

III.—Suits by and against Committees.

Suits by and against Committees.

18. Every Committee shall sue and be sued in the name of their President.

Contracts of Committees.

Every contract made on behalf of any Committee in respect of any sum or property exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value, shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the President, or Vice-President (if any) and at least two other members of the Committee.

No contract, unless so executed, shall be binding on the Committee on whose behalf it is made.

Liability of members of Committees.

No member of a Committee shall be personally liable for any contract made or expense incurred by or on behalf of the Committee; but the funds from time to time in the hands of the Committee shall be liable for, and chargeable with, contracts duly made as aforesaid.

Every member of a Committee shall be liable for any misapplication of money entrusted to the Committee, to which he has been a party, or which happens through, or is facilitated by, his neglect of his duty;

and he shall be liable to be sued for the same in such Court as the Local Government directs as for money due to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Bar of suit in absence of one month's notice of cause of suit.

19. No suit shall be brought against a Committee or any of their officers, or any person acting under their direction, for anything done, or purporting to be done, under this Act, until the expiration of one month next after notice in writing has been delivered or left at the office of the Committee, or at the place of abode of such person, stating the cause of suit and the name and place of abode of the intended plaintiff.

Unless such notice be proved, the Court shall find for the defendant.

Every such suit shall be commenced within three months next after the accrual of the right to sue, and not afterwards.

And if any person to whom any such notice of suit is given shall, before suit brought, tender sufficient amends to the plaintiff, such plaintiff shall not recover.

IV.—Penalties.

Penalty on member or servant of Committee being interested in contracts made with Committee.

20. No member or servant of a Committee shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract made with the Committee, and if any such person be so interested, he shall thereby become incapable of continuing in office or in employment as such member or servant, and shall be liable to a fine of five hundred rupees:

Provided that no person, by being a shareholder in, or member of, any incorporated or registered Company, shall be disqualified from acting as a member or servant of a Committee by reason of any contract entered into between such Company and the Committee.

Nevertheless it shall not be lawful for such shareholder or member to act as a member of the Committee in any matter relating to any contract entered into between the Committee and such Company.

Penalty for infringement of bye-laws or non-payment of fines.

21. Whoever infringes any bye-law made and confirmed as directed in this Act, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, and, in the case of a continuing infringement, to a fine not exceeding five rupees for every day after notice from the Committee of such infringement.

In default of payment of any fine imposed under this section, the defaulter shall be liable to simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding eight days.

Prosecutions.

22. Prosecutions under this Act for infringements of bye-laws may be instituted before any Magistrate by the Committee, or by any person authorised by the Committee in this behalf.

Recovery of fines.

23. Fines imposed under this Act may be recovered in manner provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XXVI of 1855.

2. Act No. XXVI of 1855 (to facilitate the payment of small deposits in Government Savings' Banks to the representatives of deceased depositors) is hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"Depositor" means a person by whom, or on whose behalf, money has been heretofore, or shall be hereafter, deposited in a Government Savings' Bank, and "deposit" means money so deposited:

"Depositor."

"Deposit."

"Secretary" includes every person empowered to manage a Government Savings' Bank;

"Secretary."

and "Minor" means a person who has not completed the age of eighteen years.

"Minor."

Deposits belonging to the Estates of deceased Persons.

Payment on death of depositor.

4. If a depositor dies, leaving in a Government Savings' Bank a sum of money not exceeding one thousand rupees, and if probate of his will or letters of administration of his estate, or a certificate granted under Act No. XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), is not produced to the Secretary of such Bank within three months of the death of the said depositor, the Secretary of such Bank may pay the said sum of money to any person appearing to him to be entitled to receive it, or to administer the estate of the deceased.

Payment to be a discharge.

5. Such payment shall be a full discharge from all further liability in respect of the money so paid:

Saving of right of executor.

But nothing herein contained precludes any executor or administrator, or other representative of the deceased, from recovering from the person receiving the same the amount remaining in his hands after deducting the amount of all debts or other demands lawfully paid or discharged by him in due course of administration.

Saving of right of creditor.

And any creditor or claimant against the estate of the deceased may recover his debt or claim out of the money paid under this Act, or the said Act No. XXVI of 1855, to any person, and remaining in his hands unadministered, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the latter had obtained letters of administration of the estate of the deceased.

Security for due administration.

6. The Secretary of any such Bank may take such security as he thinks necessary from any person to whom he pays any money under section four for the due administration of the money so paid, and he may assign the said security to any person interested in such administration.

Power to administer oath.

7. For the purpose of ascertaining the right of the person claiming to be entitled as aforesaid, the Secretary of any such Bank may take evidence on oath or affirmation according to the law for the time being relating to oaths and affirmations.

Penalty for false statements.

Any person who, upon such oath or affirmation, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of an offence under section one hundred and ninety-three of the Indian Penal Code.

Deposit when excluded in computing Court Fees.

8. Where the amount of the deposit belonging to the estate of a deceased depositor does not exceed one thousand rupees, such amount shall be excluded in computing the fee chargeable, under the Court Fees' Act, 1870, on the probate, or letters of administration, or certificate (if any), granted in respect of his property:

Provided that the person claiming such probate or letters or certificate shall exhibit to the Court authorised to grant the same a certificate of the amount of the deposit in any Government Savings' Bank belonging to the estate of the deceased. Such certificate shall be signed by the Secretary of such Bank, and the Court shall receive it as evidence of the said amount.

Act not to apply to deposits belonging to estates of European soldiers or deserters.

9. Nothing hereinbefore contained applies to money belonging to the estate of any European officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier dying in Her Majesty's service in India, or of any European who, at the time of his death, was a deserter from the said service.

Deposits belonging to Minors.

Payment of deposits to minor or guardian.

10. Any deposit made by, or on behalf of, any minor, may be paid to him personally, if he made the deposit, or to his guardian for his use, if the deposit was made by any person other than the minor, together with the interest accrued thereon.

The receipt of any minor or guardian, for money paid to him under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Legalization of like payments heretofore made.

11. All payments of deposits heretofore made to minors or their guardians by any Secretary of a Government Savings' Bank shall be deemed to have been made in accordance with law.

Deposits belonging to Lunatics.

Payment of deposits belonging to lunatics.

12. If any depositor becomes insane or otherwise incapable of managing his affairs, and if such insanity or incapacity is proved to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Bank in which his deposit may be, such Secretary may, from time to time, make payments out of the deposit to any proper person, and the receipt of such person, for money paid under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Where a Committee or Manager of the depositor's estate has been duly appointed, nothing in this section authorises payments to any person other than such Committee or Manager.

Deposits made by Married Women.

Payment of married women's deposits.

13. Any deposit made by or on behalf of a married woman, or by or on behalf of a woman who afterwards marries, may be paid to her, whether or not the Indian Succession Act.

1865, section four, applies to her marriage; and her receipt for money paid to her under this section shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Rules.

Rules regulating certificates under section 8 and payments under section 10, 12 or 13.

14. All certificates under section eight, and all payments under section ten, section twelve or section thirteen, shall be respectively granted and made by the Secretary of the Bank, subject to such rules consistent with this Act as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, prescribe.

[Second Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 28th January 1873, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. VI OF 1873.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the transhipment of goods imported by steamer; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Transhipment of Goods Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, and to such other British Indian ports as the Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XX of 1867.

2. Act No. XX of 1867 (to authorize the transhipment without payment of duty of goods imported into Calcutta, Madras and Bombay by Steamers) is repealed. But all rules, rates and regulations prescribed under the said Act shall be deemed to have been prescribed under this Act.

Power to permit transhipment without payment of duty.

3. Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, the chief officer of customs of every port to which this Act extends for the time being may, on application of any person interested as owner, agent, consignee or otherwise in any goods imported by steamer into such port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of duty at the port of transhipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the port of destination:

Proviso.

Provided that such goods have been specially and distinctly manifested or declared at the time of import as for transhipment to some other British Indian or foreign port.

Rules regulating exercise of power.

4. The power conferred by section three shall be exercised subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe by notification in the official Gazette.

Levy of transhipment fee.

5. A transhipment fee on each bale or package of any goods or class of goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rates and under such regulations as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time prescribes by notification in the official Gazette.

Power to prohibit transhipment.

6. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by order notified in the Gazette of India, prohibit the transhipment, at any specified port or at all ports, of any specified class of goods, or prescribe any special mode of transhipping any specified class of goods, and may, by like notification, cancel such order.

Duty on opium re-exported by sea.

7. Opium imported by sea into any British Indian port may, if the Local Government think fit, but not otherwise, be re-exported by sea from the same port on payment of a duty equal in amount to the fee to which it would have been liable if it had been transhipped at such port.

Act to be read as part of Act VI of 1863.

8. This Act shall be read as part of the Consolidated Customs Act, and shall not be construed as in any respect limiting the power of the customs officers to levy duty or to require such bonds or other securities as are authorized by the same Act.

A Bill to consolidate the law relating to Judicial Oaths, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths, affirmations and declarations, and to repeal the law relating to official oaths, affirmations and declarations ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Oaths Act, 1873 :"

Local extent.

It extends to the whole of British India, and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty ;

And it shall come into force on the first day of April 1873.

Commencement.

2. The enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed are repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof.

Repeal of enactments.

3. Nothing herein contained applies to proceedings before Courts Martial, or to oaths, affirmations or declarations prescribed by any law which, under the provisions of the Indian Councils' Act, 1861, the Governor General in Council has not power to repeal.

Saving of certain oaths and affirmations.

II.—Persons authorized to administer Judicial Oaths and Affirmations.

4. The following persons and Courts are authorized to administer, by themselves or by an officer empowered by them in this behalf, oaths and affirmations in discharge of the duties imposed upon them respectively by law :—

Authority to administer oaths and affirmations.

(a). Judges, Justices of the Peace, Magistrates, Coroners, Officers, Commissioners, Arbitrators, Military Courts of Request, and all other persons and Courts having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence;

(b.) The Commanding Officer of any military station occupied by troops in the service of Her Majesty: provided

(1) that the oath or affirmation be administered within the limits of the station, and

(2) that the oath or affirmation be such as a Justice of the Peace is competent to administer in British India.

III.—Persons by whom Oaths or Affirmations must be made.

5. Oaths or affirmations shall be made by the following persons :—

Oath or affirmation to be made by—

(a.) witnesses in Courts, whether Civil, Military, Criminal or Revenue:

witnesses:

(b) witnesses before Commissioners, Arbitrators, and all other persons having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence:

(c) complainants in Criminal Courts:

complainants:

(d.) jurors in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.

jurors in Presidency towns.

Nothing hereinbefore contained shall render it lawful to administer an oath or affirmation to an accused person.

IV.—Forms of Oaths and Affirmations.

6. In the case of a witness the form of oath shall be as follows :—

Forms for witnesses or complainants.

"You swear that you shall true answer make to all such questions as shall be asked you, without favour or affection to either party, and therein you shall speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God :"

in the case of a complainant the form of oath shall be as follows :—

"You swear that what you shall state is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God :"

and in the case of a witness or complainant the form of affirmation shall be as follows :—

"I affirm that what I shall state is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

7. In the case of a jurymen the form of oath shall be as follows :—

Form for juors.

"You swear that you shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and the prisoner at the bar whom you shall have in charge, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. So help you God :"

and the form of affirmation shall be as follows :—

"You affirm that you shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and the prisoner at the bar whom you shall have in charge, and a true verdict give according to the evidence."

8. Where the witness, complainant or juryman is a Hindú or Muhammadan, Affirmation by Natives or by persons who object to oath.

or has an objection to making an oath,

he shall, instead of making an oath, make the affirmation hereinbefore prescribed for a witness, complainant or juryman, as the case may be.

In every other case the witness, complainant or juryman shall make the oath so prescribed.

9. If any party to, or witness in, any judicial proceeding offers to give evidence on oath or solemn affirmation in any form common amongst, or held binding by, persons of the race or persuasion to which he belongs, and not repugnant to justice or decency, and not purporting to affect any third person, the Court may, if it thinks fit, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, tender such oath or affirmation to him.

Power of Court to tender certain oaths.

10. If any party to any proceeding offers to be bound by any such oath or solemn affirmation as is mentioned in section nine, if such oath or affirmation is made by the other party to, or by any witness in, such proceeding, the Court may, if it thinks fit, ask such party or witness whether or not he will make the oath or affirmation.

Court may ask party or witness whether he will make oath proposed by opposite party.

11. If such party or witness agrees to make such oath or affirmation, the Court may proceed to administer it, or if it is of such a nature that it may be more conveniently made out of Court, the Court may issue a Commission to any person to administer it, and authorize such person to take the evidence of the person to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.

Administration of oath if accepted.

Evidence conclusive as against person offering to be bound.

12. The evidence so given shall, as against the person who offered to be bound as aforesaid, be conclusive proof of the matter stated.

Procedure in case of refusal to make oath.

13. If the party or witness refuses to make the oath or solemn affirmation, he shall not be compelled to make it, but the Court shall record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath or affirmation proposed, the facts that he was asked whether he would make it, and that he refused it, together with any reason which he may assign for his refusal.

Forms for persons making affidavit.

14. In the case of an affidavit the form of oath shall be as follows:—

(a) by one deponent.

"Is that your name and handwriting?"

"You do swear that the contents of this your affidavit are true. So help you God."

(b) by two or more deponents.

To each deponent.

"Is that your name and handwriting?"

To all the deponents.

"You do severally swear that the contents of this your affidavit are true. So help you God," and the form of affirmation shall be as follows:—

"I affirm that the signature to this is my name and handwriting, and that the contents of this affidavit are true."

Proceedings and evidence not invalidated by omission of oath or irregularity.

15. No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, no substitution of any one for any other of them, and no irregularity whatever in the form in which any one of them is administered, shall invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence whatever, in or in respect of which such omission, substitution or irregularity took place.

V.—Official Oaths.

Judges, &c., not to be required to make official oath or affirmation.

16. No Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other officer shall, before entering on the execution of the duties of his office, be required to make any oath, or to make or subscribe any affirmation or declaration, that he will faithfully discharge such duties, or to the like effect.

Bombay Regulation XVIII of 1830.	A Regulation providing for the appointment of a Joint Judge within the Zillah of Poona.	Section two.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is two-fold—to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths and affirmations, and to repeal the laws requiring declarations to be made by Judges, Magistrates, &c., before entering on their official duties. The Bill, if it become law, will replace twenty-seven enactments.

The Bill does not apply to proceedings before Courts-Martial, or to oaths prescribed by laws which the Governor General in Council has not the power to repeal.

Incidentally, the Bill will remove the doubt which has been raised as to the power of the Courts in certain parts of India to administer oaths and affirmations.

Minute by Sir R. Temple, dated 18th October 1872.

OBSERVATIONS.—In July 1867, Mr. Davies, the Officiating Chief Commissioner of Oudh, forwarded a Minute by his predecessor, Mr. J. Strachey, dated the 29th June of that year, on the subject of irrigation in Oudh, modifying the opinions expressed in a previous communication, and written after a better acquaintance with the Province.

In forwarding the Minute, the Officiating Chief Commissioner remarked that the Province of Oudh could not be considered exempt from all liability to prolonged drought, as the records of the past showed that in former days when that Province was under Native rule, large remissions of revenue had to be made on this account, adding at the same time that "he entirely concurred in Mr. Strachey's recommendation for a survey being undertaken."

2. The Memorandum was as follows :—

"(1).—In September last, in reply to an enquiry made by the Government of India regarding the necessity of constructing irrigation works in Oudh, I stated through the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner in the Public Works Department that no scheme for such works had been brought forward, or at that time suggested itself, which would satisfy the two conditions which had been laid down by the Government of India. The Government subsequently concurred in this opinion. But in reporting upon this subject, I reserved to myself full discretion to re-open the question when I should have become better acquainted with the wants of the Province from personal observation, for at that time I had been only a few months in Oudh. During the last cold season I travelled through the greater part of the Province, and I was thus able to acquire some knowledge of the physical character of the country, and of the requirements of its agriculture. During my tour, I had also the opportunity of correcting my views by help of the valuable experience and knowledge of the local officers. I now desire to submit to the Government of India the conclusions to which I have been led.

"(2).—In the report submitted to the Government of India in September last, an opinion was expressed that Irrigation Works could not be regarded as strictly necessary in Oudh in the sense that they would supply an essential protection against famine. This view still appears to me to be correct. Famine and excessive drought have been, so far as I can ascertain, unknown, and I think it likely that the Province is protected by its physical character from any extreme danger of this kind, though it is impossible to assert with any confidence that such a calamity may not occur.

"(3).—Liability to famine in any given Province is, however, only one of the many considerations on which the action of Government in giving means of irrigation should depend. Oudh, though itself not apparently liable to famine, is surrounded by districts in which seasons of drought and scarcity are known to recur with great severity. In such seasons, those districts find in Oudh a most important source for supplying the deficiency of food. An example of this occurred last year, when very large exportations of grain took place in consequence of the scarcity in Behar. These exportations were carried on to so great an extent that they produced a great rise of prices in Oudh itself, thus extending as it were, in an artificial and secondary manner, to the non-agricultural population of the Province, the scarcity which originally affected Behar alone. An increase in the quantity of food produced in Oudh may thus, in years of general drought, be important, not only to the neighbouring Provinces which we know to be directly liable to the worst effects of famine, but also through these reflex actions to the population of this Province, although there may have been no failure of the crops in Oudh itself.

"(4).—The immediate and necessary result of systematic irrigation, even in a country naturally so well watered in Oudh, will be a large increase of produce. Although Oudh has been spoken of as not likely to suffer from famine, its crops are, of course, susceptible to the vicissitudes of the seasons like those of any other country, and in seasons of general drought in Upper India or Northern Bengal, it is almost certain that there will be a deficiency of rain in Oudh, and a corresponding falling off in outturn of the harvest; therefore, just when the necessity for help is greatest, the power of giving it is least.

"(5).—These observations, it will be seen, refer only to the effect of irrigation in times of scarcity, and to its value in palliating famine; but any general permanent increase to the agricultural produce of the country must ordinarily be accompanied by a corresponding growth of wealth and advance in progress. I have said ordinarily, because those benefits could not be fully realized unless the increase of agricultural produce were accompanied by a corresponding increase in the power of bringing that produce to a profitable market. The construction of canals in Oudh would not only give this increase of produce, but in all probability would supply at the same time an important means of carrying that produce at the cheapest possible rates to its markets. The two great rivers which pass through Oudh, the railways which are projected, the irrigation canals with such navigable extensions of them, and improvements of the minor rivers as are likely to be possible, and a proper system of cross-roads, will provide for Oudh far better means of transport than most Provinces possess.

"The question of improving communications is closely connected with the question of irrigation, and I believe that there is no subject more deserving attention at the present time than the establishment under the Local Governments of a system of road construction and management on a broad basis, susceptible of those developments which the future will assuredly require.

"(6).—Bearing these general principles in mind, I proceed to state briefly the measures which I am disposed to recommend for the consideration of the Government of India.

"(7).—If a line be drawn through Oudh from Cawnpoor to Fyzabad, it will divide that part of the Province which lies between the Ganges and the Gogra and Sardah into two parts. The north-westerly portion, comprising the greater part of the divisions of Seetapoor and Lucknow, and part of Fyzabad, has generally the characteristics of Rohilkhund, while similar in climate to the North Western Provinces, it has a decidedly better rain-fall and more copious natural supply of water. A considerable area is suitable for rice cultivation. The land is, however, mainly adapted for wheat and other rubbee crops, and the soil being generally light, well irrigation, although commonly practised, is not so cheap or easy as it is in the eastern parts of the Province, where the water is nearer the surface and the soil more suited to the formation and maintenance of kutcha wells. For this north-western part of Oudh I conceive that canal irrigation would be highly beneficial, and all that is required could, I believe, be readily supplied by means of a canal drawn from the Sardah near Burmdeo at the foot of the hills. Such a canal has often been proposed, and the Engineers appear to consider that it would be remarkably easy of construction, and consequently likely to be little expensive.

"There seems no doubt that this canal could also be made to supply water to eastern Rohilkhund, which would greatly benefit thereby. So far as I can judge, the probable supply of water in the Sardah, which I believe is little, if at all, smaller than the Ganges at Hurdwar, would be found adequate for all the districts referred to. It is needless for me to attempt to discuss the directions that such a canal and its branches should take. These are questions for the Engineers. It may, I believe, be safely said that within the limits which I have indicated wherever, on engineering consideration, it was found best to take the canals there the water could be usefully applied, and with reasonable expectation of a remunerative return to the Government on the moderate outlay likely to be necessary.

"(8).—In that portion of Oudh which lies to the south-east of the line which I have supposed to be drawn from Cawnpoor to Fyzabad, and which comprises the division of Roy Bareilly and part of Fyzabad, the present facilities for irrigation are great, owing to the proximity to the surface of the level of springs, and the great number of jheels and rivers. From this and the character of the soil, the cost of constructing wells and of raising the water is very small.

"(9).—In the north of the Gogra and Sardah in the Baraitch and Gondah Districts, there is a considerable area of high ground south of the Raptee, in which canal irrigation would probably be valuable. The greater part, however, of this tract is low-lying with the water near the surface, and it is traversed by streams which are already to some extent utilized. North of the Raptee in the Gondah District, where rice is the chief product, I am informed that the cultivators have also made some use of the hill streams for irrigation.

"(10).—In all these portions of Oudh to which I have last referred, and which would not be for the most part within reach of the proposed canal from the Sardah, the necessity for present interference on the part of Government does not seem pressing. Such requirements as these districts really have may be better ascertained, and more satisfactorily dealt with at a later period; and although their wants are not great, I think it probable that much might be done to utilize still further the great facilities for irrigation which already exist.

"(11).—My present recommendations are these: that the necessary steps should be taken for carrying out such surveys as will place before the Government in a practical shape the probable cost of a system of canals for north-western Oudh and for eastern Rohilkhund, such as that which has now been suggested. At the same time enquiries should be instituted as to the probable fiscal results of such an undertaking, and I confidently anticipate that they would lead the Government to determine to carry it into execution. If this anticipation should be fulfilled, the formation of a local Irrigation Department will necessarily follow, and further enquiries regarding the improvement of the means of irrigation in other portions of the Province can then be conveniently undertaken."

3. After a due consideration of the views expressed in the foregoing Memorandum, the Government of India in its letter No. 122 I of 10th August 1867, to the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, expressed its approval, and Captain Forbes, R. E., was subsequently deputed to carry out the necessary surveys and enquiries.

4. The decision arrived at was reported to the Secretary of State in Despatch No. 131, dated the 14th August 1867; His Grace, in reply, observed that he should "look forward with interest to the receipt of the report of the Officer deputed to make the necessary surveys."

5. The views of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, with respect to suggestions made by the Inspector General of Irrigation (Colonel Strachey), to the effect that 500 cubic feet per second should be allotted from the Sardah Canal for the irrigation of the Shahjehanpoor District, and that preliminary investigations for the irrigation of the Benares Division, by means of water taken somewhere from the Gogra about Byramghât, should be conducted by Captain Forbes, were received in August 1868. These suggestions met with the concurrence of the Lieutenant Governor, who added that he was "very desirous that enquiries and surveys in respect of the irrigation of the Benares Division should be made during the coming season, as the districts which it comprises are believed to be even more subject to the vicissitudes of seasons, and possessed of less facilities for well irrigation than those in the Province of Oudh."

6. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh was then informed that the foregoing views of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces were assented to by the Government of India, and might be carried out.

7. In March 1869, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh forwarded a preliminary Report by Captain Forbes on a projected canal, to provide for the irrigation of the extensive tract of country comprised between the Sardah and the Gogra on the one side, and the Deoha and Ganges on the other. The whole area to which water would be supplied being 19,000 square miles, at an estimated cost of 484¾ lakhs of rupees.

In a letter from the Government of the North-Western Provinces, which accompanied the Report, it was said—"where the spring level is already high, and irrigation easily accomplished from kutcha wells, the necessity for canal irrigation is little felt, and further its effect must be eventually to overload the country with water in a manner prejudicial, as has been found elsewhere, both to agriculture and to health. If, therefore, the area for canal irrigation in that Province could be restricted by exclusion of such tracts, the volume to be taken from the Sardah and Gogra might be largely decreased, and the cost of the undertaking proportionately diminished."

8. On the 28th December 1869, the Secretary of State, in addressing the Government of India on the subject of this project, remarked as follows:—

"In modifying the project to meet the reduced supply of water, your Government, in accordance with the principle properly laid down in para. 8 of Colonel Strachey's letter of the 9th October last, will see that provisions shall be made in the first instance only for those districts which have no existing facilities for irrigation," and concludes para. 8—"with these modifications and omissions, I trust that the project to be eventually submitted to me will exhibit a definite prospect of an adequate return derived entirely from water-rent and miscellaneous items of canal revenue."

9. In September 1870, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh submitted a detailed project prepared in accordance with the general report mentioned in para. 7. It was estimated roundly to cost 620 lakhs of rupees, or about 6½th millions sterling, or 135¼ lakhs in excess of the original sketch estimate. It provided for the irrigation of 2,384,750 acres by a volume of 10,000 cubic feet per second. Captain Forbes' report, however, mentioned that the project was so framed that it could be curtailed according to the extent to which it might be expedient to supply irrigation, and the Chief Commissioner was not sanguine of the financial success of the complete scheme.

10. The death of Colonel Anderson and the delay which took place in appointing an Officer to succeed him as Inspector General of Irrigation led to delay in discussing the project; and the discussion did not take place till March 1871. After Captain Forbes had discussed the project personally with Colonel Rundall, both Officers agreed to recommend that the scope should be reduced to nearly its original scale, viz., the provision of irrigation to the north-western portion of Oudh and the districts of the North-Western Provinces adjoining, and it was determined that for the present it should not be carried south of Lucknow and Fyzabad. Captain Forbes was then employed till October 1871 in working the reduced project out under the immediate orders of Colonel Rundall.

11. The project in its modified form was calculated to irrigate only the higher lands in the northern and drier districts of Oudh where the spring water is generally not nearer than from 20 to 40 feet from the surface, and in parts up to 80 feet or more, at a cost of 2½ to 3 millions sterling, and to yield a calculated net return amounting to 7¾ per cent. on the capital outlay. The project had now been worked at in many different forms with great ability, care and patience by Major Forbes, and the project, in its reduced form was recommended on the 28th October 1871 for approval to the Secretary of State. This scheme was sanctioned by the Secretary of State in January 1872. The necessary instructions for the preparation and completion of the designs and estimates for the various works were at once issued. The collection of materials, and the commencement of operations at the head-works, were authorized at the same time.

12. The organization of the Executive Divisions had just been sanctioned, and the work was about to be actively commenced, when the Officiating Chief Commissioner of Oudh submitted a memorial from the Talookdars of Oudh objecting to the construction of the canal. In submitting these papers, Sir George Couper remarked that "the objections of the Talookdars may be classed broadly under the three following heads :—

1st.—The canal is not wanted.
2nd.—It will bring disease in its train.
3rd.—It will not pay.

"With regard to the first point, it is universally admitted that canals are not so urgent a want in Oudh as in many other parts of India. Even the projector of the Sardah Canal estimates that only two-thirds of the area, which would be watered in the North-Western Provinces, will be watered in Oudh. Sir Charles Wingfield, up to the time he left the Province, was of opinion that, although canals might in the abstract be good things, they were not wanted in Oudh, and this was the opinion of the great majority of the local officers who were consulted on the subject in 1866. Sir John Strachey, who was then Chief Commissioner, was apparently of the same mind, for in para. 5 of the letter to the Government of India in the Department Public Works, No. 1139, dated 8th September 1866, he said: 'Had the want of Irrigation Works been felt at any time in this Province, the subject would certainly have been brought forward, and the late Chief Commissioner (Sir Charles Wingfield) who knew the whole Province intimately from personal examination would have left some opinion on record.' But no correspondence of former District Officers on this subject is forthcoming, nor do the Officers now in charge of the Divisions and Districts advocate the necessity for canals."

"And General Barrow, in his letter No. 1405, dated 13th September 1870, said, it might fairly be doubted even after the canal has been fairly started, whether it will not require one or two seasons of drought to induce the cultivators to abandon the present modes of cultivation and adopt canal water instead."

"Sir George Couper is not aware that there has been any change in the views of local officers with regard to this project, since the above opinions were recorded. And he thinks it certainly may be said that the proposed Sardah Canal is not a crying want in Oudh. In the districts through which it is to run, population is more wanted than water. In no discussion on the means of alleviating the condition of the peasantry has a canal been cited as the cure for any existing evil. The announcement that the project has been sanctioned has, the Officiating Chief Commissioner believes, been nowhere received with enthusiasm by the officers through whose districts it will run, while the way in which the influential land-holders regard it is shown in the accompanying memorial. The masses of the cultivators are not in a position to form an intelligent opinion on this subject, and it may confidently be affirmed that they have not done so. The fact stated by Major Forbes that they are willing enough to work on the canal in consideration of higher pay which he offers, is by no means a satisfactory proof that they regard the project as in itself a good one. The Officiating Chief Commissioner thinks it may safely be held that if the whole future could be placed before the actual cultivators, they would forego the offered advantages, and be content to stand in their present lot, if by so doing they could escape the petty oppression and annoyances which always follow the introduction of a new department, for the proper working arrangements of which a host of native underlings are indispensable."

"With regard to the second point, there can be no doubt that rightly or wrongly the general impression on the part of the public is, that the introduction of a canal is followed by fever in the districts through which it passes. It is true, as stated by Major Forbes, that malaria is already sadly rife in some of the districts through which the proposed canal is to pass, and he draws a pleasing picture of the cessation of this malaria in consequence of the reclamation of the swamps and morasses in which it is now engendered. And doubtless if this would certainly be one of the results of the construction of this canal, it would be a very strong argument in its favor. But, in the present state of our information on this subject, the Officiating Chief Commissioner thinks it at least as fair to assume with the Talookdars that the canal will bring fever in its train, as it will have the opposite effect contemplated by Major Forbes."

"With respect to the third point, whether the canal will pay, the Officiating Chief Commissioner is not himself in a position to refute or confirm the accuracy of Major Forbes' figures and estimates. But Colonel Maxwell, the Chief Engineer, who, in that capacity, has traversed the entire Province, on his departure put on record a memorandum, a copy of which is enclosed, from which it will be seen that he was of opinion that it would be a financial failure, and its success must at least in some measure depend upon whether the Canal Officers will be able to win over to their side the memorialists who are at present vehemently opposed to the project."

"It may, however, be admitted that Major Forbes assigns grounds for his opinion, that if a canal be run through districts which require irrigation, it would be in itself a good thing, and might be expected to be remunerative, and the Officiating Chief Commissioner would respectfully submit that this is the light in which the question should be regarded by the Government of India; that is to say, that His Excellency the Viceroy in Council should look at the matter in the way in which a private Company, who had obtained his permission to run a canal through the country, would look at it. If he considers that the prospects of success are so secured as to justify so large an outlay of the public money for the sake of the profit which will thereby be obtained, there is no more to be said. But if there is even a risk of failure, the question is, whether the Government is prepared to accept the loss, if any should be incurred. And although the memorialists are silent on this point, the Officiating Chief Commissioner is well assured that it is the main one on which their objections to the project are based. To speak plainly, they are afraid that if the Government embark on this enterprise in the capacity of speculators, and find that it does not pay, they will revert to their original position of administrators, and on the principle that canal water is good, and that people who do not know what is good for them, must be taught by those who do, will insist on the loss being made good by a compulsory rate first on those who take the water, and next, if that will not suffice, on those who do not."

13. Sir George Couper sums up as follows :—

"The two conditions originally laid down by the Government of India were, first, that the project should be such as to prevent the occurrence, or mitigate the severity of drought or famine; second, that it should be remunerative. With regard to the first point, it is to be noted that Oudh, 'the garden of India,' as a Province suffers more from excess than from deficiency of water, and that droughts are virtually unknown. The determination of the second question, the Officiating Chief Commissioner feels himself compelled to leave in the hands of His Excellency the Viceroy in Council, while with respect to the sanitary point of view, from which the question has since been regarded, he thinks it at least as likely that the canal will be a source of malarious disease as that it will be a cure for it."

14. In answer to a call made by the Government of India for an expression of the views of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces regarding that portion of the Sardah Canal scheme in which the Provinces under his rule were interested, His Honor submitted that, in his opinion, "there is no urgent need for a canal in either of the districts of Bareilly or Shahjehanpoor. The average rainfall is abundant and it seldom fails. The chances of famine are incomparably less than in most other parts of these Provinces. During the drought of 1868-69, it is true that great scarcity and distress prevailed in the autumn of 1869, but this was owing chiefly to the long and heavy drains on the stock of the Provinces to supply those parts of the country where the crops had failed, and to the difficulty (owing to the badness of the roads during the rains) of getting back any part of what had been exported—a difficulty which, thanks to the Railway, will not again occur."

"It is not to be doubted that the Sardah Canal would promote the prosperity of the districts watered by it. Heavier crops and more valuable staples would certainly follow, and, if the drainage were carefully attended to, the population would increase and the cultivation be extended. On the other hand, it cannot be questioned that there would be a certain risk to the climate by bringing a canal with all its branches and innumerable water-courses into a country naturally so moist, with the inevitable result of raising the spring-level already so near the surface. Moreover, with the means of irrigation already so plentiful (the facilities for which and the prescriptive use of which must necessitate a large set-off against the imposition of a full water-rate), it appears hardly doubtful that the canal would not prove financially successful, at least for a long term of years, while little can be put down to its credit as a security of the land revenue in a country where remissions are hardly known."

"To put the argument for postponement of this design on the lowest footing, His Honor would say that, even if it were otherwise advisable, the country through which it would run is one which perhaps of all tracts in Northern India least requires the aid of a canal, and that the expenditure is far more pressingly needed elsewhere as in Bundlekhund and even in western Rohilkhund, and the Lieutenant Governor would deprecate the diversion of funds and engineering skill from these parts of the country which may again at any time be devastated by drought and famine, to a project of, at the best, such comparatively inferior value and need as that of the Oudh Canal."

RESOLUTION.—This project has been discussed with great care and worked out in many forms with very great labor and ability, and the Governor General in Council has no reason to recede in any way from the high commendation bestowed on Major Forbes' merits. But there has always been some difficulty felt in regard to the degree of need for this canal, and in regard to its prospects of speedy financial success. It was hoped that the reduced project finally adopted in 1871-72, had led to the most satisfactory solution of the difficulty. But in the face of the dissatisfaction expressed by the Talookdars, and in the face of the adverse opinion of the present Chief Commissioner, the Governor General in Council feels that it is not desirable to go on with the work; and adopts the opinion of Sir William Muir that it will be best, under the circumstances, to devote the resources and engineering skill at the disposal of the Government to districts where the want of irrigation is more urgently felt.

2. His Excellency in Council has therefore determined to recommend to the Secretary of State that the execution of this project shall be indefinitely postponed.

3. Steps have accordingly been taken to discontinue the preparations to carry on the work, and to disperse the establishments.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Chief Commissioner of Oudh for information and guidance.

Ordered also, that copies be forwarded to the Foreign and Financial Departments, and to the Department of Agriculture, Revenue and Commerce.

Ordered also, that a copy of this Resolution, and of the papers now read, be forwarded to the Secretary of State.

Ordered also, that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE ACCOUNTS BRANCH OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT DURING THE YEAR 1871-72.

In conformity with the practice of previous years, I beg to submit to the Government of India a Report on the working of the Accounts Branch of the Public Works Department during the year 1871-72.

2. The report is divided into three parts, viz., I, General, containing matters relating to the Buildings and Roads, Telegraph, and Establishment (Account) Branches; II, Railways; III, Irrigation.

I.—General.

3. The following three tables, A, B, and C, show the degree of punctuality which has been attained in the disposal of the accounts, first, in the audit of the accounts of Executive Engineers; secondly, in the submission of the monthly and annual accounts by the Controllers of the several provinces to this Office; and, thirdly, in the rendering by this Office of the accounts, monthly and annual, for all India to the Comptroller General.

5. It will be seen from this statement that, generally, the submission of the monthly accounts to this Office has been within the prescribed period of two months after the close of the month to which they relate, while some of the provinces have been in advance of that time.

6. The annual accounts have also, with one or two exceptions, been submitted with punctuality, notwithstanding the extra work which has been caused by the inter-departmental transfers and adjustments consequent on the separation, at the commencement of the current financial year, of the accounts of the Irrigation and Military Works Branches, and the heavy pressure in those Offices which have had to surrender a proportion of their strength to the new Office of Accounts for Military Works at the busiest time of the year. Taking these circumstances into consideration, I would submit that the rendering of the annual accounts for 1871-72 with so little delay is very creditable to the Officers and Accountants concerned.

7. With reference to the delay in the receipt of the annual accounts from the North-Western Provinces, I would observe that, besides the causes of delay already stated, the Office of the Controller of those Provinces was further weakened in consequence of the establishment having suffered severely during the recent exceptionally unhealthy season at Allahabad.

8. From the foregoing statement it will be apparent that the monthly accounts of the General Branch of the Department were forwarded to the Comptroller General on an average about 2½ months after the close of the month to which they refer, and the final account for the year 19 days before the time prescribed for its submission by the Financial Department, although somewhat delayed by the causes mentioned in paragraphs 6 and 7.

9. The following statement will be useful as showing provincially the balances under stock and other suspense heads in the Imperial, Provincial, and Military Works Branches at the close of the year:—

Statement showing the balances of the Public Works Department at the end of the year 1871-72.

10. It is satisfactory to note that the balance of stock at the close of 1871-72, as compared with the opening balance, shows a reduction during the year of upwards of 7 lakhs of rupees as follows:—

		Rs.	Rs.

11. In April last I submitted to the Government of India a report embodying the results of the enquiries as to the state of the stock balance (referred to in paragraph 9 of the report for 1870-71), which had been instituted in connection with the question raised by the Secretary of State regarding the practicability of reducing the reserve stock balances in consequence of the facility afforded by the Suez Canal for obtaining stores quickly from England. The results of those enquiries, as may be seen from that report, tended to show that the stock balance altogether was not apparently in excess of requirements; that it was less than the supply necessary for one year's consumption; and that after deducting the balance of special stock, i. e., stock collected for specific works, but which had not been charged to those works, the balance of reserve stock was not considerable. It might be here noted that the average expenditure of stock during the past five years amounted to about Rs. 111½ lakhs annually; the balance of stock at the end of 1871-72 is, therefore, only about three-fourths of the supply required for a year.

12. The following table shows what has been done as regards taking stock in the provinces directly under the control of the Government of India:—

(a) The statement for the four Assam Divisions has not been received by Controller.
(b) Of these returns for six Divisions have not been received.

13. The following paragraphs refer to the principal measures which have been adopted for the general improvement of this branch of the Department.

14. Prevention of outlay on works in excess of estimates.—On this subject several important orders* have been issued. It has been clearly explained that Executive Engineers are held primarily responsible for reporting that estimates are likely to be exceeded immediately on its becoming known to them, and that the responsibility for any delay between the submission of such report and its receipt by the sanctioning authority rests with the Superintending or Chief Engineer or the Local Administration, as the case may be. Improvements have also been effected in the existing arrangements for the supply of early information regarding such excesses from Controllers' Offices.

* Public Works Department Circulars Nos. 34, 35, and 37 of 1871 and 11 and 25 of 1872.

15. Delegating to Controllers the power to appropriate funds.—In view to ensure the due appropriation of funds to works carried on under proper authority, and to prevent the delays which are apt to occur in this respect, it was proposed that Local Governments and Administrations and Superintending Engineers might have the option of delegating the powers of making appropriations, with which they are invested, to Controllers. The proposal was circulated to Local Governments and Administrations for opinion, but, apparently, from a misapprehension of its object, was not favorably received. A further reference on the subject has been made to them, and their replies are now awaited.

Public Works Department Circulars Nos. 41 and 73 of 1871.

16. Schedules of rates.—Instructions were issued to the effect that Controllers of Public Works Accounts should be required to prepare schedules of the rates of different kinds of work actually current in each Division. Such records, it is considered, will be of great use both in the preparation of estimates and in checking charges for works which may not be covered by sanctioned estimates.

17. Questions to be answered by Divisional Accountants on occasion of transfer or relief.—As a means of ensuring the account work in Executive Engineers' Offices being properly conducted, a set of questions has been prescribed, which Divisional Accountants are required to answer on occasions of transfer or relief.

Public Works Department Circular No. 67 of 1871.

18. Discontinuance of Executive Engineers' Journal and Ledger.—Experience having shown that these books were of little use, the information which they supplied being easily obtained from the monthly accounts and other records in the Public Works Department Circular No. 17 of 1872.

Executive Engineers' and Controllers' Offices, it has been left to Executive Engineers to keep them up or not at their option.

19. Increasing the responsibility of Divisional Accountants.—A proposal by Lieutenant Colonel Innes to increase the responsibility of Divisional Accountants was circulated to Local Governments and Administrations for opinion. The proposal was that the Executive Engineer's responsibility should be confined to correctness of initial returns and data, and attention to irregularities noticed by the Accountant, and that the latter should keep the accounts and be responsible for their correctness and agreement with data, and for enquiry into, and due notice of, all irregularities: the arrangement for the present to be introduced only into the larger Divisions. The replies from the Local Governments and Administrations are not yet complete.

Public Works Department Resolution Nos. 99-111 A—G, dated 22nd January 1872.

20. Responsibilities of Superintending Engineers and Controllers as regards inspection of Executive Engineers' Offices.—Another proposal by Lieutenant Colonel Innes, that the respective responsibilities of Superintending Engineers and Controllers in the matter of inspection of Executive Engineers' Offices, might be properly defined, with suggestions as to what they should consist of, was circulated to Local Governments and Administrations for opinion. Replies have been received and are now under consideration.

Public Works Department Circular No. 6 of 1872.

21. Reducing account work in Executive Engineers' Offices.—Correspondence on this question (which was referred to in paragraph 25 of the Report for 1870-71) has continued during the past year. Final orders on it may be expected to issue very shortly.

22. Inspections of Account Offices.—The Offices of the Controllers of Public Works Accounts, Madras, Bombay, British Burmah, Mysore, and Rajpootana were inspected during the year. Such imperfections in the several Offices as came under notice during the inspections were pointed out in view to their being remedied, and improvements were suggested.

23. Accounts of the Telegraph Department.—Consequent on the transfer to the Public Works Department of the administrative control of the Telegraph Department, the accounts of that Department from the beginning of 1871-72 were taken over by this Office from the Civil Department. Several important changes in the system of the accounts have since been proposed and have received the sanction of the Government of India in the Financial Department. Further reference to these changes will be made in the report for the current year.

24. Statistical Statements.—During the past year statements were compiled in this Office showing the expenditure from 1862-63 to 1870-71 on each public work costing more than Rs. 2,500.

II.—Railways.

State Railways.

25. Accounts for the following lines were received during the year:—

1. Hooblee and Carwar.
2. Calcutta and South-Eastern.
3. Northern Bengal Survey (formerly designated Darjeeling).
4. Agra District Rajpootana State Railway.
5. Delhi District ditto.
6. Moradabad, Deobund, and Roorkee Survey.
7. Punjab Northern.
8. Indus Valley.
9. Wurdah Valley.
10. Holkar (formerly designated Indore and Khundwa).
11. Neemuch (formerly designated Indore and Ajmere).
12. Nulhattee Branch.
13. Nizam's (Hyderabad).
14. Khamgaum.
15. Oomraotee.
16. Mysore Survey.

26. The survey of the Moradabad, Deobund, and Roorkee line was completed in December last, and the accounts finally closed.

27. The only item recorded against the Nulhattee Branch was the purchase-money, £30,000, paid by the Secretary of State in March 1872.

28. The survey for the Mysore line was completed in March 1872, and the accounts finally closed.

29. The accounts of the Agra and Delhi Districts of the Rajpootana State Railway were formerly submitted as one account, But in accordance with the orders of Government on the Appropriation and Outlay Account of that line for 1870-71, that the expenditure of the two districts should be recorded separately, the accounts for each district were separated in October 1871, and distinct accounts furnished from that date.

30. In addition to the Railways enumerated in paragraph 25, expenditure was incurred on account of the Patri Salt Branch and the Nagpore and Chutteesgurh State Railways. The expenditure on both these has been charged against the ordinary public works grants.

31. The following statement shows the average time occupied in the submission to this Office of the monthly accounts of the several lines and the dates of receipt of the annual accounts :—

33. The annual accounts for 1870-71 were submitted to the Comptroller General on the 14th October 1871, and those for 1871-72 are in course of despatch.

34. None of the State Railway Account Offices were inspected during the year either by myself or the Deputy Accountant General; but the Executive Engineers' Offices were duly inspected by the several Controllers and Deputy Controllers in charge of the accounts, and measures taken for rectifying or removing existing irregularities.

35. During the year the control of all State Railways was removed from Local Governments and placed directly under the orders of the Government of India. This change has necessarily thrown extra work and correspondence on this Office.

36. Hitherto the accounts of all State Railways were under the several Provincial Controllers; but during the year the control of the accounts of the Indus Valley, the Rajpootana, the Holkar, and the Neemuch State Railways was removed from the Controllers, Punjab, North-Western Provinces, and Central India, respectively, and placed under the charge of Deputy Controllers. Three new appointments were thereby created, and the arrangement seems to work satisfactorily. The Deputy Controllers of these lines are all in direct communication with this Office.

37. The accounts of the Punjab Northern State Railway were similarly removed from the charge of the Controller, Public Works Accounts, Punjab, on the 9th April last, and placed under an independent Deputy Controller.

38. At the request of the Secretary of State, monthly classified statements of oultay on State Railways are regularly received from the Accounts Offices and forwarded to Government for transmission home.

39. In consequence of the construction of the Holkar State Railway, and the Agra District, Rajpootana State Railway, having been let on contract, it was considered advisable to modify the existing rules and forms of account to suit the requirements of the case; special account forms for recording the expenditure on those lines were consequently prepared, and, after approval by the Government of India, were issued for use. These forms were first introduced on the Holkar State Railway, where they have been in force for some months, and are found to work well and smoothly; orders regarding their introduction on the Agra District, Rajpootana State Railway, have also been issued.

Guaranteed Railways.

40. As regards the management of the Guaranteed Railway accounts, orders for carrying out some important changes were issued during the past official year. It was ordered that the record of the treasury transactions should be concentrated in the Office of the Comptroller General, in lieu of the offices of local Accountants General, by whom these transactions were previously dealt with, and to that officer the duty of preparing the monthly cash returns and half-yearly appropriation statements for the Secretary of State was also delegated. These changes were directed to come into force from the 1st January 1872. For the completion of the half-yearly appropriation statements, the Comptroller General has to be furnished with advices of the transfer adjustments between the accounts of the different railways as well as those effected between the several accounts of each line, and this has rendered necessary the keeping up of a complete set of books in this Office, based on monthly accounts received from the local Examiners of Railway Accounts. The introduction of this system gave rise to a considerable amount of correspondence in my Office, chiefly on account of the late date on which orders were issued: the new system, however, promises to work well, and its requirements appear to be fairly understood by the Local Account Officers concerned. The change is, I think, an improvement on the old system, and I doubt whether a much better system could be devised so long as the Financial Department adhere to the opinion that these accounts should not be dealt with by this Department in the same way as the several accounts of the Department are now treated.

41. During the past year also the Government of India had under consideration the efficiency of the audit of the transanctions of the Guaranteed Railways as then existed, and, having in view the large amount of receipts and expenditure involved, came to the conclusion that the time had arrived for the introduction of a more systematic and thorough audit than had been in force since the audit of the Guaranteed Railway transactions was first taken up on the system inaugurated in 1866. After a thorough investigation of the subject, Government decided to relieve the Consulting Engineers of the detailed supervision of the audit, and entrusted the duty to the Examiners of Railway Accounts, acting under the immediate orders of this Office, and aided by a suitable staff of trained Accountants. The new system which was only introduced on the 1st April has had a very short trial; but I venture to express an opinion that even in this brief period evidence has been adduced of the increased efficiency that may be expected to result from it.

42. In connection with the above arrangements, orders* were issued by the Government of India regarding the duties of Examiners of Railway Accounts, and these were followed up with a Resolution† defining the powers of sanction of the Consulting Engineers.

* Public Works Department (Railway) Circular, No. 67, dated 15th March 1872.
Public Works Department Resolution, Nos. 402-7 A—R, dated 23rd March 1872.
† Public Works Department Resolution, Nos. 560-2 A—R, dated 18th April 1872.

43. During last year also a uniform set of forms for Guaranteed Railway Budgets was issued for general adoption on all the Indian lines. This should lead to good financial results if properly worked.

44. The Account and Audit Offices of the under-noted Guaranteed Companies were inspected by Captain Filgate, R. E., Deputy Accountant General in this Department, during the past official year:

The Sindh, Punjab, and Delhi Railway in April 1871 and again in November 1871.

The Oudh and Rohilkhund Railway in April 1871.

45. The following table shows the average time taken in preparing and submitting the Guaranteed Railway monthly accounts current to this Office. The results in all cases are far from satisfactory, but this must, in some measure, be attributed to the changes recently introduced. It is to be hoped, however, that a better degree of punctuality may be attained during the current year:

III.—Irrigation.

46. Since 1869, when Colonel Strachey, then Inspector General of Irrigation Works, submitted his report, having particular reference to the mode of exhibiting the financial results of irrigation projects in India, it has been contemplated to separate the accounts appertaining to this class of works from those relating to the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Department.

47. During the year under review arrangements were made for carrying out this change in a complete and satisfactory manner; and from the commencement of the year 1872-73 there will be a clear separation between the accounts relating to irrigation transactions and those of the Public Works Department proper.

48. The following district returns for the Irrigation Branch will henceforward be submitted periodically:

1.—Budget Estimate.
2.—Annual Appropriation and Outlay Account.
3.—Monthly Accounts from Controllers.

49. Orders regarding the form of Budget Estimate for this Branch of the Department, together with instructions for its preparation, were issued with Public Works Department Circular No. 64 of 1871, and the estimates for the current year have been submitted, on the whole, in a fairly srtisfactory manner according to the instructions issued.

50. The new form of Annual Appropriation and Outlay Account was issued with Public Works Department Circular No. 80 of 1871, and will be brought into use for the account of 1872-73. With this circular, rules and forms for keeping up the capital and revenue accounts of irrigation works were issued, and a revised classification of the heads under which the transactions are to be recorded was laid down.

51. Subsidiary forms and instructions have been issued from this Office for the guidance of Executive Engineers* and Controllers,† illustrating the manner in which the transactions are to be recorded, so as to work up to the new classifications, and also to the two great heads of account of each project—"Capital" and "Revenue."

* Accountant General's Circular No. 6 of 1872.

† Accountant General's Circular No. 15 of 1872.

52. Some difficulty and trouble will doubtless be experienced in arriving at the capital outlay of some of the old works, especially in Southern India; but steps are now being taken to arrive at as accurate an approximation to the actual figures as circumstances will permit.

53. It may be well to add that during the year 1871-72, an abstract of financial results of irrigation works to the end of 1870-71 under the Local Governments noted in the margin has been compiled. This abstract shews for each project as correctly as available information will admit—

Madras, Bombay, Bengal, North-Western Provinces, and Punjab.

(1)—Capital outlay,
(2)—Revenue, direct and indirect,
(3)—Working expenses,
(4)—Interest on capital outlay.

54. There are doubtless errors in the abstract; but steps are being taken to have them corrected; and I trust ere long that it will form a reliable record of the capital and revenue transactions of the projects concerned.

55. Much additional work has this year been thrown on Controllers and on the Deputy and Assistant Accountant Generals during the past year by the separation of the Military, Railway, and Irrigation Accounts from those of the General Branch. All have worked zealously and intelligently, and their efforts will, I trust, be crowned with complete success as soon as the changes introduced have been thoroughly understood and worked out in detail under their supervision, and all improvements which may be required introduced.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

RETURN EMIGRANTS FROM BRITISH GUIANA.

No. 120 (Public), dated India Office, London, the 30th October 1872.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

I FORWARD, for the information of Your Excellency in Council, and for communication to the Government of Madras, copy of a despatch* from the Governor of British Guiana, to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, transmitting a report† on the Steamer Enmore, which left George Town on the 4th ultimo with return emigrants for Calcutta and Madras.

* 7th September 1872, No. 121.
† 5th September 1872, No. 1548.

2. A copy of a minute‡ recorded by the Emigration Commissioners on these papers is also enclosed.

‡ 5th October 1872.

3. Your Lordship in Council will notice that 581 Indians embarked on this vessel, carrying with them about £5,700 in jewellery and specie, besides leaving deposits, amounting to £15,789-8-9, for remittance to India.

4. Taking into consideration that 80 Chinese have also returned to their native country, paying their own passage, and taking away, including the deposits of three of them, £6,312-10-1, I feel sure that Your Excellency in Council will be gratified with these results.

No. 121, dated George Town, the 7th September 1872.

From—J. SCOTT, Esq., Governor of British Guiana,

To—The Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I have the honor to enclose the report* of the Government Secretary, who, since the departure of Mr. Crosby, has been in charge of the Immigration Department, on the steam ship Enmore, which left this port with return immigrants on the 4th instant.

* 5th September 1872.

2. The Chinese who have embarked on board the Enmore have paid their own passages. Upwards of 100 applied for passages on similar conditions, but it was impossible to accommodate a larger number than 80. The remaining 20, as well as a small number of Chinese, to whom it is proposed to grant a free passage to Calcutta, will embark on board another return ship, which will leave next month. The Agent in Calcutta has been written to afford every possible assistance to these Chinese in obtaining the means of continuing their voyage to China.

No. 1548, dated the 5th September 1872.

From—J. M. GRANT, Esq., Govt. Secretary, Acting for Emigration Agent-General,

To—The Governor of British Guiana.

I have the honor to report, for the information of Your Excellency, that the steamer Enmore, 1121 tons burthen, James P. Browne, Esq., Commander, and Dr. R. W. Cooke, Surgeon-Superintendent, crossed the bar of the Demerara river yesterday afternoon with a view of proceeding on her voyage this evening to Calcutta with return Indian immigrants, at the expense of the colony, and also some Chinese immigrants who have paid their own passage.

The number of depositors is altogether 383 ; of these 296 are immigrants from Calcutta, 87 from Madras, and only 3 Chinese. Besides the deposits, the Chinese have taken with them about £5,000, and the Indian immigrants about £5,700 in jewellery and specie. This would bring up the amount actually carried away to nearly £28,000.

The vessels is well supplied with stores, and will not, it is believed, have to call in at the Cape. It is expected that the voyage will be accomplished in 46 days, and that she will return with a ship-load of immigrants before the close of the year.

An arrangement has been made that our Emigration Agent shall be at liberty to send the Enmore to Madras to fill up there, should he be short of immigrants at Calcutta, or to take in her whole load there, if necessary. No charge is to be made against the Government for this service, but the immigrants at Madras are to be delivered alongside.

Dated the 5th October 1872.

Minute by Mr. WALCOTT, on Immigration Agent-General's report in despatch from Governor SCOTT, dated the 7th September 1872.

The noteworthy features in the Emigration Agent's report are the amount of savings remitted by the coolies, and the number of Chinese who returned to their country, paying their own passages, at a cost of £1,312-10. This sum is, with the deposits, and what the people took with them in jewellery and specie (estimated at about £10,700), amount to nearly £28,000. The return of the 80 Chinese will have a beneficial effect on Mr. Samson's recruiting efforts, in case the Chinese emigration to the West Indies is re-opened. He has all along declared that the non-return of any Chinese formed a serious obstacle in his operations.

The employment of a full-powered steamer is a new feature in the service. The only other instance was in 1869, when the Far East took coolies from Calcutta to Demerara ; but as she used steam only as an auxiliary power, her voyage (89 days) was not much shorter than that of a sailing vessel. It is expected that the Enmore will make the passage to Calcutta in 46 days. I think this will prove to be an under-estimate, and I doubt whether on the score of expense the experiment will be found to answer.

No action on the part of the Secretary of State seems to be necessary.

No. 152 (Public), dated India Office, London, the 24th December 1872.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

IN continuation of my despatch No. 120, dated the 30th of October last, I forward, for the information of Your Excellency in Council, copy of a letter* from the Colonial Office, with its enclosures, relating to the return to their native countries on board the ship Rohilla of Indian and Chinese immigrants on the expiration of their industrial service in the Colony of British Guiana.

*25th November 1872.

2. The deposits of the Indian coolies amount to £9,760-16-8, and it is estimated that the cash and jewellery which they carried away with them may be valued at £5,200. Including the savings, &c., of the Chinese immigrants on board, nearly £16,500 have thus been realized; and taking into account the amount remitted and carried away by the persons who returned in the Enmore referred to in my despatch cited above, it is estimated that no less a sum than £44,500 has been saved by coolies during their service and taken from British Guiana in one year.

3. Your Lordship in Council will, I feel sure, consider these facts to be very satisfactory.

4. In connection with this subject, I transmit copy of a further letter† from the Colonial Office, enclosing an extract from the Governor of British Guiana's report‡ on the blue book of the Colony for the year 1871, shewing the number of depositors and amount of deposits in the Colony during the years 1869, 1870, & 1871.

†27th November 1872.

‡27th November 1872.

5. Your Excellency in Council will notice that this report, while treating of immigration generally, adverts to the high rate of mortality during the year 1871 among the Indian laborers. It appears that though the death-rate exceeded those of the two previous years, the mortality among the immigrants was less than that of the entire population. This subject has already been commented on in your despatch No. 33, dated 16th of September last, replied to in mine dated the 4th instant, No. 137.

Dated Downing Street, London, the 25th November 1872.

From—R. H. MEADE, Esq., Under Secretary of State for the Colonies,

To—The Under Secretary of State for India.

I AM directed by the Earl of Kimberley to transmit to you, for the information of the Secretary of State in Council, a copy of a despatch* from the Governor of British Guiana, enclosing a report from the officer in charge of the Immigration Department on the ship Rohilla which left George Town on the 19th of October with return coolies for Calcutta.

* No. 140, dated 26th October 1872.

His Lordship thinks that the large amount of money taken back in this ship is worthy of His Grace's notice.

No. 140, dated George Town, the 26th October 1872.

From—J. SCOTT, Esq., Governor of British Guiana,

To—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I HAVE the honor to forward a report,* prepared by the Government Secretary, lately in charge of the Immigration Department, on the ship Rohilla which left this port on the 19th instant, with return coolies for Calcutta.

* 21st October 1872.

No. 1867, dated the 21st October 1872.

From—J. M. GRANT, Esq., Govt. Secy., in charge of the Immigration Department,

To—The Governor of British Guiana.

I HAVE the honor to inform Your Excellency that the ship Rohilla, 1,002 tons burthen, Samuel Potter, Esq., Commander, and Dr. Schön, Surgeon-Superintendent, left the Demerara river on the morning of Saturday last (19th instant), with a full complement of Indians (Calcutta and Madras) and Chinese return immigrants.

She anchored outside the light ship and remained there until Sunday night, when she proceeded on her voyage.

The number of Indian coolies and Chinese embarked was as follows:—

Indians.	Men.	Women.	Boys.	Girls.	Infants.	Total.	Adults.
Calcutta	244	76	29	23	16	388	346
Madras	13	3	2	0	0	18	17
Chinese	21	22	6	6	3	58	49
TOTAL ...	278	101	37	29	19	464	412

The Rohilla is certified to carry 411 adults, but the area measured was only the deck where the immigrants are lodged, and did not include the hospital. The Governor is aware that almost up to the last it was supposed that we should not be able to give more than the number we had covenanted to embark, but at the last moment so many changes had to be made on account of some registered immigrants holding back, and others coming to replace them, that one more was actually put on the list and shipped than was intended.

Among the Chinese, 34 persons have received a free passage as far as Calcutta. Your Excellency is aware that this group consists of families who all came from one village in China here in the Dora in 1859 and some of their children who have been born since. Care was taken to ascertain that they were all provided with sufficient funds to carry them to China, and a separate letter has been written to Mr. Firth about them. In their case, as well as in the cases of those who have paid their passages, he has been requested to give them every assistance in procuring a passage, &c., to China. I have no doubt all of them are personally known to Mr. Firth. The greater number of them came from "Skeldon" and "Eliza" and "Mary," where they were settled on their first arrival, and a few from the Chinese settlement at Hopetown.

The amount deposited was as follows :—

	Remittances by Immigrants.	Average per Adult.	Average per Depositors.
Indians—Calcutta and Madras	$46,852·64 = £9,760 16 8	£26 17 9	£24 0 10
Chinese	$800 = £166 13 4	£55 11 1	£55 11 1
TOTAL ...	$47,652·64 = £9,927 10 0

Of the Indians, the largest sums were deposited by two men of plantation "Hope," East Coast. One of them, "Sourjbully," has deposited $2,600, and the other, "Sumsherally," $2,500. These men did not re-indenture, I am informed, after their original term of service expired. The former, I am told, had a shop on the estate, and was a banker besides. The latter was a driver on the estate, and a sleeping partner in the business. I need hardly add that his connection with "Sourjbully" was unknown to Sub-Immigration Agents; besides the sums deposited, they took away with them a box, which is stated on good authority to contain at least £3,000 (pounds) in gold and other valuables.

"Sumsherally" was presented by the representative of the estate on leaving with a silver cup and gold medal. The minimum amount deposited by any Calcutta coolies was $10. The maximum sum deposited by a Madras immigrant (only seven deposited) was $185. The minimum, $40. The three Chinese deposited respectively $450, $300, and $50.

Besides these deposits, the immigrants took with them, as is usual, cash and jewellery. It is estimated that the coolies must have carried with them (including the two specific sums mentioned above) about $25,000 (rather more than £5,200), and the Chinese about $6,000 (or £1,250). If this estimate is accepted as an approximation to the truth, the total amount which these people have been able to save and take back to their native countries is nearly £16,500. Add the amount estimated to have been carried away when the Enmore sailed, £28,000, and we have the considerable sum of £44,500 abstracted from the country in one year.

I inspected the vessel twice, once before the coolies were put on board and once after they were embarked. The stores were all examined here, and every certificate required either by law or custom signed by the proper officers, and will be forwarded by this mail to Mr. Firth.

Her condensing apparatus was tested by the Acting Colonial Civil Engineer, and certified to be in good order. The Surgeon Superintendent was satisfied with the ventilation, and there is every reason to believe that the ship will make a successful voyage to her port of destination. She will fill up all her water tanks, which contain 24,000 gallons, at the Cape.

I may add that five men were engaged as paid topazes, some of whom had come over in that capacity; and four who desired to return were allowed a free passage.

Dated Downing Street, London, the 27th November 1872.

From—R. H. MEADE, Esq., Under Secretary of State for the Colonies,

To—The Under Secretary of State for India.

WITH reference to your letter of the 1st, and to mine of the 2nd instant, I am directed by the Earl of Kimberley to transmit to you, for the information of the Secretary of State in Council, an extract from a despatch from the Governor of British Guiana, shewing that the death-rate among the coolies in 1871, though high, was less than that of the whole population for that year, which seems to have been an unfavorable one.

I am also to enclose a return showing the number of depositors in the Savings Bank, and the amounts deposited by each class of the population during the years 1869, 1870, and 1871.

Extract from report on Blue Book of the Colony of British Guiana for the year 1871.

IMMIGRATION.

IN a colony like British Guiana, where its reports depend almost wholly upon the successful and economical cultivation of the sugar-cane, and to carry on which imported labor is an absolute necessity, the subject of this division of the Blue Book has an important bearing upon the commerce of the colony. In my former report on the year 1870, I adverted to the extension taking place in cane cultivation, and this still continues, and as a consequence the yearly demand for immigrants by the planters also increases. Applications were made for the past season for 8,235 East Indians, 1,390 Chinese, and 275 Africans, or a total of 9,900. The number actually introduced in satisfaction of this large demand consisted of only 2,937 statute adult East Indians. The introduction of liberated slaves from Africa, which at one time supplied a limited number of excellent laborers, may now be considered as definitively closed. Chinese immigration has also for several years been suspended, and, as the Chinese Government have refused to admit of any modification of the late convention on terms which would admit the re-opening of that source of imported labor, it is to be sincerely hoped that the negociations now in progress, by which it is sought to obtain Chinese immigrants on the same terms as those under which these people are permitted to emigrate to the Spanish possessions, may be successful, for it can scarcely be expected that there can be obtained annually from India alone an immigration equal to the demands made for imported labor by the various colonies. On the general question of coolie immigration, it would be out of place in a concise report on the yearly statistics of the Colony to offer any remarks. I will only observe that its opponents have allowed their minds to be biassed by the few drawbacks which are almost necessarily connected with a system of indentured labor on a large scale, and have not sufficiently considered the broader features of the question. Any one who from personal knowledge can compare the social position of the Indian coolie in his own country with that which he occupies in British Guiana, becomes fully aware of the real and substantial benefits immigration confers on this class of people, and I may add that no one is more sensible of this than the coolie himself.

From the census taken on the 3rd of April last year, it appears that there were resident in the Colony, including children, 48,363 East Indian and 6,880 Chinese immigrants, making a total of 55,243. Of these there were working on the Sayor Plantations 33,940 East Indians under indenture for five years and 8,823 as free laborers, the remainder were living in the towns and villages.

The average rate of mortality amongst the immigrants residing in the plantations during the past year was found to be 3·65 per centum. This compares unfavorably with the death-rates of the two previous years; that for 1869 having been 2·11 per cent. and for 1870 3·06 per cent. In explanation of this increased rate of mortality, I may observe that it is not confined to the immigrants alone; from the returns made to the Registrar General, it appears that the death-rates of the entire population of the colony reached in 1871 the unusually high rate of 3·78 per centum.

During the year, the following immigrants voluntarily entered upon fresh indentures:—East Indians entitled to return passages to India, 2,170, not entitled to back passages, not having completed their industrial residence of ten years, 2,145, making a total of 4,315: of the Chinese 843 indentured. The bounties paid to these immigrants amounted to £ 53,505.

The number of immigrants obtained from India during the season was unusually small, and consisted of the following:—2,119 males, 722 females, 122 boys, 70 girls and 128 male and female infants at an average cost of £ 18-2-3 per caput. In addition to these there came to the colony 260 Portuguese and 591 Barbadians, whose passages were paid by Government, but they are voluntarily immigrants and under no engagements, and free to follow their own pursuits and dispose of their labor as they please.

On the other hand, there were sent back to India in September 423 Indian emigrants. These emigrants deposited for remittance to India a sum of £ 10,507-13-8, besides taking with them small sums and having jewellery and personal ornaments of large value. The Immigration Agent General in his report on the departure of this vessel states that they "were a very fine body of people, and shew a very great and favorable contrast by their independent bearing" and greater intelligence to that which their fellow contrymen exhibit on their introduction, and which they no doubt exhibited for the most part on their own introduction.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 28th January 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE presented the report of the Select Committee on the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

BURMA TIMBER DUTIES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to authorize the levy of ad valorem duties on timber floated down the rivers of British Burma. The matter was an extremely simple one. At present, these duties were levied by cubic measurement of each log. That was found to be inconvenient on account of the great differences in the value of different pieces of timber; and, in point of fact, by arrangement between the revenue authorities and the owners of timber, ad valorem duties were taken because that happened to be in favour of the timber owners. There was no provision for that in the law, and it was proposed to legalize the practice. At the same time, the opportunity would be taken to bring the law on the subject into one single enactment; it was very short and very simple, but it happened to be contained in three Acts.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA PORT-DUES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Stewart be added to the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Port-dues in British Burma.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

SAVINGS BANKS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to legalize the repayment of money deposited in District Savings Banks in the names of Minors be taken into consideration. The report of the Committee was short, and he could not do better than read it in extenso. The Committee, then, after setting out that they had considered various papers connected with the Bill, which chiefly consisted of replies to certain references to all the Local Governments and Administrations in India, proceeded to report as follows:—

"We have extended the operation of the Bill to all Government Savings Banks, and we have taken the opportunity of repealing and re-enacting, with some necessary modifications, the extant provisions of Act No. XXVI of 1855 (to facilitate the payment of small deposits in Government Savings Banks to the representatives of deceased depositors).

"We have added a clause legalizing repayments of deposits heretofore made to minors or their guardians.

"We have also provided for the case of deposits made by married women, or women who afterwards marry. This and the preceding provision are in accordance with the Regulations for the management of the English Post Office Savings Banks.

"We have raised, from rupees 500 to rupees 1,000, the amount which the Secretary may pay, without probate, &c., to the representative of a deceased depositor, and we have extended, from two to three months, the period fixed by the second paragraph of clause 3.

"We have inserted a section (suggested by 9 Geo. IV, c. 42, s. 40) declaring that, when the amount of a deposit does not exceed rupees 1,000, such amount shall be excluded in computing the probate duty chargeable on the property of the deceased depositor.

"In the section relating to deposits belonging to lunatics, we have provided for the case of a deposit being made on behalf of a minor, who, on attaining majority, is found to be insane.

"We have defined 'Secretary' to include any person empowered to manage a Government Savings Bank, and we have made a few verbal amendments."

With these remarks, the Committee recommended that the Bill, thus amended, be passed. As the Council would perceive, this Bill, which was originally introduced with reference to depositors being minors, had been slightly extended, so as to include, by way of consolidation, the previously existing law, and that it also comprised one or two other matters which required legislation. It had been suggested by one or more of the Local Governments, that we should also include all the rules relating to the Savings Banks. But, on consideration, we had decided not to enter into that point, because those rules were contained in executive resolutions, and we were advised that, for such rules, executive sanction was sufficient. We had, therefore, acted upon what was understood to be a well-known principle of legislation, that we should not include anything in a law which could be done without legislative authority—that which you had the power to do, executively, should not be done legislatively.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE also moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

TRANSHIPMENT OF GOODS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the Transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer be taken into consideration. In this case also, as the Report of the Committee was short, he would read it in extenso. The report, then, ran thus—

"We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to the transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

"We have slightly amended the wording of clauses five and six; but we have made no other changes, and recommend that the Bill, thus altered, be passed."

He believed that the circumstances relating to this Bill were within the recollection of the Council. It was known, perhaps, to this Council and the public, that a considerable amount of opium was grown in Persia, and that such growth was year by year increasing. He did not say that there was any danger of rivalry with British India; but then we should see that, in such matters, a great interest was protected, namely, the Indian interest in opium. This opium, coming down the Persian Gulf in Native craft, was taken into the British ports of Aden and Bombay. The opium brought into these ports was transferred to British steamers, and by them was conveyed round to China. This was considered to be making use of British ports perhaps to the detriment of British fiscal interests. So, at first, this transhipment was prohibited. But it was thought better, on consideration, that we should not refuse the hospitality of our ports even to our possible competitors, but that we should offer every facility for such transhipment. That being the case, it only remained to determine what ports should be included in the arrangement. Of course, Bombay would be included. But it was further considered whether we should not also include Aden. It was a free port for general merchandize, and it required special legislation to levy a transhipment fee in that port. We considered, notwithstanding the general privilege conceded to Aden, we might fairly levy this transhipment fee under the particular circumstances. Therefore, after consideration, we determined to include Aden.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE then moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTHERN INDIA IRRIGATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON presented the further Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR asked His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business, in order to consider one point which was left doubtful in Committee with the view of saving time. It might be discussed in Council that day, so that the Council might make up their minds at the next meeting.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT requested the hon'ble member, Mr. Egerton, to read the Report of the Select Committee.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON read the report, which was as follows—

"We the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Northern India Canal and Drainage Bill, 1872, was referred, have the honour to make this final report.

"We have expressly provided that the proposed Act shalla pply to all lands, whether permanently settled, temporarily settled, or free from revenue.

"We have, in the penultimate paragraph of clause 8, substituted 'date of the notification' for 'passing of the Act.'

"We have reconsidered clauses 35 and 45, as amended in Council, and we have nothing further to suggest with respect to those clauses.

"We have provided, in clause 38, for assessing the owner's rate by reference to land of similar description and with similar advantages as those of land irrigated by a canal.

"We have altered clause 42 into a declaration that no owner's rate shall be chargeable, either on the owner or occupier of land, temporarily assessed to land-revenue at irrigation-rates, during the currency of such assessment. And we have struck out clause 43.

"We have provided distinctly, in the clause (66), describing the procedure for obtaining labourers for works urgently required, that the Local Government shall fix, and may from time to time alter, the rates to be paid to any such labourers, provided that such rates shall exceed the highest rates for the time being paid in the neighbourhood for similar work.

"We have made a few transpositions and verbal amendments, and recommend that the Bill, thus amended, be passed."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that he had no objection to comply with the request of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor to suspend the Rules so far as to consider the Report of the Committee now, if hon'ble members considered that course a desirable one to take.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS remarked that he had not seen either the Report of the Committee or the Bill as amended by them; and he believed that every member, except His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, was in the same position.

His Honour the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that his proposal was not to consider the Report of the Committee in extenso. The fact was, that, in respect to one clause, the matter was left doubtful, and he wished that point to be discussed now, so that the Council might be prepared to come to a decision at the next meeting. He was not a member of the Select Committee; but the Committee were good enough to allow him to be present at their deliberations for a little time, and it would not be a serious breach of confidence to say that they had not made up their minds on that point.

He thought it would save time if he were to state his views on that one point on the present occasion.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that, when any objection was made, it was better to keep to rule, and as none of the members seemed to be in favour of the course proposed, he was not prepared to suspend the rules.

LAND REVENUE (NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES) BILL.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT announced that the adjourned debate on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to land-revenue in the North-Western Provinces of Bengal would now be resumed.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR said, before this Bill passed into a stage which would withdraw it from the Council in general for some time, he should like to make a few observations. He thought it was of great importance that some of the important provisions should be carefully considered and discussed. The subject was one of enormous importance—of an importance so great that, in HIS HONOUR's view, all the other subjects put together, which were brought before this Council from one year's end to another, were not at all equal in importance to this one great subject—namely, the land-tenures and land-revenue of the country. It was to him, as he was sure it was to the public, a great source of satisfaction that this great subject should be treated by the able men who were now in a position to deal with it. The Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, under whose auspices, HIS HONOUR might say, this Bill was introduced, and the hon'ble member who introduced it, himself holding a high position in those Provinces, were, of all men in India, the most fitted to deal with this great subject. HIS HONOUR thought there could be but one opinion, that it would afford great facilities and advantage to the officers of the Government, if the law on this subject, which was now scattered over many enactments, should be consolidated and put in a clear and compact shape. After the experience of several generations of eminent Revenue Officers, it was also desirable that, in those points which required amendment, the law should be amended; that the Bill should be cast in rough by those who were so well able to deal with it so fully; and that it should then be considered in this Council.

HIS HONOUR did not propose to address himself to the details of the Bill. But there were one or two important provisions which appeared in the Bill, to which he would draw the attention of the Council. The most important point—at all events, the newest and most striking point—in this Bill was one which afforded a certain benefit to those cultivators who formerly occupied the position of proprietors. He thought that provision a most excellent one, and, if accepted by the Council, it would be a great improvement of the law as it now stood. He not only looked upon it as a great improvement and political advantage that we should act thus, and maintain the traditional rights of these ex-proprietors; but also, he thought that the provision would be of immense importance, inasmuch as it would introduce a principle which he believed was the very back-bone of Indian tenures of land. It would admit that the land might be, and was, held as a matter of status, and not as a matter of property under the ordinary conditions of contract under which land was now held in England. Property in land, in one sense, as introduced in India, was a modern invention of our own. It might be that certain privileges connected with the land were held by various individuals and hereditarily transmitted. But HIS HONOUR's assertion was, that property, in the sense of the full proprietorship with which a man could do as he liked, was a thing unknown in this country; that rent, as distinguished from revenue, did not exist. The superior holders of landed-tenures, known either as village head-men, taluqdárs, or zamíndárs, or anything else, might have hereditary rights; but such rights were more in the nature of offices than of property. At any rate, the rights which they held signified only the possession of a certain status, and not rights as proprietors. That being so, he rejoiced to see that, in this Bill, changes were proposed with a view, to a certain extent, to recognize this view of the case; that was to say, that the ex-proprietors had a certain status which they had never lost. We said—"the rights of property and the rights depending on contract you have lost, but your status as a cultivator of the soil was not lost." He looked on the deprivation of real status as a great political evil; he looked on that as a thing of which, according to Native opinion, and according to Native law and custom, a man could not be deprived. We should now, he hoped, revert to the custom of the country, and maintain the privileges which, acording to a long course of custom, according to Native history and Native sentiment, these men were entitled to hold. He thought that the provision was a good and moderate one, and one which he hoped to see carried by the Council.

But going beyond that, there was another part of the Bill in regard to which His Honour entertained serious apprehension. He objected to the wording of two or three clauses of the Bill as they now stood. The point was of extreme importance, although, upon the face of the Bill, it might not seem so. The Council were aware that the question of the rights of ryots was one which had been long and hotly agitated in India, not only in connection with Bengal Proper, but also in the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh, and in other cognate provinces. In respect to one limited class of tenants, this Bill would give special privileges. But when you went beyond ex-proprietary tenants, you came to the great class of occupancy ryots, and he found that section 76 of the Bill introduced some changes in the wording of Act X of 1859, on which he looked with very great apprehension. It was a question whether Act X of 1859 changed or declared the law. His own opinion was, that it rather declared than changed the law. A considerable period, as things went in India, had passed since Act X of 1859 became law. It had been the subject of great agitation and contention, and most important decisions upon its meaning had been passed in the highest Courts of law. The people had become acquainted with that law; and, in the opinion of many eminent men who had been consulted, that law should not be lightly altered. The law to which people had become accustomed, and which had been settled by the decisions of so many eminent Judges, should not be tampered or interfered with, without urgent necessity. The question, therefore, was, whether section 76 of this Bill did not alter that law to some material extent. It was at one time supposed that Act X of 1859 introduced provisions very unfavourable to the landlords. It had since been more justly shown that, probably, the provisions of that law were rather unfavourable to the tenant, inasmuch as they gave grounds for the enhancement of rent which did not previously exist. Putting aside the ex-proprietary tenants, the great mass of the other occupancy tenants were those whose position and status were regulated by sections 6 and 17 of Act X of 1859; and, in the North-Western Provinces, it was proposed to substitute section 76 of this Bill for sections 6 and 17 of the Act of 1859. Now, when he came to compare those sections with the provisions of this Bill, and to read them by the light of the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and some correspondence which had been published, he was very much inclined to fear that this Bill did alter the law. He believed that it had been done inadvertently: he could not think it had been done designedly. Perhaps he might venture, as having been engaged in the administration of the law, to throw out a suggestion. He had very great fear that the wording of section 76 of the Bill would introduce very considerable changes to the disadvantage of the ryots—changes which he, for one, would very much deprecate.

The first alteration which His Honour noticed in regard to the wording of this section was this. The present law, section 6, Act X of 1859, was in this form:—

"Every ryot, who has cultivated or held land for a period of twelve years, has a right of occupancy in the land so cultivated or held by him, whether it be held under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same," &c., &c.

That section and section 17, to which he should presently refer, were those sections of Act X of 1859 which had been very hotly contested in the Courts; he might say every word had been the subject of a most solemn and important legal interpretation; and he, therefore, considered that, if it was not intended to make any material change, it was most dangerous to alter the wording of a law which had been so thoroughly sifted—a law which had so thoroughly become the very back-bone of the country. He would exceedingly deprecate the change of a single word, if the change was not really necessary.

Almost the very first word of section 76 of this Bill was new, and at once made a considerable difference against the landlord. The term ryot was in its origin somewhat vague, but a long series of decisions had settled and made it clear that the ryot of Act X was, in fact, a cultivator, and that a tenant who was not a cultivator was not entitled to the benefits of section 6. It seemed to His Honour that, when the word "tenant" was introduced instead of of the word "ryot," you widened and increased the scope of the law; that you gave rights of occupancy to men who were not cultivators of the soil, to farmers and others who were not engaged in cultivation; and it would be very undesirable that tenants of that description should acquire such rights.

Again, the words of section 6 of Act X of 1859 were—"every ryot, who has cultivated or held land for a period of twelve years, has a right of occupancy." But in section 76, the words are—"every tenant, who has cultivated or held land continuously for a period of twelve years, shall be recorded as a tenant with a simple right of occupancy." His Honour did not understand the reason for the introduction of the word "simple." Why should it be introduced there? He feared that, to the word "simple," an important meaning might be given; because, as he went on, he found that, while under the present law the rights of tenants having rights of occupancy were defined by section 17 of Act X of 1839, which laid down the circumstances under which, and under which only, rent could be enhanced, and the limit to which it could be enhanced, that was materially changed by this Bill; in future, the standard of rent was not to be the special standard laid down by section 17 of Act X of 1859, but reference was to be made to what were called the "current rates of rent." Now, if he looked to the Statement of Objects and Reasons and the correspondence which had been published, he was filled with apprehension that the term "current rates of rent" meant simply the prevailing rates of rack or competition rent. If so, this Bill would introduce what the High Court of Bengal, sitting in very solemn judgment, had declared not to be the existing law. The hon'ble member in charge was no doubt aware that this point was the very subject of contention in what was known as the great Rent Case of Bengal. The hon'ble member was probably aware that that eminent Judge, Sir Barnes Peacock, did hold what His Honour apprehended this Bill might be considered to lay down, that tenants having rights of occupancy were entitled to hold simply at the rates of rent fixed by competition; that the right was a simple right of occupancy, and that an occupancy tenant had no other rights whatever. That was the opinion of one very eminent Judge. But it happened that, in a Court of fifteen Judges, fourteen Judges held a contrary opinion. They considered that a tenant with rights of occupancy was not entitled merely to hold at a rack-rent, but that his rent was limited, and could only be enhanced under certain express conditions, and that those conditions were laid down by section 17 of Act X of 1859. His Honour was sure that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill would not ask the Council to upset the law which was so solemnly settled and established by the highest Court in the country, which, for a long series of years, had been settled to be the law of the land, and which had been looked to as the Magna Charta of the rights of occupancy tenants. He was sure the hon'ble member would not ask them to change that law in a sense adverse to the rights which ryots now possessed under the existing law.

His Honour would not trouble the Council by going into the details of the modes and limitations of enhancement which were now recognized by the law; but he earnestly entertained the hope that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill would so mould the wording of the Bill as to depart as little as possible from the conditions under which enhancements of rent could now be made; and that he would not alter the rights of occupancy ryots as they had been settled. It was all very well to protect the rights of the few who were called privileged cultivators; but it was a great deal more important to protect the rights of the mass of the cultivators of the country.

There was one other important change made by this Bill. It was the provision which enabled the Settlement Officer, at the time of settlement, to settle the rents of the ryots generally, and to enhance the rents if he considered it advisable to do so. His Honour thought there was a great deal to be said in favour of that procedure, by which rents would be raised more easily than at present. Under the revenue-system prevailing, that was probably the right course. At the same time, he could not but grudge this facility of enhancement, and for this reason, that, at any rate, for every two or more rupees enhanced, only one rupee went to the public purse, and the other rupee or rupees went to the man whom we had chosen to set up and call the landlord. His Honour's opinion was that there were only two courses open to us: either that we must look to a large increase of land-revenue in proportion as prices increased and values increased, or we must put other taxes upon the country. And his belief was that, for every rupee you put into the pocket of the landlord, you must extract another rupee from the people by some other way: for every lákh given to the landlords, you must take a lákh by means of some other tax. The course we were pursuing was somewhat thus. At the time of the previous settlement of land-revenue in the North-Western Provinces, we proceeded somewhat in this manner. We gave to the landlord one-third of the gross revenue paid by the ryots, and we took two-thirds into the public treasury. It was perfectly true, as expressed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, that, in the course of that settlement— Mr. Bird's settlement—there were no facilities for enhancement, and, as a rule, the rents of the ryots were not enhanced. We would assume that a ryot paid a rent of twelve rupees. Of that, eight rupees went to the public treasury and four rupees went to the landlord. Now, suppose that, on account of the rise of prices and the rise in the value of everything else, that ryot's rent was enhanced fifty per cent.: in that case, the twelve rupees' rent would be raised to eighteen rupees, which was now to be divided on this principle. We would take fifty per cent. of the whole into the treasury, and give fifty per cent. to the landlord. The consequence would be, that, whereas the ryot's rent was increased from twelve rupees to eighteen rupees, and the former division gave eight rupees to the public treasury and four rupees to the landlord, now, only nine rupees would go to the treasury and nine rupees would go to the landlord; therefore, although the ryot's rent was enhanced by six rupees only, one rupee went to the treasury and the remaining five rupees went to the landlord. Moreover, he found in the Bill a very proper provision that, when the rent had once been fairly settled under the provisions of the Bill, it should not be altered for a prescribed period. The landlord's rent was settled for thirty years; the ryot's rent for fifteen years. In the meantime, the prices of things were changing; money was changing in value: all things were rising in value in India. It was, therefore, very possible that, at the end of fifteen years, another fifty per cent. might be added to the ryot's rent. His Honour was supposing that the ryot originally paid twelve rupees; he would now pay eighteen rupees; and fifteen years hence he would pay twenty-seven rupees. It followed that, at the end of the fifteen years, nine rupees would go to the public treasury and eighteen rupees to the landlord. Well, then, what happened? The more money the landlords got from the people, the more money they spent, and landlord families became more numerous. We were told that they must live. The consequence was, that the family who spent two-thirds of the gross income of a village or estate would be less and less inclined to give up that large revenue which, at the end of the period of settlement, they would derive from the land, and it would be said that it was cruel suddenly to reduce their income and the value of their property. In His Honour's view, the longer the term for which you settled the revenue, the more the landlord class became accustomed to the idea of property in the land; the more they became wedded to the habit of spending the income, the more difficult it would be to raise the public revenue on the land.

In reality, then, we must, he believed, adopt one of two courses: we must either go back to the original character of land-tenure and land-revenue in India; we must say boldly to the landlord,—"You must go back to the position of a collector and privileged cultivator. What has of late been called rent is really revenue; we will take the greater portion as revenue, merely leaving you a portion for your trouble in collection and in consideration of your position." Or, on the other hand, we must permanently settle the revenue, and do what Lord Cornwallis desired to do—settle the revenue permanently, not only for the landlords, but also for the ryots. With a permanently fixed land-revenue, as in European countries, we must set against that settlement the necessity of raising taxes in other forms. You must either put an end to that idea of the continual increase of property in land, and raise the revenue very largely, enhancing the rate on the landlord and ryot alike, or you must permanently settle the land-revenue for all parties, and adopt other systems of taxation. No doubt this last would be in one view a great gain; it would be an immense thing to put an end to the harassment and the setting of class against class; of Government against one class, and one class against another, and all the irritation caused by settlements and enhancements, and all the rest of it. In His Honour's view, the permanent settlement in Bengal had given opportunity for the creation under the zamíndárs of a vast mass of landed proprietors of a smaller and more popular character. That, undoubtedly, was of very great benefit to the country. And if, in Bengal, it was necessary to impose other taxes, the country would not be without compensation in the permanent settlement. His Honour's view was, that the time had come when, in dealing with a Bill of this kind, we must take our course in one line or the other: either towards a permanent settlement of the revenue of landholders and ryots alike, or adopt a system of periodical enhancement of the revenue commensurate to the increase of rents on the ryots. He thought nothing could be worse than a system of continual enhancement of the rent of the ryots with very inadequate gain to the public treasury. He would either stop enhancements of all sorts, and rest on a people rendered stable by the wide diffusion of settled and secure landed property, or would raise the revenue as the rent was raised, and rest on the contentment due to the avoidance of other taxes.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bayley said, he did not propose to detain the Council with any very lengthy observations regarding the Bill in its present stage. He could not, indeed, add anything to the opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor as to its extreme importance, whether as a measure of consolidation, or as one of reform.

He only wished to say that he entirely concurred in the general expediency of the Bill, so far as it concerned the consolidation of the existing law. And as regards the reforms which it introduced, he thought he might say, generally, that he also agreed with His Honour so far as to think the principle upon which our legislation in this respect had hitherto proceeded was to some extent erroneous. He believed, that is to say, that the ancient custom of the country certainly never generally recognized such idea of full and complete property in the land as had been recognized by the theory of modern English law, although the latter had, to a certain extent, guided both our Courts and legislation in this country. He did not mean to say that absolute property in land was never found in India; but he certainly thought that it was not the general rule. He might go further, and say it was hardly possible to recognize any one uniform, general law of property in India. The truth was, there was never any one principle accepted as the basis of the land-law. The status of the various persons interested in, or connected with, the land had been settled by a series of compromises, induced by various general and local circumstances, which had created, perhaps, the most complicated and varied body of law and custom that the world had ever seen. We had thrown all our influence into the scale in favour of one particular portion of the community connected with the land, whose position, perhaps, fitted best with the theory of the English idea of proprietors. And no doubt the practical effect of carrying out that policy had resulted in the enormous evils which the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill had so vividly described in his speech at the last meeting of the Council, and which, vivid as it was, gave a very inadequate idea of the great injustice and political evils which were the logical consequences of the view which had been thus generally taken by our authorities. The present Bill did very much, so far as it could be done, to remove those mischievous effects of the principle followed, without destroying the efforts made to reduce the land-law to some sort of system and uniformity. It very wisely, moreover, adopted that method of compromise by which, in accordance with immemorial practice, the Natives had themselves endeavoured to adjust the difficulties which had arisen out of our administration of the law.

He did not propose, at this stage of the Bill, to go into the details of the measure, because he thought the general policy required first to be considered as a whole. It was well understood, moreover, that the present was one of three Bills intended to carry out that policy in a uniform manner, which were necessarily, to some extent, connected with each other, and which should, therefore, be based, not only on the same principle, but should be made consistent in their form and expression. It would be very convenient, therefore, that all three Bills should be considered at the same time, and if possible by the same Committee, and that they should be carried out in harmony with each other. The principle being practically the same, it would nevertheless be very difficult otherwise to prevent the details from clashing in some respects.

In regard to some of the objections which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had taken, MR. BAYLEY believed they arose to some extent from the nomenclature adopted in the Bill, to which MR. BAYLEY had no inherent objection, excepting that it required to be very carefully considered; if not, there might be some danger of unintentionally changing the law as it stood. He merely instanced the new meaning given to the term "collector," which, unless carefully guarded, would be attended with considerable inconvenience. The word was used in a vast number of Regulations and Laws passed during the last century in a way so strictly technical, that, unless extreme care was taken, a new technical sense given to it would practically alter the law. Therefore, it appeared to him on this ground also, that it was very necessary that this Bill, and the others to which he had alluded, should be considered, as far as possible, together.

With regard to the policy of fixing the rates at the time of settlement, as a matter of fact, he believed that it was certainly the original intention of the present Settlement Law to fix them at that period, and no doubt in the majority of the earlier settlements the intention was acted upon. But it was found that the Settlement Officer had not legally the power of doing that which he endeavoured to do, and that the law did not give the legal force intended to his acts. MR. BAYLEY knew the evils which that want of power had brought about. As regards the time of settlement becoming one of general enhancement of rents, this was so already, the settlement was taken advantage of as a time of enhancement. The only difference was, that it now occurred after the Government revenue was settled, and when the Government could not get any benefit from it. And this enhancement was not now made by Settlement Officers who were acquainted with the people, but by rough agreement between the landlord and tenant, and without any very satisfactory machinery to adjust their disputes. The Bill proposed merely to give a legal and useful shape to the existing practice, and to bring it under needful restrictions. As to the exact period for which the rents should last, it might be a question to be considered. MR. BAYLEY would not follow the Lieutenant Governor into the very difficult questions of political economy raised by him; he would only say that, so far as they affected the practical question before the Council, the present Bill seemed to go a long way towards a satisfactory compromise between conflicting views.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS said that the Bill now before the Council had a two-fold object, the consolidation and the amendment of the existing law. As to the first, it was obviously desirable to clear up all doubtful points, to legalize existing practice, and to bring into one enactment the various Regulations on revenue, tenant-right and other matters affecting the land. He, therefore, had no hesitation in expressing his concurrence with the hon'ble mover as to the necessity for legislation. As to the second object of this Bill, it was admitted that the amendments embraced points of very great importance; and with the short time the Council had had at their disposal, he did not feel that he could do justice to them. For this reason, and not because he failed to appreciate their importance, he would not follow his hon'ble friends, the Lieutenant Governor and Mr. Bayley, in their remarks. He would content himself with saying, generally, that he fully approved the direction taken by the amendments, while he thought some of the new provisions open to criticism, and was disposed to object to some of the clauses as they now stood. Considering, however, the great local experience of the hon'ble the mover, and that this Bill had been the result of careful consideration by a Committee of some of the ablest officers in the North-Western Provinces, and especially considering that it was put forward by the very best authority on the revenue and land-tenures of Upper India, the Lieutenant Governor himself, it was, primâ facie, highly probable that his (MR. ELLIS') criticisms and objections were not well founded. It was thus not unlikely that, on further enquiry and explanation, his present opinion would be modified in regard to those points on which he differed, and he would refrain from stating them to the Council at the present stage of the discussion. He begged to give his vote for the motion for a reference to a Select Committee, and, in doing so, would express a doubt whether the period of six weeks would suffice for a determination of the many important details which would have to be considered by the Committee. But he would not move any formal amendment, as it would be open to ask for an extension of time.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said—"In the first place, I desire to observe that one point in the Bill, section 75, on which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has just laid great stress, namely, the provision that the ex-proprietors who, from any cause, have been sold out of their lands, may still have the privilege of cultivating the lands as privileged occupancy tenants, is not at all new. A similar, just and expedient provision was embodied in the Panjáb Tenancy Act of 1868, and in the Oudh Rent Act. Having myself been concerned in the passing of the Panjáb Act, I am glad to see that a similar policy in this respect is followed in the present Bill.

"We have just heard doubts expressed whether this Bill sufficiently guards, by its sections 75 and 76, the rights of ryots, cultivators and tenants. Certainly, the Bill does not go so far as the Panjáb Act, and hardly as far as the Oudh Act.

"The Panjáb Act described several classes of privileged ryots more than those mentioned in this Bill, and then provided that these classes should be entitled to have their rents fixed at favourable rates, determined by various percentages below the average rent-rates of the district. Some classes, more highly privileged than the others, were to pay as much as thirty per cent. less than the average rate. But even the ordinary occupancy ryot was to pay fifteen per cent. below that average. By the Oudh Act, the occupancy ryot was entitled to have a favourable rate twelve per cent. less than the average.

"Now, it has been objected by a previous speaker that this Bill does not make adequate provision in these respects. But although the Bill does not make the provisions as to rent-rates very specific, it does seem to contemplate such provision being made by executive authority.

"His Honour the Lieutenant Governor seems to consider that the 'simple occupancy tenant' of this Bill will be liable to be rack-rented, because he will be chargeable with 'the current rates of rent for similar land.' No doubt he might, under some circumstances, be thus chargeable. But then the Bill also provided that he might be charged 'by the standard of the rent-rates sanctioned by the Board of Revenue for the circle in which the holding of such tenant is situated.' This seems justly to afford opportunity to the Board for fixing some standard, with a slight difference in favour of the occupancy ryot.

"So, with the privileged ryot of section 75; his rent is to be fixed by the Settlement Officer at two annas in the rupee less than the average rent-rate. This is a distinct concession, similar to the concessions allowed in the Panjáb and Oudh. But in this Bill the application will be limited to a very small class.

"Altogether, the details of the status of the 'simple occupancy tenant' may well afford matter for consideration by the Select Committee, if the Council shall to-day agree that the Bill be referred to such a Committee.

"Next, I infer from the tenor of the remarks by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, that in this Bill we should not concede too much to landlords in comparison with tenants; that in this way it might happen that the dues of the State in respect to land-revenue might be transferred to the landlords, which again might lead to the necessity for other kinds of taxation, and so on. Without following His Honour in that train of argument, I may remind the Council that this Bill is proposed for provinces where the lesser proportion only of the tenures relates to landlords and tenants, while the major proportion relates to peasant-proprietors. Indeed, the great majority of the people for whom this Bill is intended are those peasant-proprietors who are quite the best of their kind in all India, and who approach most nearly to the status of similar classes in continental Europe. As to the other kinds of taxation to which His Honour adverted, I am sure that the Council will excuse me from entering upon that subject. This is an instance to which the very familiar words of the poet seem specially applicable—'better bear the ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of.' That is, better make the most of the taxes we have, than fly to taxes of which we know not what the effect or the result may be.

"Lastly, I listened with due attention to what His Honour said regarding the fiscal interest connected with the permanent assessment of the land-revenue. We are all, perhaps, agreed that it would be well to concede to the people a permanent limitation of the demand for land-revenue. But how far such a limitation is reasonably practicable in the North-West Provinces; whether it should be an absolute pecuniary limitation, as in Bengal, or whether it should consist of a fixed share of the State in the produce, the value of such share in money to be altered from time to time, according to range of prices, are questions still under the consideration of Government."

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS said—"As the principle on which section 75 is drawn, which recognizes ex-proprietary tenants as a separate class of occupancy tenants, with privileges superior to those who have acquired a right of occupancy by mere prescription, appears to be generally approved, it is unnecessary for me to add anything to what I have already said on this subject last Tuesday.

"I wish, however, to say a few words on some of the remarks made by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. He objects to the use of the word 'tenant,' in section 76, in place of the word 'ryot' used in section 6 of Act X of 1859. If His Honour will read the definition given of a tenant in section 3 of this Bill, in connection with the last part of section 76, which provides that, before a tenant can acquire a right of occupancy in any land, he must have cultivated it continuously for twelve years, and also read clause one, which bars the acquisition of this right in any land not let, he will, I think, see that his fears that a farmer who may have taken a part of an estate on lease can acquire a right of occupancy in it under this section are groundless. His Honour then objects to the phrase 'simple right of occupancy,' in the latter part of the first clause of the same section, as an alteration in section 6 of Act X of 1859, which provides that a tenant who has cultivated land for twelve years shall have a right of occupancy in such land."

[His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that, in the definition of "tenant" in the Bill, "cultivating" did not occur.]

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS resumed—"The word to which His Honour objects has been introduced to distinguish tenants who have acquired a right of occupancy by prescription, from tenants who have a right of occupancy in virtue of their former proprietary title in the land. Act X includes all occupancy tenants liable to enhancement of rent in one class. If ex-proprietary cultivators are to be recognized as a separate class, as is now proposed, some such word as that used in this section is necessary to distinguish the two classes.

"With reference to His Honour's remarks on the rules prescribed in section 76 for the determination of the rent payable by tenants with a simple right of occupancy, I would point out that this section is intended to apply only to Settlement Courts, and to the time when the settlement of a district is under revision: at all other times, suits for enhancement and determination of rent will be decided under the provisions of the Rent Law, and by officers invested with powers under it. It may be advisable, as His Honour urges, to lay down a stricter procedure for them than that which is here proposed for the guidance of Settlement Officers; but as the chief duty of a Settlement Officer is to ascertain, by the most careful enquiry, the rent actually paid for land of every description throughout the district under settlement; as his opportunities for ascertaining this are far greater than those enjoyed by any officer exercising powers under the Rent Law during the currency of a settlement; and as his conclusions have to be submitted for the consideration of the Commissioner of the Division and of the Board of Revenue before they can be acted upon, it is, I contend, far better to give him the power to determine the rent payable by a tenant for any particular field, in accordance with these general deductions and observations, than to compel him, as the Rent Courts are obliged to do, to take the evidence of five or six cultivators on a matter on which he has already recorded all the evidence obtainable, not from a few interested witnesses, but after an inquiry extending over, perhaps, two or three years, among all classes of the agricultural community. Moreover, this is no new power which it is now proposed for the first time to give Settlement Officers as an experiment: they exercised it formerly under Regulation VII of 1822, when the settlements under Regulation IX of 1833 were made. It is certainly in accordance with the feelings and traditions of the people. It will put a stop to much of the ill-will and irritation now caused by the enhancement-suits which invariably follow a revision of the assessment, and it will, as I pointed out last Tuesday, relieve both landlord and tenant in a great measure from the heavy expense and delay they are now put to in re-settling the rental of an estate after revision of the Government demand on it.

"At the conclusion of his speech, His Honour made some remarks from which I understand that he objects to the principle on which the land-revenue demand is settled in the North-West, on the ground that the Government is shut out, during the currency of a settlement, from any share in the increased rental that may be obtained by the landlords; and also, that he considers that the share of the rental of an estate taken as land-revenue is too low. I regret that His Honour has thought fit to make these remarks, as I was in hope that all discussion on these questions had been ended. I shall merely say now, that our experience of the settlements under Regulation IX of 1833 is directly opposed to the conclusions arrived at by His Honour, and affords ample proof that the share of the assets of an estate now taken as revenue is as high as can be imposed with justice or safety, especially now that landlords have no longer the power they formerly had of increasing their receipts by any considerable extension of cultivation. But it seems to me that the discussion of these questions is altogether out of place here, the principle on which the land-revenue is to be assessed, and the share of the rental to be taken by the State, being matters to be decided, not by the Legislative Council, but by the Executive Government."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis had given an explanation which seemed completely satisfactory, in regard to the definition of the word "tenant." But when we came to refer to that definition, we found it to be as follows:—

"Tenant" means occupant of land who is, or, but for a special contract, would be, liable to pay rent therefor"

His Honour thought it was much better, seeing that the existing law—

His Excellency the President observed that the Council must adhere to the rules. Each member was only entitled to speak once in a debate.

His Excellency the President said—"The importance of some of the questions raised in this Bill is very great, and has been fully recognised by hon'ble members.

"For my own part, I have great confidence in the knowledge and ability of my hon'ble friend on my left (Mr. Inglis), and the Board of Revenue of the North-Western Provinces who have prepared the Bill; and I agree with my hon'ble friend opposite (Mr. Ellis), that there is probably no man in India who is so complete a master of the revenue-system of the North-Western Provinces, or better able to weigh the various rights connected with the settlement of the land-revenue, than Sir William Muir, the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, with whose approval the Bill has come before us.

"I therefore anticipate that this Council will find upon examination that the Bill, in its main features, will deserve their approval. At the same time, as the most important clauses of the Bill have been introduced since the Bill was first brought in, I shall await the report of the Select Committee before expressing an opinion upon the questions which have been raised to-day, many of which seem to me to be better suited to discussion in Committee, where explanations can be freely given and received, than in the whole Council. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has made some remarks upon the executive policy of the Government in respect to the principles upon which new settlements of the land-revenue should be made. Upon this, I wish to observe that, in my opinion, there is no necessity for imposing new taxes in India, and revisions of the land-settlement should be conducted with great moderation and consideration for existing interests."

His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram said, one most important point was brought forward by His Lordship and the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, with regard to which he wished to offer a few remarks. When giving out land permanently, it was of the greatest importance that the Government should confine it to those districts or zilas where the land was thoroughly surveyed by a paimáish or revenue survey, and also to those districts which had been surveyed by Trigonometrical Survey Officers, and where every inch of uncultivated land, including forest land, was surveyed. Because, no doubt, even if the land were given to the ryots or proprietors all over the country for a century, or half a century, still they would be under a vague fear that the Sarkár might increase the revenue again. But where the province, or division or district was thoroughly surveyed, both trigonometrically and by paimáish, there was no harm in making a permanent settlement. But until such surveys had been completed, there was great danger in giving out the land permanently.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, the Hon'ble Messrs. Ellis, Hobhouse, Bayley, Chapman, Egerton and Inglis, and His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, with instructions to report in six weeks.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse gave notice that, at the next meeting of the Council, he proposed to introduce the pending Bill relating to Oaths and Affirmations, and to move that it be referred to a Select Committee.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 4th February 1873.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

Fort William, the 11th February 1873.

No. 3.—The following Rules for the Conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council of the Governor General received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 11th day of February 1873, and are hereby promulgated for general information:—

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

In exercise of the power conferred by the Indian Councils' Act, 1861, section eighteen, the following amended Rules have been made by the Council of the Governor General assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations at the meeting held on the eleventh day of February 1873, and have received the assent of the Governor General:

I.—Preliminary.

1. These Rules supersede the Rules for the Conduct of Business at the Meetings of the Council as amended on the 17th day of December 1862, and the 28th day of February 1868.

2. In these Rules—

"Council" means the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations:

"President" means the Governor General, or (during the time of his visit to any part of India unaccompanied by his Council) the President nominated by the Governor General in Council, under the Indian Councils' Act, 1861, section six; or in the absence of both the Governor General and the President so nominated, the Senior Ordinary Member of Council present and presiding:

"Member" means a Member of the Council, whether ordinary, extraordinary or additional:

"Secretary" means the Secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative Department and includes every person for the time being exercising the functions of his office; and

"Local Government" includes a Chief Commissioner.

II.—Meetings of the Council.

3. The Council shall ordinarily meet at 11 A. M. and shall not prolong its sittings after 4 P. M., unless the President otherwise directs.

4. The quorum shall be seven, including the President.

5. The Commander-in-Chief shall sit on the right of the President: the Governor or Lieutenant Governor shall sit opposite the President: the Law Member shall sit wherever it may be convenient; and, subject to these provisions, the Members shall sit according to seniority, the junior Member being on the left of the President.

6. The President may adjourn, without any discussion or vote, any Meeting or business, whether there be a quorum present or not, to any future day, or to any part of the same day.

7. The President shall preserve order, and all points of order shall be decided by him, no discussion thereupon being allowed.

8. A Member desiring to make any observations on any subject before the Council shall address the President without rising from his chair.

9. On all matters brought before the Council, after the Member who makes a motion has spoken, each Member consecutively, beginning with the Member on the left of the President, may make such observations as he thinks proper.

After all the Members in turn have had an opportunity of speaking, the mover may speak once by way of reply, and any other Member may, with the permission of the President, speak once by way of explanation:

Provided that, if the matter be an amendment of a Bill, the Member in charge of the Bill shall be entitled to speak next after the mover of the amendment.

10. When, for the purpose of explanation during discussion, or for any other sufficient reason, any Member has occasion to ask a question of another Member on any measure then under the consideration of the Council, he shall ask the question through the President.

11. Any Member may speak at the request and on behalf of another Member who is unable to express himself in English.

12. On every motion before the Council, the question shall be put by the President, and shall be decided by a majority of votes.

In case of a division the votes shall be taken by the Secretary in consecutive order, beginning with the Member on the left of the President.

After the question is put no further discussion upon it shall be allowed.

13. Any Member may ask for any papers or returns connected with any Bill before the Council. The President shall determine, either at the time, or at the Meeting of the Council next following, whether the papers or returns asked for can be given.

14. Communications on matters connected with any Bill before the Council may be addressed, either in the form of a petition to the Governor General in Council, or in a letter to the Secretary, and must in either case be sent to the Secretary. Ordinarily, such communications will not be answered.

Except in the case of the High Court at Fort William, such communications from Courts, officials, or public bodies shall ordinarily be sent through the Local Government.

15. The Secretary shall either cause such communications to be printed and send a copy to each Member, or circulate them for the perusal of each Member.

III.—Introduction and Publication of Bills.

16. Any Member desiring to move for leave to introduce a Bill in accordance with the provisions of section 19 of the Indian Councils' Act, shall give the Secretary at least three days' previous notice of the title and object of the Bill.

If such motion be carried, the Bill with a full Statement of Objects and Reasons shall, if not already prepared, be prepared by the Member or (if he so desire) by the Secretary in consultation with the Member.

17. The Secretary shall then cause the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, to be printed, and shall send a copy to each Member.

If any of the Members are unacquainted with English, he shall also cause the Bill and the Statement of Objects and Reasons to be translated into Hindústání for their use.

18. When a Bill is introduced, or on some subsequent occasion, the Member in charge of it shall make one or more of the following motions—

(a.) that it be referred to a Select Committee, or

(b.) that it be taken into consideration by the Council, either at once or at some future day to be then mentioned, or

(c.) that it be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon.

19. No such motion shall be made until after a copy of the Bill and a copy of the Statement of Objects and Reasons have been furnished to each Member. Any Member may object to the motion unless such copies have been furnished to him at least seven days previously; and such objection shall prevail unless the President, in exercise of his power to suspend any of these Rules, allows the motion to be made.

20. On the day on which such motion is made, or on any subsequent day to which the discussion is postponed, the principle of the Bill and its general provisions may be discussed.

21. When any motion mentioned in Rule 18 is carried, the Bill shall, together with a Statement of its Objects and Reasons, be published in English in the Gazette of India.

The Bill and Statement shall also be published in such official Gazettes and in such Vernacular languages (if any), as the Council in each case decides to be necessary for the purpose of giving notice to the communities affected by the Bill.

For this purpose, the Council shall make an order at the Meeting at which such motion is carried, and may, from time to time, on the motion of any Member, vary or cancel such order.

22. The Governor General, if he see fit, may order the publication of a Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons which accompanies it, in such Gazettes and languages as he thinks necessary, although no motion has been made for leave to introduce the Bill.

In that case it shall not be necessary to move for leave to introduce the Bill; and if the Bill be afterwards introduced, it shall not be necessary to publish it again.

IV.—Select Committees.

23. The Law Member shall be a Member of every Select Committee.

The other Members of every Committee shall be named by the Council when the Bill is referred, or at any subsequent Meeting.

The Law Member and, in his absence, the Member in charge of the Bill shall be chairman of the Committee, and, in the case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

24. After publication of a Bill in the Gazette of India, the Select Committee to which the Bill may have been referred shall make a report thereon.

Such report shall be made not sooner than three months from the date of the first publication in the Gazette of India, unless the Council orders the report to be made sooner.

Reports may be either preliminary or final.

The Select Committee shall in their report state whether or not, in their judgment, the Bill has been so altered as to require re-publication, and whether the publication ordered by these Rules or by the Council has taken place.

If, in the judgment of the Committee, the Bill has been so altered as to require republication, the Secretary shall send a copy of the altered Bill to the Secretary of the Department to which it pertains.

25. The Secretary shall cause every report of a Select Committee to be printed, and shall send a copy of such report to each Member, and if the Committee or the President so direct, the Secretary shall cause the report, with the amended Bill, to be published in the Gazette of India.

If any of the Members present are unacquainted with English, he shall also cause the report to be translated into Hindústání for their use.

26. The report of the Select Committee on a Bill shall be presented to the Council by the Member in charge of the Bill, and shall be taken into consideration by the Council as soon as conveniently may be; but any Member may object to its being so taken into consideration when he has not been furnished for a week with a copy of the report; and such objection shall prevail, unless the President, in exercise of his power to suspend any of these Rules, allows the report to be taken into consideration.

V.—Consideration and Amendments of Bills.

27. When a Bill is taken into consideration by the Council, any Member may propose an amendment of such Bill.

28. If notice of such amendment has not been sent to the Secretary at least three days before the Meeting of the Council at which the Bill is to be considered, any Member may object to the moving of the amendment, and such objection shall prevail, unless the President, in exercise of his power to suspend any of these Rules, allows the amendment to be moved.

The Secretary shall cause every such notice to be printed, and shall send a copy for the information of each Member.

If any of the Members present are unacquainted with English, he shall also cause every such notice to be translated into Hindústání for their use.

29. Amendments shall ordinarily be considered in the order of the clauses to which they respectively relate.

30. Any Member may move that a Bill which has been amended by the Council or by a Select Committee be re-published or re-committed, and, if the Council so decide, the President may order the Bill to be re-published or re-committed, as the case may be.

31. If no amendment be made when a Bill is taken into consideration by the Council, the Bill may at once be passed.

If any amendment be made, any Member may object to the passing of the Bill at the same Meeting; and such objection shall prevail, unless the President, in exercise of his power to suspend any of these Rules, allows the Bill to pass.

Where the objection prevails, the Bill shall be brought forward again at a future Meeting, and may then be passed with or without further amendment.

VI.—Passing of Bills and Publication of Acts.

32. When a Bill is passed by the Council, a copy thereof shall be signed by the President, and, when the Governor General has declared his assent thereto, such copy shall be signed by the Governor General, and the Bill shall be published as soon as possible in the official Gazettes, under the signature of the Secretary, as an Act of the Governor General in Council.

Such publication shall be made in the Gazette of India in English and in the official Gazettes of the Local Governments in English and in the principal Vernacular languages spoken in the territories subject to such Governments respectively:

Provided that, when the Act does not apply to the whole of British India, it shall be published only in the Gazette of India and in the Gazettes of the Local Governments to whose territories it applies.

VII.—Duties of Secretary.

33. At least two days before each Meeting of the Council, the Secretary shall send to each Member a list of the business to be brought forward at such Meeting.

34. The Secretary shall keep a journal, in which all the proceedings of the Council shall be fairly entered.

The journal shall be submitted after each Meeting to the President for his confirmation and signature, and, when so signed, shall be the record of the proceedings of the Council.

35. The Secretary shall also prepare a report of the proceedings of the Council at each of its Meetings, including an abstract of the observations of the Members, and publish it in the Gazette of India as soon as possible after the Meeting. He shall send a copy of such report to each Member and also to the Permanent Under Secretary of State for India.

36. In addition to the other duties specially required by these Rules, it shall be the duty of the Secretary—

1st, to draft all Bills originated by the Government of India, the Statements of their Objects and Reasons, and the Reports of the Select Committees to which such Bills are referred;

2nd, to take charge of the copies of the Bills signed by the Governor General and of all the other records of the Council;

3rd, to keep the books of the Council;

4th, to keep a list of the business for the time being before the Council;

5th, to superintend the printing of all papers printed in pursuance of these Rules;

6th, to assist the Council and all Committees in such manner as they may direct;

7th, to send to the Secretary of the Department to which the Bill pertains, any Bill which an Additional Member has obtained leave to introduce under Rule 16;

8th, to examine all Bills deposited by Additional Members, and report to the President on those which contain clauses trenching on subjects coming within section 19 or section 22 of the Indian Councils' Act, 1861;

9th, to write all letters which the Council, or the President, or any Select Committee, or the Law Member, directs to be written.

37. It shall be the special duty of the Assistant Secretary in the Legislative Department to translate into Hindústání Bills, Statements of Objects and Reasons, Reports of Select Committees and Amendments of Bills, to explain papers to the Members unacquainted with English, and otherwise to assist them in such manner as they may require.

VIII.—Miscellaneous.

38. Strangers may be admitted into the Council Chamber during the sittings of the Council on the order of the President.

Application for orders of admission is to be made to the Secretary.

39. The President, on the motion of any Member, may direct at any time during a sitting of the Council, that strangers withdraw.

40. Any paper relating to any measure before the Council may be published by order of the President.

Copies of papers so published shall be sold at such rates as may be fixed by the Secretary.

41. Any Bill respecting which no motion has been made in the Council for two years may, by order of the President, be removed from the list of business.

42. The President, for sufficient reason, may suspend any of the foregoing Rules.

POLITICAL.
No. 137.

INDIA OFFICE, LONDON,
The 24th December 1872.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

MY LORD,

I transmit herewith, for the information of your Excellency's Government, in continuation of the documents forwarded with my despatches in this Department, No. 100 of the 10th August 1871, and No. 67 of the 31st July 1872, four printed copies of the new Commercial Tariff of Netherlands India, which come into operation on the 1st of January 1874.

I have, &c.,
(Sd.) ARGYLL.

From Sir E. Harris to Earl Granville.

COMMERCIAL. THE HAGUE,
No. 39. 28th November 1872.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to transmit herewith a translation of the new Indian Tariff, which was passed through both Chambers of the States-General, and awaits the Royal assent.

It will come into operation on the 1st of January 1874, and its importance to British industry and commerce will at once be felt, since, besides abolishing differental duties, it establishes a general reduction in the scale of imports.

Thus, British manufactures of silk, cotton, linen, ribbons, &c., which now pay a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem, will, from the date of January 1, 1874, only pay 6 per cent.; and advantages will be obtained in the same directions as regards our other exports.

Amended Bill for Ratifying the Tariffs of Import, Export, and Transit Duties in Netherlands India.

(TRANSLATION.)

WE, William III., &c., &c., &c. To all whom these presents shall concern, send greeting:

Having taken into consideration that the Act of July 3, 1865 (Staatsblad No. 76) by virtue of the Act of July 24, 1871 (Staatsblad No. 89) remains in operation till January 1, 1873, and that it is therefore necessary further to ratify by law the tariffs of import, export, and transit duties in Netherlands India.

We, after having consulted our Council of State, and with the concurrence of the States-General, have approved and resolved as follows:—

Art. 1. All merchandize to Java and Madeira; to West Coast of Sumatra; to the Assistant Residency of Bencoolen; to the Residency of the Lampong districts; to the Residency of Palembang; to the Residency, Banka and Dependencies; to the Assistant Residency of Billiton; and to the Residency, South and East Division of Borneo, imported for use or consumptiom, and not expressly stated as free of duty, are liable to an import duty according to this Tariff:—

* In case of the strength being greater or less, the quantity is reduced to the alcoholic standard of 50 per cent. The directions, the instruments, and the tables for estimating the strength and making the required calculations are appointed by the Governor General. The calculation, however, for liquors and other similar spirits prepared or mixed with substances which prevent the regular estimate of the strength merely by hygrometers and thermometers, shall always be made with reference to a standard of 75 per cent., unless the officials suspect that fluids or liquids declared as such spirits contain a higher proportion of alcohol than 75 per cent. In that case they are empowered to require the examination of the actual strength, and the calculation shall be made in accordance with the greater strength thus discovered.

For varnish and all other liquids prepared with alcohol, not being liquors, as well as for pyroxilic spirit and all other liquids prepared from it or mixed with it, the estimate shall be made on the calculation of a strength of 100 per cent.

The Governor General may, however, with the precautions necessary, grant freedom from import duty—

1. For pyroxilic spirit.

2. For ordinary spirits:

(a.) Which in the Netherlands, in accordance with the regulations there in force relating to freedom from Excise, are mixed with pyroxilic spirit;

(b.) Which in Netherlands India, in accordance with the regulations given to that intent under the inspection of officials, shall, by the addition of pyroxilic spirit, be rendered unsuitable for ordinary use.

(c). For making vinegar.

Æther sulphuricus, chloroform, and other like articles or liquids prepared with alcohol, are liable to double the duty of varnish and other such like liquids.

Spirits imported at other places than those specially appointed for that purpose by the Governor General are liable to the same duty as varnish and other such like liquids.

The Governor General shall give directions as to what additional sum shall be paid besides the import duty on spirits, which are found to have been imported in quantity exceeding the maximum by him to be appointed.

Art. 2. In addition to the merchandize set down in the Tariff as free from import duty the following are also exempt:—

(1.) All goods or merchandize imported on behalf or on account of the Government.

(2.) All productions of Netherlands India possessions where duties are levied by the Netherlands India authority, provided that, with respect to cotton goods, tobacco, cigars, they shall be provided with a certificate of export from those possessions.

(b.) All productions of other Netherlands India possessions, and of the inland States of the Eastern Archipelago, in friendship with the Netherlands Government, gambier excepted, as well as of woven cotton goods, tobacco, and cigars.

(3.) All goods which have paid duty at a Netherlands India Custom-house. If, however, at the place of the second importation a higher duty is levied, the merchandize shall not be allowed to pass till the difference in duty shall have been paid.

(4.) Personal necessaries, &c., of travellers brought by themselves.

Art. 3. On being exported from the provinces or districts mentioned in Article 1, the goods set down in the Tariff following are subject to export duty:—

Art. 4. Exemptions from export duty:—

(1.) All goods or merchandize exported on behalf or on account of the Government.

(2.) All goods which have paid export duty at a Netherlands India Custom-house

If, however, at the place of the second exportation, a higher duty is levied, the goods or merchandize shall not be cleared till the difference in duty shall have been paid.

Art. 5. For the present at Moeara Kompeh, in the Kingdom of Djambi, with respect to import and export duties and exemptions from them, the regulations laid down in the Decree of the Governor General of Netherlands India, dated April 23, 1847 (Indisch Staatsblad No. 19), remains in force.

Subject to our future approval, the Governor General is empowered, in place of the above-mentioned regulation, to bring this Act into operation at Moeara Kompeh, reserving such exceptions as may be found necessary.

These exceptions, however, do no violence to the principle of the Act, that the duties are levied to the exclusion of all differential import and export duties.

Art. 6. In the Residence Riouw, including its dependencies on the east coast of Sumatra, in the Government of Celebes and its dependencies, and in the Residencies of Amboyna, Ternate, Menado, and Timor, and for the present also in the Residency of the Western Division of Borneo, no import or export duties are levied by the Netherlands India authorities.

Subject to our future approval, the Governor General is empowered in the dependencies of the Residence Riouw, on the east coast of Sumatra, in the Residence Western Division of Borneo, and in other parts of Netherlands India not mentioned in Article 1 of this Act, or in the first paragraph of this Article, to levy duties on the part of the Netherlands India Government under the same reservation as that which refers to Moeara Kompeh, mentioned in the last paragraph of the preceding Article.

Art. 7. The Governor General shall regulate the Tariffs to be paid for bonding warehouses, expenses of supervision, and other services actually performed.

Art. 8. No transit duties shall be levied.

Art. 9. For carrying out this Act, and for providing securities against evasions of the duties, the Colonial authorities shall make the necessary regulations.

The regulations at present in opération with respect to the import and export duties, and, whatever is connected with them, shall remain in force only until this Act shall come into operation.

Art. 10. The Regulations of this Act shall not contravene the prohibitions for the whole of Netherlands India, or for certain parts of it, by Colonial authority, with reference to the importation of certain goods or merchandize issued or hereafter to be issued.

Art. 11. This Act shall come into operation on January 1st, 1874.

We direct and command that this Act be published in the Gazette ("Staatsblad"), and that all ministerial departments, authorities, boards and officials, whom it shall concern co-operate to the exact carrying out thereof.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Fort William, the 10*th February* 1873.

No. 978.—The Governor General in Council directs that the following be substituted for Sections 18 and 19 of the Civil Leave Code, and the rules under those sections :—

Section 18.—The amount of privilege leave admissible at one time is limited to three calendar months.

The amount of privilege leave earned by an officer is one-eleventh of the time during which he has been on duty without interruption. Provided that no privilege leave can be earned by an officer by duty done while three months' such leave are due to him.

The privilege leave due to an officer is the privilege leave which he has earned, less the period during which he has been absent on privilege leave.

Absence on privilege leave, though not counting as duty, is not an interruption of duty within the meaning of this section.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

1. To Uncovenanted Judicial and Educational Officers, whose duties are not continuous, and who enjoy regular vacations during which they are allowed to be absent from duty, privilege leave is not admissible except in case of urgent necessity.

2. The Local Government may, with the sanction of the Government of India, impose a similar restriction in the case of Covenanted Officers.

3. Time spent on subsidiary leave does not qualify for privilege leave. But if an officer returning from leave not before the expiration thereof, be, solely for the convenience of the Local Government, and not for any fault of his own, prevented from joining an appointment on which he has a lien; or if he be kept out of employ on subsistence allowance; then, duty qualifying for privilege leave begins on the day on which he presents himself to the Local Government ready for duty.

4. When an officer is first appointed to the public service, duty qualifying for privilege leave does not begin until he takes charge of a particular office.

5. "Examination leave" may, if the examination for which it was granted be successfully passed, count as duty qualifying for privilege leave, unless the officer has already had twelve months' such leave.

6. Suspension from office as a penalty for misconduct is an interruption of duty within the meaning of this section.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

7. If an officer remains absent after the end of examination leave, or of joining time, the period of absence cannot count as duty qualifying for privilege leave, and unless the absence is accounted for to the satisfaction of the Local Government, it is an interruption of duty within the meaning of this section.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

8. With regard to the privilege leave of Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ, no distinction is made between officers who have substantive civil appointments, and those who are merely officiating in the Civil Department. The leave is earned by uninterrupted duty in either the Civil or the Military Department.

Section 19.—To an officer who has been on duty without interruption for eleven calendar months, and who has not, for six calendar months, been absent on privilege leave, the whole or any part of the privilege leave due to him may be granted.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

1. Before privilege leave is granted to an officer, he must record a declaration that he has no intention of retiring or of taking furlough, special leave, or leave on private affairs, or medical certificate, within three months of his return to duty. Though not absolutely debarred, by this declaration, from applying to retire or for such leave within the three months, he should, if he does so, explain fully his change of mind.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

2. If an officer is, on public grounds, recalled to duty from privilege leave before the whole leave granted to him is ended, privilege leave may be granted to him again even within six calendar months from the date of his return to duty.

[NOTE.—This rule applies to Commissioned Military Officers in civil employ.]

13. Payment of married women's deposits.

Rules.

14. Rules regulating certificates under section 8 and payments under section 10, 12 or 13.

An Act to amend the Law relating to Government Savings' Banks.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Law relating to the payment of deposits in Government Savings' Banks; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Government Savings' Banks Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the whole of British India;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XXVI of 1855.

2. Act No. XXVI of 1855 (to facilitate the payment of small deposits in Government Savings' Banks to the representatives of deceased depositors) is hereby repealed.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"Depositor" means a person by whom, or on whose behalf, money has been heretofore, or shall be hereafter, deposited in a Government Savings' Bank, and "deposit" means money so deposited:

"Depositor."

"Deposit."

"Secretary" includes every person empowered to manage a Government Savings' Bank;

"Secretary."

and "Minor" means a person who has not completed the age of eighteen years.

"Minor."

Deposits belonging to the Estates of deceased Persons.

Payment on death of depositor.

4. If a depositor dies, leaving in a Government Savings' Bank a sum of money not exceeding one thousand rupees, and if probate of his will or letters of administration of his estate, or a certificate granted under Act No. XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), is not produced to the Secretary of such Bank within three months of the death of the said depositor, the Secretary of such Bank may pay the said sum of money to any person appearing to him to be entitled to receive it, or to administer the estate of the deceased.

Payment to be a discharge.

5. Such payment shall be a full discharge from all further liability in respect of the money so paid:

Saving of right of executor.

But nothing herein contained precludes any executor or administrator, or other representative of the deceased, from recovering from the person receiving the same the amount remaining in his hands after deducting the amount of all debts or other demands lawfully paid or discharged by him in due course of administration.

Saving of right of creditor.

And any creditor or claimant against the estate of the deceased may recover his debt or claim out of the money paid under this Act, or the said Act No. XXVI of 1855, to any person, and remaining in his hands unadministered, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the latter had obtained letters of administration of the estate of the deceased.

Security for due administration.

6. The Secretary of any such Bank may take such security as he thinks necessary from any person to whom he pays any money under section four for the due administration of the money so paid, and he may assign the said security to any person interested in such administration.

Power to administer oath.

7. For the purpose of ascertaining the right of the person claiming to be entitled as aforesaid, the Secretary of any such Bank may take evidence on oath or affirmation according to the law for the time being relating to oaths and affirmations.

Penalty for false statements.

Any person who, upon such oath or affirmation, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of an offence under section one hundred and ninety-three of the Indian Penal Code.

Deposit when excluded in computing Court Fees.

8. Where the amount of the deposit belonging to the estate of a deceased depositor does not exceed one thousand rupees, such amount shall be excluded in computing the fee chargeable, under the Court Fees' Act, 1870, on the probate, or letters of administration, or certificate (if any), granted in respect of his property:

Provided that the person claiming such probate or letters or certificate shall exhibit to the Court authorised to grant the same a certificate of the amount of the deposit in any Government Savings' Bank belonging to the estate of the deceased. Such certificate shall be signed by the Secretary of such Bank, and the Court shall receive it as evidence of the said amount.

Act not to apply to deposits belonging to estates of European soldiers or deserters.

9. Nothing hereinbefore contained applies to money belonging to the estate of any European officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier dying in Her Majesty's service in India, or of any European who, at the time of his death, was a deserter from the said service.

Deposits belonging to Minors.

Payment of deposits to minor or guardian.

10. Any deposit made by, or on behalf of, any minor, may be paid to him personally, if he made the deposit, or to his guardian for his use, if the deposit was made by any person other than the minor, together with the interest accrued thereon.

The receipt of any minor or guardian, for money paid to him under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Legalization of like payments heretofore made.

11. All payments of deposits heretofore made to minors or their guardians by any Secretary of a Government Savings' Bank shall be deemed to have been made in accordance with law.

Deposits belonging to Lunatics.

Payment of deposits belonging to lunatics.

12. If any depositor becomes insane or otherwise incapable of managing his affairs, and if such insanity or incapacity is proved to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Bank in which his deposit may be, such Secretary may, from time to time, make payments out of the deposit to any proper person, and the receipt of such person, for money paid under this section, shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Where a Committee or Manager of the depositor's estate has been duly appointed, nothing in this section authorises payments to any person other than such Committee or Manager.

Deposits made by Married Women.

Payment of married women's deposits.

13. Any deposit made by or on behalf of a married woman, or by or on behalf of a woman who afterwards marries, may be paid to her, whether or not the Indian Succession Act, 1865, section four, applies to her marriage; and her receipt for money paid to her under this section shall be a sufficient discharge therefor.

Rules.

Rules regulating certificates under section 8 and payments under section 10, 12 or 13.

14. All certificates under section eight, and all payments under section ten, section twelve or section thirteen, shall be respectively granted and made by the Secretary of the Bank, subject to such rules consistent with this Act as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, prescribe.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

[Third Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 28th January 1873, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VI OF 1873.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Transhipment of Goods imported by Steamer, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the transhipment of goods imported by steamer; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Transhipment of Goods Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, and to such other British Indian ports as the Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Act XX of 1867.

2. Act No. XX of 1867 (to authorize the transhipment without payment of duty of goods imported into Calcutta, Madras and Bombay by Steamers) is repealed. But all rules, rates and regulations prescribed under the said Act shall be deemed to have been prescribed under this Act.

Power to permit transhipment without payment of duty.

3. Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, the chief officer of customs of every port to which this Act extends for the time being may, on application of any person interested as owner, agent, consignee or otherwise in any goods imported by steamer into such port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of duty at the port of transhipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the port of destination:

Proviso.

Provided that such goods have been specially and distinctly manifested or declared at the time of import as for transhipment to some other British Indian or foreign port.

Rules regulating exercise of power.

4. The power conferred by section three shall be exercised subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe by notification in the official Gazette.

Levy of transhipment fee.

5. A transhipment fee on each bale or package of any goods or class of goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rates and under such regulations as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time prescribes by notification in the official Gazette.

Power to prohibit transhipment.

6. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by order notified in the Gazette of India, prohibit the transhipment, at any specified port or at all ports, of any specified class of goods, or prescribe any special mode of transhipping any specified class of goods, and may, by like notification, cancel such order.

Duty on opium re-exported by sea.

7. Opium imported by sea into any British Indian port may, if the Local Government think fit, but not otherwise, be re-exported by sea from the same port on payment of a duty equal in amount to the fee to which it would have been liable if it had been transhipped at such port.

Act to be read as part of Act VI of 1863.

8. This Act shall be read as part of the Consolidated Customs Act, and shall not be construed as in any respect limiting the power of the customs officers to levy duty or to require such bonds or other securities as are authorized by the same Act.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

[First Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 11th February 1873, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VII OF 1873.

An Act for the levy of Port-dues in the Ports of British Burma.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient from time to time to bring ports in British Burma under the provisions of Act No. XXII of 1855 (for the regulation of Ports and Port-dues) and to make regulations for the levy of dues in such ports without the necessity of passing a new Act for each occasion; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Burma Port-dues Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends only to the ports of British Burma which shall have been declared subject to the said Act No. XXII of 1855:

To be read with Act XXII of 1855.

It shall be read with and taken as part of the same Act;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of March 1873.

Power to declare maximum amount of port-dues leviable in Burma.

2. In every case in which the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, has declared or hereafter declares any port in British Burma to be subject to the said Act, he may, with the like sanction, by the same or any subsequent declaration, and notwithstanding anything contained in section forty-one of the said Act, further declare—

(a.) the maximum amount of dues to be levied in such port,

(b.) the conditions and modifications under which such dues shall be levied, and may also from time to time, with the like sanction, vary such maximum amount, conditions and modifications.

What vessels chargeable. Limitation of rate.

3. Provided that the dues so authorized shall be charged only on sea-going vessels of the burden of ten tons and upwards, and shall not exceed the rate of four annas for every ton of burden.

SCHEDULE—Enactments repealed.

An Act to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India.

Preamble.

WHEREAS, throughout the territories to which this Act extends, the Government is entitled to use and control for public purposes the water of all rivers and streams flowing in natural channels, and of all lakes and other natural collections of still water; and whereas it is expedient to amend the law relating to irrigation, navigation and drainage in the said territories; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Northern India Canal and Drainage Act, 1873":

Local extent.

It extends to the territories for the time being respectively under the government of the Lieutenant Governors of the North-Western Provinces and the Panjáb, and under the administration of the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces; and applies to all lands whether permanently settled, temporarily settled, or free from revenue;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the passing thereof.

Repeal of Acts.

2. The Acts mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed are repealed to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Canal."

(1) "Canal" includes—

(a) all canals, channels and reservoirs constructed, maintained or controlled by Government for the supply or storage of water;

(b) all works, embankments, structures, supply and escape-channels connected with such canals, channels or reservoirs;

(c) all water-courses as defined in the second clause of this section;

(d) any part of a river, stream, lake or natural collection of water, or natural drainage-channel, to which the Local Government has applied the provisions of Part II of this Act;

"Water-course."

(2) "Water-course" means any channel which is supplied with water from a canal, but which is not maintained at the cost of Government, and all subsidiary works belonging to any such channel;

"Drainage-work."

(3) "Drainage-work" includes escape-channels from a canal, dams, weirs, embankments, sluices, groins and other works for the protection of lands from flood or from erosion, formed or maintained by the Government under the provisions of Part VII of this Act, but does not include works for the removal of sewage from towns;

"Vessel."

(4) "Vessel" includes boats, rafts, timber and other floating bodies;

"Commissioner."

(5) "Commissioner" means a Commissioner of a Division, and includes any officer appointed under this Act to exercise all or any of the powers of a Commissioner;

"Collector."

(6) "Collector" means the head revenue officer of a district, and includes a Deputy Commissioner or other officer appointed under this Act to exercise all or any of the powers of a Collector;

"Canal Officer."

(7) "Canal Officer" means an officer appointed under this Act to exercise control or jurisdiction over a canal or any part thereof;

"Superintending Canal Officer" means an officer exercising general control over a canal or portion of a canal;

"Divisional Canal Officer" means an officer exercising control over a division of a canal;

"Sub-Divisional Canal Officer" means an officer exercising control over a sub-division of a canal;

"District."

(8) "District" means a district as fixed for revenue purposes.

Power to appoint officers.

4. The Local Government may from time to time declare, by notification in the official Gazette, the officers by whom, and the local limits within which, all or any of the powers or duties hereinafter conferred or imposed shall be exercised or performed.

All officers mentioned in section three, clause (7), shall be respectively subject to the orders of such officers as the Local Government from time to time directs.

PART II.

OF THE APPLICATION OF WATER FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES.

Notification to issue when water-supply is to be applied for public purposes.

5. Whenever it appears expedient to the Local Government that the water of any river or stream flowing in a natural channel, or of any lake or other natural collection of still water, should be applied or used by the Government for the purpose of any existing or projected canal or drainage-work, the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, declare that the said water will be so applied or used after a day to be named in the said notification, not being earlier than three months from the date thereof.

Powers of Canal Officer.

6. At any time after the day so named, any Canal Officer, acting under the orders of the Local Government in this behalf, may enter on any land and remove any obstructions, and may close any channels, and do any other thing necessary for such application or use of the said water.

Notice as to claims for compensation.

7. As soon as is practicable after the issue of such notification, the Collector shall cause public notice to be given at convenient places, stating that the Government intends to apply or use the said water as aforesaid, and that claims for compensation in respect of the matters mentioned in section eight may be made before him.

Damage for which compensation shall not be awarded.

8. No compensation shall be awarded for any damage caused by—

(a) stoppage or diminution of percolation or floods,

(b) deterioration of climate or soil;

(c) stoppage of navigation, or of the means of drifting timber or watering cattle;

(d) displacement of labour.

Matters in respect of which compensation may be awarded.

But compensation may be awarded in respect of any of the following matters:

(e) Stoppage or diminution of supply of water through any natural channel to any defined artificial channel, whether above or under ground, in use at the date of the said notification:

(f) Stoppage or diminution of supply of water to any work erected for purposes of profit on any channel, whether natural or artificial, in use at the date of the said notification:

(g) Stoppage or diminution of supply of water through any natural channel which has been used for purposes of irrigation within the five years next before the date of the said notification:

(h) Damage done in respect of any right to a water-course or the use of any water to which any person is entitled under the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, Part IV:

(i) Any other substantial damage, not falling under any of the above clauses (a), (b), (c) or (d), and caused by the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, which is capable of being ascertained and estimated at the time of awarding such compensation.

In determining the amount of such compensation, regard shall be had to the diminution in the market-value, at the time of awarding compensation, of the property in respect of which compensation is claimed; and where such market-value is not ascertainable, the amount shall be reckoned at twelve times the amount of the diminution of the annual nett profits of such property, caused by the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act.

No right to any such supply of water as is referred to in clause (e), (f) or (g) of this section, in respect of a work or channel not in use at the date of the notification, shall be acquired as against the Government, except by grant or under the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, Part IV.

And no right to any of the advantages referred to in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of this section shall be acquired, as against the Government, under the same Part.

Limitation of claims.

9. No claim for compensation for any such stoppage, diminution or damage shall be made after the expiration of one year from such stoppage, diminution or damage, unless the Collector is satisfied that the claimant had sufficient cause for not making the claim within such period.

Enquiry into claims and amount of compensation.

10. The Collector shall proceed to enquire into any such claim, and to determine the amount of compensation, if any, which should be given to the claimant; and sections nine to twelve (inclusive), fourteen and fifteen, eighteen to twenty-three (inclusive), twenty-six to forty (inclusive), fifty-one, fifty-seven, fifty-eight and fifty-nine of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, shall apply to such enquiries:

Provided that, instead of the last clause of the said section twenty-six, the following shall be read: "The provisions of this section and of section eight of the Northern India Canal and Drainage Act, 1873, shall be read to every assessor in a language which he understands, before he gives his opinion as to the amount of compensation to be awarded."

Abatement of rent on interruption of water-supply.

11. Every tenant holding under an unexpired lease, or having a right of occupancy, who is in occupation of any land at the time when any stoppage or diminution of water-supply, in respect of which compensation is allowed under section eight, takes place, may claim an abatement of the rent previously payable by him for the said land, on the ground that the interruption reduces the value of the holding.

Enhancement of rent on restoration of water-supply.

12. If a water-supply increasing the value of such holding is afterwards restored to the said land, the rent of the tenant may be enhanced, in respect of the increased value of such land due to the restored water-supply, to an amount not exceeding that at which it stood immediately before the abatement.

Such enhancement shall be on account only of the restored water-supply, and shall not affect the liability of the tenant to enhancement of rent on any other grounds.

Compensation when due.

13. All sums of money payable for compensation under this Part shall become due three months after the claim for such compensation is made in respect of the stoppage, diminution or damage complained of,

Interest.

and simple interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum shall be allowed on any such sum remaining unpaid after the said three months, except where the non-payment of such sum is caused by the wilful neglect or refusal of the claimant to receive the same.

PART III.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF WORKS.

Power to enter and survey, &c.

14. Any Canal Officer or other person acting under the general or special order of a Canal Officer, may enter upon any lands adjacent to any canal, or through which any canal is proposed to be made, and undertake surveys or levels thereon;

and dig and bore into the sub-soil;

and make and set up suitable land-marks, level-marks, and water-gauges;

and do all other acts necessary for the proper prosecution of any enquiry relating to any existing or projected canal under the charge of the said Canal Officer:

Power to clear land.

and, where otherwise such enquiry cannot be completed, such officer or other person may cut down and clear away any part of any standing crop, fence or jungle;

Power to inspect and regulate water-supply.

and may also enter upon any land, building or water-course on account of which any water-rate is chargeable, for the purpose of inspecting or regulating the use of the water supplied, or of measuring the lands irrigated thereby or chargeable with a water-rate, and of doing all things necessary for the proper regulation and management of such canal:

Notice of intended entry into houses.

Provided that, if such Canal Officer or person proposes to enter into any building or enclosed court or garden attached to a dwelling-house not supplied with water flowing from any canal, he shall previously give the occupier of such building, court or garden at least seven days' notice in writing of his intention to do so.

Compensation for damage caused by entry.

In every case of entry under this section, the Canal Officer shall, at the time of such entry, tender compensation for any damage which may be occasioned by any proceeding under this section; and in case of dispute as to the sufficiency of the amount so tendered, he shall forthwith refer the same for decision by the Collector, and such decision shall be final.

Power to enter for repairs and to prevent accidents.

15. In case of any accident happening or being apprehended to a canal, any Divisional Canal Officer or any person acting under his general or special orders in this behalf may enter upon any lands adjacent to such canal, and may execute all works which may be necessary for the purpose of repairing or preventing such accident.

Compensation for damage to land.

In every such case, such Canal Officer or person shall tender compensation to the proprietors or occupiers of the said lands for all damage done to the same. If such tender is not accepted, the Canal Officer shall refer the matter to the Collector, who shall proceed to award compensation for the damage as though the Local Government had directed the occupation of the lands under section forty-three of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

Application by persons desiring to use canal-water.

16. Any persons desiring to use the water of any canal, may apply in writing to the Divisional or Sub-Divisional Canal Officer of the Division or Sub-Division of the canal from which the water-course is to be supplied, requesting such officer to construct or improve a water-course at the cost of the applicants.

Contents of application.

The application shall state the works to be undertaken, their approximate estimated cost, or the amount which the applicants are willing to pay for the same, or whether they engage to pay the actual cost as settled by the Divisional Canal Officer, and how the payment is to be made.

Liability of applicants for cost of works.

When the assent of the Superintending Canal Officer is given to such application, all the applicants shall, after the application has been duly attested before the Collector, be jointly and severally liable for the cost of such works to the extent mentioned therein.

Recovery of amount due.

Any amount becoming due under the terms of such application, and not paid to the Divisional Canal Officer, or the person authorized by him to receive the same, on or before the date on which it becomes due, shall, on the demand of such officer, be recoverable by the Collector as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Government to provide means of crossing canals.

17. There shall be provided, at the cost of Government, suitable means of crossing canals constructed or maintained at the cost of Government, at such places as the Local Government thinks necessary for the reasonable convenience of the inhabitants of the adjacent lands.

On receiving a statement in writing, signed by not less than five of the owners of such lands, to the effect that suitable crossings have not been provided on any canal, the Collector shall cause enquiry to be made into the circumstances of the case, and if he thinks that the statement is established, he shall report his opinion thereon for the consideration of the Local Government, and the Local Government shall cause such measures in reference thereto to be taken as it thinks proper.

Persons using water-course to construct works for passing water across roads, &c.

18. The Divisional Canal Officer may issue an order to the persons using any water-course to construct suitable bridges, culverts, or other works for the passage of the water of such water-course across any public road, canal or drainage-channel in use before the said water-course was made, or to repair any such works.

If they fail, Canal Officer may construct,

Such order shall specify a reasonable period within which such construction or repairs shall be completed;

and if, after the receipt of such order, the persons to whom it is addressed do not, within the said period, construct or repair such works to the satisfaction of the said Canal Officer, he may, with the previous approval of the Superintending Canal Officer, himself construct or repair the same;

and recover cost.

and if the said persons do not, when so required, pay the cost of such construction or repairs as declared by the Divisional Canal Officer, the amount shall, on the demand of the Divisional Canal Officer, be recoverable from them by the Collector, as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Adjustment of claims between persons jointly using water-course.

19. If any person, jointly responsible with others for the construction or maintenance of a water-course, or jointly making use of a water-course with others, neglects or refuses to pay his share of the cost of such construction or maintenance, or to execute his share of any work necessary for such construction or maintenance, the Divisional or Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, on receiving an application in writing from any person injured by such neglect or refusal, shall serve notice on all the parties concerned that, on the expiration of a fortnight from the service, he will investigate the case; and shall, on the expiration of that period, investigate the case accordingly, and make such order thereon as to him seems fit.

Such order shall be appealable to the Commissioner, whose order thereon shall be final.

Recovery of amount found due.

Any sum directed by such order to be paid within a specified period, may, if not paid within such period, and if the order remains in force, be recovered by the Collector from the person directed to pay the same, as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Supply of water through intervening water-course.

20. Whenever application is made to a Divisional Canal Officer for a supply of water from a canal, and it appears to him expedient that such supply should be given and that it should be conveyed through some existing water-course, he shall give notice to the persons responsible for the maintenance of such water-course to show cause, on a day not less than fourteen days from the date of such notice, why the said supply should not be so conveyed; and, after making enquiry on such day, the Divisional Canal Officer shall determine whether and on what conditions the said supply shall be conveyed through such water-course.

When such officer determines that a supply of canal-water may be conveyed through any water-course as aforesaid, his decision shall, when confirmed or modified by the Superintending Canal Officer, be binding on the applicant and also on the persons responsible for the maintenance of the said water-course.

Such applicant shall not be entitled to use such water-course until he has paid the expense of any alteration of such water-course necessary in order to his being supplied through it, and also such share of the first cost of such water-course as the Divisional or Superintending Canal Officer may determine.

Such applicant shall also be liable for his share of the cost of maintenance of such water-course so long as he uses it.

Application for construction of new water-course.

21. Any person desiring the construction of a new water-course may apply in writing to the Divisional Canal Officer, stating—

(1) that he has endeavoured unsuccessfully to acquire from the owners of the land through which he desires such water-course to pass a right to occupy so much of the land as will be needed for such water-course;

(2) that he desires the said Canal Officer, in his behalf and at his cost, to do all things necessary for acquiring such right;

(3) that he is able to defray all costs involved in acquiring such right and constructing such water-course.

Procedure of Canal Officer thereupon.

22. If the Divisional Canal Officer considers—

(1) that the construction of such water-course is expedient, and

(2) that the statements in the application are true,

he shall call upon the applicant to make such deposit as the Divisional Canal Officer considers necessary to defray the cost of the preliminary proceedings, and the amount of any compensation which he considers likely to become due under section twenty-eight;

and, upon such deposit being made, he shall cause inquiry to be made into the most suitable alignment for the said water-course, and shall mark out the land which, in his opinion, it will be necessary to occupy for the construction thereof, and shall forthwith publish a notice in every village through which the water-course is proposed to be taken, that so much of such land as belongs to such village has been so marked out, and shall send a copy of such notice to the Collector of every district in which any part of such land is situate.

Application for transfer of existing water-course.

23. Any person desiring that an existing water-course should be transferred from its present owner to himself, may apply in writing to the Divisional Canal Officer, stating—

(1) that he has endeavoured unsuccessfully to procure such transfer from the owner of such water-course;

(2) that he desires the said Canal Officer, in his behalf and at his cost, to do all things necessary for procuring such transfer;

(3) that he is able to defray the cost of such transfer.

Procedure thereupon.

If the Divisional Canal Officer considers—

(a) that the said transfer is necessary for the better management of the irrigation from such water-course, and

(b) that the statements in the application are true,

he shall call upon the applicant to make such deposit as the Divisional Canal Officer considers necessary to defray the cost of the preliminary proceedings, and the amount of any compensation that may become due under the provisions of section twenty-eight in respect of such transfer; and, upon such deposit being made, he shall publish a notice of the application in every village, and shall send a copy of the notice to the Collector of every district through which such water-course passes.

Objections to construction or transfer applied for.

24. Within thirty days from the publication of a notice under section twenty-two or section twenty-three, as the case may be, any person interested in the land or water-course to which the notice refers may apply to the Collector by petition, stating his objection to the construction or transfer for which application has been made.

The Collector may either reject the petition or may proceed to inquire into the validity of the objection, giving previous notice to the Divisional Canal Officer of the place and time at which such inquiry will be held.

The Collector shall record in writing all orders passed by him under this section and the grounds thereof.

When applicant may be placed in occupation.

25. If no such objection is made, or (where such objection is made) if the Collector over-rules it, he shall give notice to the Divisional Canal Officer to that effect, and shall proceed forthwith to place the said applicant in occupation of the land marked out or of the water-course to be transferred, as the case may be.

Procedure when objection is held valid.

26. If the Collector considers any objection made as aforesaid to be valid, he shall inform the Divisional Canal Officer accordingly; and, if such officer sees fit, he may, in the case of an application under section twenty-one, alter the boundaries of the land so marked out, and may give fresh notice under section twenty-two; and the procedure hereinbefore provided shall be applicable to such notice, and the Collector shall thereupon proceed as before provided.

Procedure when Canal Officer disagrees with Collector.

27. If the Canal Officer disagrees with the Collector, the matter shall be referred for decision to the Commissioner.

Such decision shall be final, and the Collector, if he is so directed by such decision, shall, subject to the provisions of section twenty-eight, cause the said applicant to be placed in occupation of the land so marked out or of the water-course to be transferred, as the case may be.

Expenses to be paid by applicant before receiving occupation.

28. No such applicant shall be placed in occupation of such land or water-course, until he has paid to the person named by the Collector such amount as the Collector determines to be due as compensation for the land or water-course so occupied or transferred, and for any damage caused by the marking out or occupation of such land, together with all expenses incidental to such occupation or transfer.

Procedure in fixing compensation.

In determining the compensation to be made under this section, the Collector shall proceed under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870; but he may, if the person to be compensated so desire, award such compensation in the form of a rent-charge payable in respect of the land or water-course occupied or transferred.

Recovery of compensation and expenses.

If such compensation and expenses are not paid when demanded by the person entitled to receive the same, the amount may be recovered by the Collector as if it were an arrear of land-revenue, and shall, when recovered, be paid by him to the person entitled to receive the same.

Conditions binding on applicant placed in occupation.

29. When any such applicant is placed in occupation of land or of a water-course as aforesaid, the following rules and conditions shall be binding on him and his representative in interest:—

First.—All works necessary for the passage across such water-course, of water-courses existing previous to its construction and of the drainage intercepted by it, and for affording proper communications across it for the convenience of the neighbouring lands, shall be constructed by the applicant, and be maintained by him or his representative in interest to the satisfaction of the Divisional Canal Officer.

Second.—Land occupied for a water-course under the provisions of section twenty-two shall be used only for the purpose of such water-course.

Third.—The proposed water-course shall be completed to the satisfaction of the Divisional Canal Officer within one year after the applicant is placed in occupation of the land.

In cases in which land is occupied or a water-course is transferred on the terms of a rent-charge,

Fourth.—The applicant or his representative in interest shall, so long as he occupies such land or water-course, pay rent for the same at such rate and on such days as are determined by the Collector when the applicant is placed in occupation.

Fifth.—If the right to occupy the land cease owing to a breach of any of these rules, the liability to pay the said rent shall continue until the applicant or his representative in interest has restored the land to its original condition, or until he has paid, by way of compensation for any injury done to the said land, such amount and to such persons as the Collector determines.

Sixth.—The Collector may, on the application of the person entitled to receive such rent or compensation, determine the amount of rent due or assess the amount of such compensation; and if any such rent or compensation be not paid by the applicant or his representative in interest, the Collector may recover the amount, with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the date on which it became due, as if it were an arrear of land-revenue, and shall pay the same, when recovered, to the person to whom it is due.

If any of the rules and conditions prescribed by this section are not complied with, or if any water-course constructed or transferred under this Act is disused for three years continuously, the right of the applicant, or of his representative in interest, to occupy such land or water-course shall cease absolutely.

Procedure applicable to occupation for extensions and alterations.

30. The procedure hereinbefore provided for the occupation of land for the construction of a water-course shall be applicable to the occupation of land for any extension or alteration of a water-course, and for the deposit of soil from water-course clearances.

PART IV.

OF THE SUPPLY OF WATER.

In absence of written contract, water-supply to be subject to rules.

31. In the absence of a written contract, or so far as any such contract does not extend, every supply of canal-water shall be deemed to be given at the rates and subject to the conditions prescribed by the rules to be made by the Local Government in respect thereof.

Conditions as to—

32. Such contracts and rules must be consistent with the following conditions:—

power to stop water-supply;

(a) The Divisional Canal Officer may not stop the supply of water to any water-course, or to any person, except in the following cases:—

(1) whenever and so long as it is necessary to stop such supply for the purpose of executing any work ordered by competent authority, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government:

(2) whenever and so long as any water-course is not maintained in such proper customary repair as to prevent the wasteful escape of water therefrom:

(3) within periods fixed from time to time by the Divisional Canal Officer:

claims to compensation in case of failure or stoppage of supply;

(b) No claim shall be made against the Government for compensation in respect of loss caused by the failure or stoppage of the water in a canal, by reason of any cause beyond the control of the Government, or of any repairs, alterations or additions to the canal, or of any measures taken for regulating the proper flow of water therein, or for maintaining the established course of irrigation which the Divisional Canal Officer considers necessary; but the person suffering such loss may claim such remission of the ordinary charges payable for the use of the water as is authorized by the Local Government:

claims on account of interruption from other causes;

(c) If the supply of water to any land irrigated from a canal be interrupted otherwise than in the manner described in the last preceding clause, the occupier or owner of such land may present a petition for compensation to the Collector for any loss arising from such interruption, and the Collector may award to the petitioner reasonable compensation for such loss:

duration of supply;

(d) When the water of a canal is supplied for the irrigation of a single crop, the permission to use such water shall be held to continue only until that crop comes to maturity, and to apply only to that crop; but if it be supplied for irrigating two or more crops to be raised on the same land within the year, such permission shall be held to continue for one year from the commencement of the irrigation, and to apply to such crops only as are matured within that year:

sale or sub-letting of canal-water;

(e) Unless with the permission of the Superintending Canal Officer, no person entitled to use the water of any canal, or any work, building or land appertaining to any canal, shall sell or sub-let or otherwise transfer his right to such use: Provided that the former part of this clause shall not apply to the use by a cultivating tenant of water supplied by the owner of a water-course for the irrigation of the land held by such tenant:

transfer, with land, of contracts for water;

But all contracts made between Government and the owner or occupier of any immovable property, as to the supply of canal-water to such property, shall be transferable therewith, and shall be presumed to have been so transferred whenever a transfer of such property takes place:

(f) No right to the use of the water of a canal shall be, or be deemed to have been, acquired under the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, Part IV, nor shall Government be bound to supply any person with water, except in accordance with the terms of a contract in writing.

No right acquired by user.

PART V.

OF WATER-RATES.

33. If water supplied through a water-course be used in an unauthorized manner, and if the person by whose act or neglect such use has occurred cannot be identified, Liability when person using unauthorizedly cannot be identified.

the person on whose land such water has flowed if such land has derived benefit therefrom, or if such person cannot be identified, or if such land has not derived benefit therefrom, all the persons chargeable in respect of the water supplied through such water-course, shall be liable, or jointly liable, as the case may be, to the charges made for such use.

34. If water supplied through a water-course be suffered to run to waste, and if, after enquiry by the Divisional Canal Officer, the person through whose act or neglect such water was suffered to run to waste cannot be discovered, all the persons chargeable in respect of the water supplied through such water-course shall be jointly liable for the charges made in respect of the water so wasted.

Liability when water runs to waste.

35. All charges for the unauthorized use or for waste of water may be recovered in addition to any penalties incurred on account of such use or waste.

Charges recoverable in addition to penalties.

All questions under section thirty-three or section thirty-four shall be decided by the Divisional Canal Officer, subject to an appeal to the head revenue officer of the district, or such other appeal as may be provided under section seventy-five.

Decision of questions under sections 33 and 34.

36. The rates to be charged for canal-water supplied for purposes of irrigation to the occupiers of land shall be determined by the rules to be made by the Local Government, and such occupiers as accept the water shall pay for it accordingly.

Charge on occupier for water how determined.

A rate so charged shall be called the "occupier's rate."

'Occupier's rate.'

37. In addition to the occupier's rate, a rate to be called the "owner's rate" may be imposed, according to rules to be made by the Local Government, on the owners of canal-irrigated lands, in respect of the benefit which they derive from such irrigation.

'Owner's rate.'

38. The owner's rate shall not exceed the sum which, under the rules for the time being in force for the assessment of land-revenue, might be assessed on such land, on account of the increase in the annual value or produce thereof caused by the canal-irrigation. And for the purpose of this section only, land which is permanently settled or held free of revenue, shall be considered as though it were temporarily settled and liable to payment of revenue.

Amount of owner's rate.

39. No owner's rate shall be chargeable either on the owner or occupier of land temporarily assessed to pay land-revenue at irrigation rates, during the currency of such assessment.

Owner's rate not chargeable in respect of land temporarily assessed to land-revenue at irrigation rates.

40. If such land is occupied by the owner,

When occupier is to pay both owner's rate and occupier's rate.

or if it is occupied by a tenant whose rent is not liable to enhancement on the ground that the value of the produce of the land or the productive powers of the land has or have been increased by irrigation, such owner or tenant shall pay the owner's rate as well as the occupier's rate.

41. In the case of a tenant with a right of occupancy, the Local Government shall have power to make rules for dividing the owner's rate between such tenant and his landlord, proportionately to the extent of the beneficial interest of each in the land.

Power to make rules for apportioning owner's rate.

42. If the owner of the land is not the occupier, but has power to enhance the rent of the occupier on the ground that the value of the produce or the productive powers of the land has or have been increased by irrigation;

When owner is to pay owner's rate.

or if, when the amount of rent was fixed, the land was irrigated from the canal, the owner shall pay the owner's rate.

43. If a revision of settlement is a ground for entertaining a suit for the enhancement of rent, the introduction of canal-irrigation into any land shall have the same effect on the landlord's right to re-enhance the rent of a tenant with a right of occupancy of such land, as if a revision of settlement had taken place, under which the revenue payable in respect of such land had been increased.

Effect of introduction of canal-irrigation on landlord's right to enhance.

44. Where a water-rate is charged on land held by several joint owners, it shall be payable by the manager or other person who receives the rents or profits of such land, and may be deducted by him from such rents or profits before division, or may be recovered by him from the persons liable to such rate in the manner customary in the recovery of other charges on such rents or profits.

Water-rate by whom payable when charged on land held by several owners.

Recovery of Charges.

45. Any sum, lawfully due under this Part, and certified by the Divisional Canal Officer to be so due, which remains unpaid after the day on which it becomes due, shall be recoverable by the Collector from the person liable for the same as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Certified dues recoverable as land-revenue.

Power to contract for collection of canal-dues.

46. The Divisional Canal Officer or the Collector may enter into an agreement with any person for the collection and payment to the Government by such person of any sum payable under this Act by a third party.

When such agreement has been made, such person may recover such sum by suit as though it were a debt due to him, or an arrear of rent due to him on account of the land, work or building in respect of which such sum is payable, or for or in which the canal-water shall have been supplied or used.

If such person makes default in the payment of any sum collected by him under this section, such sum may be recovered from him by the Collector under section forty-five; and if such sum or any part of it be still due by the said third party, the sum or part so due may be recovered in like manner by the Collector from such third party.

Lambardárs may be required to collect canal-dues.

47. The Collector may require the lambardár or person under engagement to pay the land-revenue of any estate, to collect and pay any sums payable under this Act by a third party, in respect of any land or water in such estate.

Such sums shall be recoverable by the Collector as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of the defaulter's share in such estate; and for the purpose of collecting such sums from the subordinate zamíndárs, ryots, or tenants, such lambardár or person may exercise the powers, and shall be subject to the rules, laid down in the law for the time being in force, in respect to the collection by him of the rents of land or of shares of land-revenue.

The Local Government shall provide

(a) for remunerating persons collecting sums under this section; or

(b) for indemnifying them against expenses properly incurred by them in such collection; or

(c) for both such purposes.

Fines excluded from sections 45, 46, 47.

48. Nothing in sections forty-five, forty-six, or forty-seven applies to fines.

PART VI.

OF CANAL-NAVIGATION.

Detainer of vessels violating rules.

49. Any vessel entering or navigating any canal contrary to the rules made in that behalf by the Local Government, or so as to cause danger to the canal or the other vessels therein, may be removed, or detained, or both removed and detained, by the Divisional Canal Officer, or by any other person duly authorized in this behalf.

Liability of owners of vessels causing damage.

The owner of any vessel causing damage to a canal, or removed or detained under this section, shall be liable to pay to the Government such sum as the Divisional Canal Officer, with the approval of the Superintending Canal Officer, determines to be necessary to defray the expenses of repairing such damage, or of such removal or detention, as the case may be.

Recovery of fines for offences in navigating canals.

50. Any fine imposed under this Act upon the owner of any vessel, or the servant or agent of such owner or other person in charge of any vessel, for any offence in respect of the navigation of such vessel, may be recovered either in the manner prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure, or, if the Magistrate imposing the fine so directs, as though it were a charge due in respect of such vessel.

Power to seize and detain vessel on failure to pay charges.

51. If any charge due under the provisions of this Part in respect of any vessel is not paid on demand to the person authorized to collect the same, the Divisional Canal Officer may seize and detain such vessel and the furniture thereof, until the charge so due, together with all expenses and additional charges arising from such seizure and detention, is paid in full.

Power to seize cargo or goods, if charges due thereon are not paid.

52. If any charge due under the provisions of this Part in respect of any cargo or goods carried in a Government vessel on a canal, or stored on or in lands or warehouses occupied for the purposes of a canal, is not paid on demand to the person authorized to collect the same, the Divisional Canal Officer may seize such cargo or goods and detain them until the charge so due, together with all expenses and additional charges arising from such seizure and detention, is paid in full.

Procedure for recovery of such charges after seizure.

53. Within a reasonable time after any seizure under section fifty-one or section fifty-two the said Canal Officer shall give notice to the owner or person in charge of the property seized that it, or such portion of it as may be necessary, will, on a day to be named in the notice, but not sooner than fifteen days from the date of the notice, be sold in satisfaction of the claim on account of which such property was seized, unless the claim be discharged before the day so named:

And if such claim be not so discharged, the said Canal Officer may, on such day, sell the property seized or such part thereof as may be necessary to yield the amount due, together with the expenses of such seizure and sale:

Provided that no greater part of the furniture of any vessel or of any cargo or goods shall be so sold than shall, as nearly as may be, suffice to cover the amount due in respect of such vessel, cargo or goods.

The residue of such furniture, cargo or goods, and of the proceeds of the sale, shall be made over to the owner or person in charge of the property seized.

Procedure in respect of vessels abandoned and goods unclaimed.

54. If any vessel be found abandoned in a canal, or any cargo or goods carried in a Government vessel on a canal or stored on or in lands or warehouses occupied for the purposes of a canal, be left unclaimed for a period of two months, the Divisional Canal Officer may take possession of the same.

The officer so taking possession may publish a notice that, if such vessel and its contents, or such cargo or goods, are not claimed previously to a day to be named in the notice, not sooner than thirty days from the date of such notice, he will sell the same; and, if such vessel, contents, cargo or goods be not so claimed, he may, at any time after the day named in the notice, proceed to sell the same.

Disposal of proceeds of sale.

The said vessel and its contents, and the said cargo or goods, if unsold, or, if a sale has taken place, the proceeds of the sale, after paying all tolls, charges and expenses incurred by the Divisional Canal Officer on account of the taking possession and sale, shall be made over to the owner of the same, when his ownership is established to the satisfaction of the Divisional Canal Officer.

If the Divisional Canal Officer is doubtful to whom such property or proceeds should be made over, he may direct the property to be sold as aforesaid, and the proceeds to be paid into the district treasury, there to be held until the right thereto be decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction.

PART VII.

OF DRAINAGE.

Power to prohibit obstructions or order their removal.

55. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that injury to any land or the public health or public convenience has arisen or may arise from the obstruction of any river, stream or drainage-channel, such Government may, by notification published in the official Gazette, prohibit, within limits to be defined in such notification, the formation of any obstruction, or may, within such limits, order the removal or other modification of such obstruction.

Thereupon so much of the said river, stream or drainage-channel as is comprised within such limits, shall be held to be a drainage-work as defined in section three.

Power to remove obstructions after prohibition.

56. The Divisional Canal Officer, or other person authorized by the Local Government in that behalf, may, after such publication, issue an order to the person causing or having control over any such obstruction to remove or modify the same within a time to be fixed in the order.

If, within the time so fixed, such person does not comply with the order, the said Canal Officer may himself remove or modify the obstruction; and if the person to whom the order was issued does not, when called upon, pay the expenses involved in such removal or modification, such expenses shall be recoverable by the Collector from him or his representative in interest as an arrear of land-revenue.

Preparation of schemes for works of improvement.

57. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any drainage-works are necessary for the improvement of any lands, or for the proper cultivation or irrigation thereof, or that protection from floods or other accumulations of water, or from erosion by a river, is required for any lands, the Local Government may cause a scheme for such drainage-works to be drawn up and published, together with an estimate of its cost and a statement of the proportion of such cost which the Government proposes to defray, and a schedule of the lands which it is proposed to make chargeable in respect of the scheme.

Powers of persons employed on such schemes.

58. The persons authorized by the Local Government to draw up such scheme may exercise all or any of the powers conferred on Canal Officers by section fourteen.

Rate on lands benefited by works.

59. An annual rate, in respect of such scheme, may be charged, according to rules to be made by the Local Government, on the owners of all lands which shall, in the manner prescribed by such rules, be determined to be so chargeable.

Such rate shall be fixed as nearly as possible so as not to exceed either of the following limits:—

(1.) Six per cent. per annum on the first cost of the said works, adding thereto the estimated yearly cost of the maintenance and supervision of the same, and deducting therefrom the estimated income, if any, derived from the works, excluding the said rate:

(2.) In the case of agricultural land, the sum which, under the rules then in force for the assessment of land-revenue, might be assessed on such land on account of the increase of the annual value or produce thereof caused by the drainage-work.

Such rate may be varied from time to time within such maximum by the Local Government.

So far as any defect to be remedied is due to any canal, water-course, road or other work or obstruction, constructed or caused by the Local Government or by any person, a proportionate share of the cost of the drainage-works required for the remedy of the said defect shall be borne by such Government or such person as the case may be.

Recovery of rate.

60. Any such drainage-rate may be collected and recovered in manner provided by sections forty-five, forty-six and forty-seven, for the collection and recovery of water-rates.

Disposal of claims to compensation.

61. Whenever, in pursuance of a notification made under section fifty-five, any obstruction is removed or modified, or whenever any drainage-work is carried out under section fifty-seven, all claims for compensation on account of any loss consequent on the removal or modification of the said obstruction or the construction of such work, may be made before the Collector, and he shall deal with the same in the manner provided in section ten.

Limitation of such claims.

62. No such claim shall be entertained after the expiration of one year from the occurrence of the loss complained of, unless the Collector is satisfied that the claimant had sufficient cause for not making the claim within such period.

PART VIII.

OF OBTAINING LABOUR FOR CANALS AND DRAINAGE WORKS.

Definition of "labourer."

63. For the purposes referred to in this Part, the word "labourer" includes persons who exercise any handicraft specified in rules to be made in that behalf by the Local Government.

64. In any district in which a canal or drainage-work is constructed, maintained or projected by Government, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, direct the Collector Power to prescribe number of labourers to be supplied by persons benefited by canal.

(a) to ascertain the proprietors, sub-proprietors or farmers, whose villages or estates are or will be, in the judgment of the Collector, benefited by such canal or drainage-work, and

(b) to set down in a list, having due regard to the circumstances of the district and of the several proprietors, sub-proprietors or farmers, the number of labourers which shall be furnished by any of the said persons, jointly or severally, from any such village or estate, for employment on any such canal or drainage-work when required as hereinafter provided.

The Collector may, from time to time, add to or alter such list or any part thereof.

65. Whenever it appears to a Divisional Canal Officer duly authorized by the Local Government, that, unless some work is immediately executed, such serious damage will happen to any canal or drainage-work as to cause sudden and extensive public injury, Procedure for obtaining labour for works urgently required.

and that the labourers necessary for the proper execution thereof cannot be obtained in the ordinary manner within the time that can be allowed for the execution of such work so as to prevent such injury, the said officer may require any person named in such list to furnish as many labourers (not exceeding the number which, according to the said list, he is liable to supply) as to the said officer seem necessary for the immediate execution of such work..

Every requisition so made shall be in writing, and shall state

(a) the nature and locality of the work to be done,

(b) the number of labourers to be supplied by the person upon whom the requisition is made, and

(c) the approximate time for which and the day on which the labourers will be required;

and a copy thereof shall be immediately sent to the Superintending Canal Officer for the information of the Local Government.

The Local Government shall fix, and may from time to time alter, the rates to be paid to any such labourers: provided that such rates shall exceed the highest rates for the time being paid in the neighbourhood for similar work. In the case of every such labourer, the payment shall continue for the whole period during which he is, in consequence of the provisions of this Part, prevented from following his ordinary occupation.

The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, direct that the provisions of this Part shall apply, either permanently or temporarily (as the case may be), to any district or part of a district for the purpose of effecting necessary annual silt-clearances, or to prevent the proper operation of a canal or drainage-work being stopped or so much interfered with as to stop the established course of irrigation or drainage.

66. When any requisition has been made on any person named in the said list, every labourer ordinarily resident within the village or estate of such person shall be liable to supply, and to continue to supply, his labour, for the purposes aforesaid.

Liability of labourers under requisition.

PART IX.

OF JURISDICTION.

67. Except where herein otherwise provided, all claims against Government in respect of anything done under this Act may be tried by the Civil Courts; but no such Court shall in any case pass an order as to the supply of canal-water to any crop sown or growing at the time of such order.

Jurisdiction under this Act of Civil Courts.

68. Whenever a difference arises between two or more persons in regard to their mutual rights or liabilities in respect of the use, construction, or maintenance of a water-course, any such person may apply in writing to the Divisional Canal Officer stating the matter in dispute. Such officer shall thereupon give notice to the other persons interested that, on a day to be named in such notice, he will proceed to enquire into the said matter. And, after such enquiry, he shall pass his order thereon, unless he transfers (as he is hereby empowered to do) the matter to the Collector, who shall thereupon enquire into and pass his order on the said matter.

Settlement of differences as to mutual rights and liabilities of persons interested in water-course.

Such order shall be final as to the use or distribution of water for any crop sown or growing at the time when such order is made, and shall thereafter remain in force until set aside by the decree of a Civil Court.

69. Any officer empowered under this Act to conduct any inquiry may exercise all such powers connected with the summoning and examining of witnesses, as are conferred on Civil Courts by the Code of Civil Procedure; and every such inquiry shall be deemed a judicial proceeding.

Power to summon and examine witnesses.

PART X.

OF OFFENCES AND PENALTIES.

70. Whoever, without proper authority and voluntarily, does any of the acts following, that is to say,— Offences under Act.

(1) damages, alters, enlarges or obstructs any canal or drainage-work;

(2) interferes with, increases or diminishes the supply of water in, or the flow of water from, through, over or under, any canal or drainage-work;

(3) interferes with or alters the flow of water in any river or stream, so as to endanger, damage or render less useful any canal or drainage-work;

(4) being responsible for the maintenance of a water-course, or using a water-course, neglects to take proper precautions for the prevention of waste of the water thereof, or interferes with the authorized distribution of the water therefrom, or uses such water in an unauthorized manner;

(5) corrupts or fouls the water of any canal so as to render it less fit for the purposes for which it is ordinarily used;

(6) causes any vessel to enter or navigate any canal contrary to the rules for the time being prescribed by the Local Government for entering or navigating such canal;

(7) while navigating on any canal, neglects to take proper precautions for the safety of the canal and of vessels thereon;

(8) being liable to furnish labourers under Part VIII of this Act, fails, without reasonable cause, to supply or to assist in supplying the labourers required of him;

(9) being a labourer liable to supply his labour under Part VIII of this Act, neglects, without reasonable cause, so to supply, and to continue to supply, his labour;

(10) destroys or moves any level-mark or water-gauge fixed by the authority of a public servant;

(11) passes, or causes animals or vehicles to pass, on or across any of the works, banks or channels of a canal or drainage-work contrary to rules made under this Act, after he has been desired to desist therefrom;

(12) violates any rule made under this Act, for breach whereof a penalty may be incurred, Penalty.

shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate of such class as the Local Government directs in this behalf, to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, or to imprisonment not exceeding one month, or to both.

Saving of prosecution under other laws.

71. Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any offence punishable under this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

Compensation to person injured.

72. Whenever any person is fined for an offence under this Act, the Magistrate may direct that the whole or any part of such fine may be paid by way of compensation to the person injured by such offence.

Power to arrest without warrant.

73. Any person in charge of or employed upon any canal or drainage-work, may remove from the lands or buildings belonging thereto, or may take into custody without a warrant and take forthwith before a Magistrate or to the nearest police-station, to be dealt with according to law, any person who, within his view, commits any of the following offences:

(1) wilfully damages or obstructs any canal or drainage-work;

(2) without proper authority interferes with the supply or flow of water in or from any canal or drainage-work, or in any river or stream, so as to endanger, damage or render less useful any canal or drainage-work.

Definition of 'Canal.'

74. In this Part the word 'Canal' shall (unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context) be deemed to include also all lands occupied by Government for the purposes of canals, and all buildings, machinery, fences, gates and other erections, trees, crops, plantations or other produce, occupied by or belonging to Government, upon such lands.

PART XI.

OF SUBSIDIARY RULES.

Power to make, alter and cancel rules.

75. The Local Government may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, make rules to regulate the following matters:—

(1) the proceedings of any officer who, under any provision of this Act, is required or empowered to take action in any matter;

(2) the cases in which, and the officers to whom, and the conditions subject to which, orders and decisions given under any provision of this Act, and not expressly provided for as regards appeal, shall be appealable;

(3) the persons by whom, the time, place or manner at or in which, anything for the doing of which provision is made in this Act, shall be done;

(4) the amount of any charge made under this Act;

(5) and generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

The Local Government may from time to time, with the like sanction, alter or cancel any rules so made.

Publication of rules.

Such rules, alterations and cancelments shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

Schedule of repealed enactments.

A Bill to consolidate the law relating to Judicial Oaths, and for other purposes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths, affirmations and declarations, and to repeal the law relating to official oaths, affirmations and declarations; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Oaths Act, 1873:"

Local extent.

It extends to the whole of British India, and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty;

And it shall come into force on the first day of April 1873.

Commencement.

2. The enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed are repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof.

Repeal of enactments.

3. Nothing herein contained applies to proceedings before Courts Martial, or to oaths, affirmations or declarations prescribed by any law which, under the provisions of the Indian Councils' Act, 1861, the Governor General in Council has not power to repeal.

Saving of certain oaths and affirmations.

II.—Persons authorized to administer Judicial Oaths and Affirmations.

4. The following persons and Courts are authorized to administer, by themselves or by an officer empowered by them in this behalf, oaths and affirmations in discharge of the duties imposed upon them respectively by law:—

Authority to administer oaths and affirmations.

(a). Judges, Justices of the Peace, Magistrates, Coroners, Officers, Commissioners, Arbitrators, Military Courts of Request, and all other persons and Courts having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence;

(b.) The Commanding Officer of any military station occupied by troops in the service of Her Majesty: provided

(1) that the oath or affirmation be administered within the limits of the station, and

(2) that the oath or affirmation be such as a Justice of the Peace is competent to administer in British India.

III.—Persons by whom Oaths or Affirmations must be.

Oath or affirmation to be made by—

5. Oaths or affirmations shall be made by the following persons:—

witnesses:

(a.) witnesses in Courts, whether Civil, Military, Criminal or Revenue:

(b.) witnesses before Commissioners, Arbitrators and all other persons having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence:

complainants:

(c) complainants in Criminal Courts:

jurors in Presidency towns.

(d.) jurors in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.

Nothing hereinbefore contained shall render it lawful to administer an oath or affirmation to an accused person.

IV.—Forms of Oaths and Affirmations.

Forms for witnesses or complainants.

6. In the case of a witness the form of oath shall be as follows:—

"You swear that you shall true answer make to all such questions as shall be asked you, without favour or affection to either party, and therein you shall speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God:"

in the case of a complainant the form of oath shall be as follows:—

"You swear that what you shall state is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God:"

and in the case of a witness or complainant the form of affirmation shall be as follows:—

"I affirm that what I shall state is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Form for jurors.

7. In the case of a juryman the form of oath shall be as follows:—

"You swear that you shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and the prisoner at the bar whom you shall have in charge, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. So help you God:"

and the form of affirmation shall be as follows:—

"You affirm that you shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and the prisoner at the bar whom you shall have in charge, and a true verdict give according to the evidence."

Affirmation by Natives or by persons who object to oath.

8. Where the witness, complainant or juryman is a Hindú or Muhammadan, or has an objection to making an oath,

he shall, instead of making an oath, make the affirmation hereinbefore prescribed for a witness, complainant or juryman, as the case may be.

In every other case the witness, complainant or juryman shall make the oath so prescribed.

Power of Court to tender certain oaths.

9. If any party to, or witness in, any judicial proceeding offers to give evidence on oath or solemn affirmation in any form common amongst, or held binding by, persons of the race or persuasion to which he belongs, and not repugnant to justice or decency, and not purporting to affect any third person, the Court may, if it thinks fit, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, tender such oath or affirmation to him.

Court may ask party or witness whether he will make oath proposed by opposite party.

10. If any party to any proceeding offers to be bound by any such oath or solemn affirmation as is mentioned in section nine, if such oath or affirmation is made by the other party to, or by any witness in, such proceeding, the Court may, if it thinks fit, ask such party or witness whether or not he will make the oath or affirmation.

Administration of oath if accepted.

11. If such party or witness agrees to make such oath or affirmation, the Court may proceed to administer it, or if it is of such a nature that it may be more conveniently made out of Court, the Court may issue a Commission to any person to administer it, and authorize such person to take the evidence of the person to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.

Evidence conclusive as against person offering to be bound.

12. The evidence so given shall, as against the person who offered to be bound as aforesaid, be conclusive proof of the matter stated.

Procedure in case of refusal to make oath.

13. If the party or witness refuses to make the oath or solemn affirmation, he shall not be compelled to make it, but the Court shall record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath or affirmation proposed, the facts that he was asked whether he would make it, and that he refused it, together with any reason which he may assign for his refusal.

Forms for persons making affidavit.

14. In the case of an affidavit the form of oath shall be as follows:—

(a) by one deponent.

"Is that your name and handwriting?"

"You do swear that the contents of this your affidavit are true. So help you God."

(b) by two or more deponents.

To each deponent.

"Is that your name and handwriting?"

To all the deponents.

"You do severally swear that the contents of this your affidavit are true. So help you God," and the form of affirmation shall be as follows:—

"I affirm that the signature to this is my name and handwriting, and that the contents of this affidavit are true."

Proceedings and evidence not invalidated by omission of oath or irregularity.

15. No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, no substitution of any one for any other of them, and no irregularity whatever in the form in which any one of them is administered, shall invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence whatever, in or in respect of which such omission, substitution or irregularity took place.

V.—Official Oaths.

Judges, &c., not to be required to make official oath or affirmation.

16. No Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other officer shall, before entering on the execution of the duties of his office, be required to make any oath, or to make or subscribe any affirmation or declaration, that he will faithfully discharge such duties, or to the like effect.

SCHEDULE.

Bombay Regulation XVIII of 1830.	A Regulation providing for the appointment of a Joint Judge within the Zillah of Poona.	Section two.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is two-fold—to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths and affirmations, and to repeal the laws requiring declarations to be made by Judges, Magistrates, &c., before entering on their official duties. The Bill, if it become law, will replace twenty-seven enactments.

The Bill does not apply to proceedings before Courts-Martial, or to oaths prescribed by laws which the Governor General in Council has not the power to repeal.

Incidentally, the Bill will remove the doubt which has been raised as to the power of the Courts in certain parts of India to administer oaths and affirmations.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 4th February 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.
The Hon'ble Rájá Ramánáth Thákur.

The Hon'ble Rájá Ramánáth Thákur made a solemn declaration of allegiance to Her Majesty, and that he would faithfully fulfil the duties of his office.

OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE introduced the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Oaths and Affirmations, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a month. He said that, before introducing this Bill, he would explain its nature and objects. When he obtained leave to introduce the Bill, he mentioned that it was simply a measure of consolidation; that the law was scattered about some dozen or more different enactments, and that it was desirable to bring it all into one document. So far as regards the subject of judicial oaths, the Bill still retained the character which he gave to it when he obtained leave to introduce it. A clause relating to official oaths had been added, but, for his present purpose, he would ask the Council to put that clause entirely out of their minds, and to consider the Bill as relating simply to judicial oaths.

The Bill might be divided into two parts, one relating to the nature and effect of an oath, and the other to the power to administer it. That part which related to the power to administer an oath consisted of section 4, and the rest of the Bill related to the nature and effects of an oath. He would take the latter part first, that being the great bulk of the Bill. Now, our law on this subject was derived from the English law, with some modifications suggested by the circumstances of India. The law of England was peculiarly jealous that every witness should take an oath before he was admitted to give evidence. That used to be, up to a recent period of our history, the universal rule, that, without an oath, there could be no evidence whatever. If evidence was found to be given without an oath, the evidence, with every proceeding founded on it, was void. Gradually, slowly, reluctantly, under considerable political pressure, some relaxations of that rule were made, and a statute was passed for the purpose of relieving the consciences of the members of particular communities, who had an objection to take oaths. The form of oath, at least ever since the decision of the well-known case of Omichund v. Barker, was to be such form as would be most binding on the conscience of the witness; but oath there must be, otherwise the evidence could not be received. Now that law we imported into India, and the general rule here was exactly the same as the general rule in England; but exceptions were engrafted upon it. There were three Acts of Parliament still in force, which provided for the cases of Quakers, Moravians and Separatists; and MR. HOBHOUSE thought that was the only relaxation made of the general rule up to the year 1840. But, at that time, it had been found that the taking of an oath was highly objectionable to the Hindús and Muhammadans, and Act No. V of 1840 was passed for the purpose of prohibiting the administration of oaths to persons belonging to those communities, a form of solemn affirmation being substituted instead of an oath. That privilege, or that peculiar law, was extended further, in 1863, by Act No. XVIII of that year, section 9, the details of which he need not mention. So the law remained down to last year, when Act No. VI of 1872 was passed. That Act introduced two very important alterations. One was this, that every witness who objected to take an oath might, instead, make a simple affirmation; and the other was that, notwithstanding any irregularity in the administration of an oath, or any irregularity in the making of an affirmation, or, in fact, any irregularity in the form or method of taking evidence, the proceedings should be valid. Another alteration was introduced, probably of less importance, because MR. HOBHOUSE imagined it applied only to a few cases. Act V of 1840, which was the Act that prohibited the administration of oaths to Hindús and Muhammadans, was modified in this way. It was provided that, if a witness was willing to take an oath in a form peculiarly binding upon his own conscience, it should be competent to the Court to administer such an oath. That was the present state of the law. The general rule, if anything could be called general which excepted Hindús and Muhammadans, remained the same as before. With regard to Hindús and Muhammadans, it was forbidden to administer oaths to them, except in those special cases in which a witness himself was willing to take an oath; and it was provided that irregularity should not affect the validity of the proceeding.

Now, he believed that this Bill exactly expressed the present state of the law. Section 5 specified the persons by whom oaths and affirmations should be made, and they were the persons by whom they were to be made now. Sections 6 and 7 gave formulæ of oaths and affirmations. Those formulæ were taken from actual practice, and were the formulæ used at the present moment. Section 8 embodied the law as to Hindús and Muhammadans, and all persons having an objection to take an oath; and that, he believed, was exactly the expression of the law as laid down now by Act V of 1840, Act XVIII of 1863, and Act VI of 1872.

Sections 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 corresponded to a single section in Act VI of 1872, namely, section 4, which was the section which enabled volunteers to make oaths in special cases. Section 14 provided for the case of affidavits, which was provided for by one of the sections of Act XVIII of 1863, and section 15 re-enacted section 5 of Act VI of 1872, by which the validity of proceedings was affirmed, notwithstanding any irregularity in the mode of taking evidence.

Now he returned to that part of the Bill which related to the power of administering oaths, and the whole of that was contained in section 4. There, again, our law was derived from the English law. As that law attributed great importance to the effect of an oath, so it was equally jealous that the oath should be administered by a person who had due authority by law to administer it; and there had been much litigation and much legislation on the subject. There must be, at this moment, he thought, a score of Acts, perhaps more, on the English statute-books, expressly conferring upon different officials the power of administering oaths. It had happened that a whole Bench of English Judges had been equally divided in opinion upon the question whether a British Consul residing abroad could or could not administer an oath. The importance of the power, and the necessity of providing for it by express law, was strongly exemplified in England a short time ago, when an Act was passed to enable Committees of the Houses of Parliament to administer oaths. Neither Committees of the House of Lords, nor Committees of the House of Commons, nor the House of Commons itself, had the power to administer oaths. The House of Lords could, because it was an ancient judicial body, deriving its powers from times anterior to legal memory, and administering them by express or presumed grant from the Crown; at all events, from custom. But that power had never been extended to Committees. So it was found that, if witnesses did not speak the truth, they could not be punished; and if they did speak the truth, and it was published and hurt the feelings of anybody, an action might be brought for libel. To remedy those inconveniences it was deemed necessary to pass an Act of Parliament: and one was accordingly passed, in the year 1858, which enabled Committees of both Houses of Parliament to administer oaths. The Indian law had followed the English law on that subject. There were a number of Regulations and Acts passed in India, expressly conferring the power of administering oaths. Nor did MR. HOBHOUSE suppose it had ever been thought that a Judge or any other person had the power of administering oaths, unless expressly authorized to do so by law. He found the law recognized in the Penal Code, section 191, which related to false evidence. It defined the giving of false evidence thus:—

"Whoever, being legally bound by an oath, or by any express provision of law to state the truth, or being bound by law to make a declaration upon any subject, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, is said to give false evidence."

That section referred to the three modes of taking evidence then known to the law—oath, affirmation and declaration; and no doubt those who drew that section had in their minds the provisions of the English law which empowered certain persons to take evidence in these three forms, and the principle which underlay the whole subject, that everything not taken in one of those three forms was not evidence.

Now, on that point, a difficulty had been pointed out by Mr. West, the Judicial Commissioner of Sindh. He had communicated with the Bombay Government, and had stated that the Civil Courts in the Mofussil, in Bombay, had authority to administer oaths given them by section 34 of Bombay Regulation IV of 1827. This Regulation was almost wholly repealed by Act X of 1861, and nothing was put in its place. That was exactly one of the evils which resulted from the scattered state of the law, and which never would have happened if the law was brought into one document. The result was, as the Judicial Commissioner put it, that the question might not improbably be raised before long in an embarrassing form, and that it was expedient to make matters clear by timely legislation. And with that view the Bombay Government agreed, unless it were possible to extract the requisite authority out of Act XV of 1852, section 12, which on examination proved to be quite impossible.

It was obvious that the question might be raised in an embarrassing form, and that in two ways. It might be raised by the Judge taking the view that he had not the power to administer an oath; that, moreover, the power to take affirmations flowed from the power to administer oaths; that there was no statute substituting an affirmation for an oath, except where there existed antecedently the power to administer an oath; and he might stay the proceedings on the ground that he had no authority to take evidence according to the solemnities contemplated by the law. Or, again, a witness might give false evidence: he might swear falsely; and, then, on being indicted for giving false evidence, he might say he was not a man legally bound by an oath, because, though the oath was administered to him, it was not administered by law, the person administering it having no power to do so.

Now, the same sort of difficulty arose when we introduced the Act to amend the Evidence Act. By the Evidence Act, the whole of Act XV of 1852 was repealed. One of the sections of that Act happened to be one which gave power, express power, to the High Courts, and to Commissioners, arbitrators, and other officers acting under the authority of the High Courts, to administer oaths. It was suggested that the power was gone. We looked into the question, and, as to the High Courts, we ultimately came to the conclusion that they had the power from another source; as to Commissioners and arbitrators, we came to the conclusion that they had no such power, and therefore we revived the section that had been repealed.

A difficulty arising from the same source led to the introduction of the Act of 1872. The case that brought the subject to the attention of the legislature was this. An Act was passed for regulating the law relating to Coroners and Coroners' juries. In that Act, it was provided that Coroners' juries should be sworn, and then arose a difficulty when some of the jurors consisted of Hindús and Muhammadans, whether they ought to be sworn according to the Coroners' Act, or whether they should come under the provisions of Act V of 1840. The Madras Government were advised by their legal advisers, that Hindús and Muhammadans must be sworn under the Coroners' Act; and then arose the question of administering an oath to those who objected to it. Now, these were things which could not possibly happen if we had all the law on judicial oaths in a single document. At present, as far as we knew, it was contained in fourteen different documents. There might be, and probably were, more. He should be astonished if they did not come across particular enactments, conferring the power of administering oaths upon particular persons in particular instances. At all events, we had fourteen enactments, of which six or seven dealt with the nature and effect of oaths and others with the power of administering oaths. And it seemed to MR. HOBHOUSE a matter of importance to bring these into one single enactment. If, then, the Council would turn to section 4 of the Bill, they would see that every kind of person administering any kind of judicial office and having to take evidence, might administer an oath or affirmation. It applied also to the Commanding Officers of military stations, for which there was a special Act (IX of 1836) now in existence. That was the Bill as far as it related to judicial oaths.

As to official oaths, MR. HOBHOUSE had very little to say. It was after the motion for leave to introduce the Bill that this clause was added, because the subject was brought to our attention by the Madras Courts' Act. He explained, when moving to pass that Act, what was the view taken by the Committee on that subject; and showed that, as regards Oudh and British Burma, every kind of oath or declaration had been deliberately dispensed with in the case of judicial officers assuming office. We did the same thing the other day with respect to Madras. Now, he supposed, if the principle was good for those parts of India, it would be good for the rest of the country; and the principle which was good for judicial officers would be good for other officials. Therefore, he anticipated little or no difference of opinion on that point, although, he admitted that, on this point, the Bill was not a measure of consolidation, but one of alteration. With this explanation, he introduced the Bill.

Now he had to move that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a month. He should have thought it an absolute matter of course to refer the Bill to a Select Committee, when once it was seen what its contents were. If the Bill did not consolidate, but altered, the law, the Committee would set it right; it would be their duty to see that the Bill answered the objects it professed. But it was not always given to us to see ourselves as others see us. He supposed there must be some ugly deformities about this Bill which he had been unable to discern, because His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had given notice that he would move that the Bill be removed from the List of Business before the Council. MR. HOBHOUSE would not attempt to anticipate the arguments by which His Honour would support that proposition. But His Honour had been kind enough to communicate personally with MR. HOBHOUSE on the subject. As far as he understood His Honour's objections, they were that the Bill raised awkward and disagreeable questions, and that the Committee who sat on the Bill last year did not think fit to consolidate the law at that time. Now, how a measure of consolidation could raise questions it was very difficult to say. Of course, it raised the particular question, whether or not it did express the existing law. But why that should be a question of anxiety or delicacy, and why anybody should shrink from expressing his views upon it, MR. HOBHOUSE could not understand. With regard to the action of the Committee of last year, they were dealing with a great alteration of the law, and they came to the conclusion that they would not at the same time consolidate. If MR. HOBHOUSE had been a member of that Committee, he believed he should have been of the same opinion too. He thought the Committee were right in not burdening themselves with a single question beyond those which were actually raised by the Bill before them. And when an Act was being altered, and not merely consolidated, it was likely that many more questions might be raised than when you said—"all I wish to do is to bring the law into one single focus." The Committee concluded their report in this way. They said:—

"The effect of this alteration will be to leave the law in a somewhat cumbrous shape, but, as we think, in a substantially sound condition. Oaths will continue to be administered as at present, but those who object to them will be allowed to make an affirmation, and accidental mistakes as to their administration will not defeat the ends of justice."

With this MR. HOBHOUSE entirely agreed. He thought the law was in a substantially sound condition; and having brought it into that condition, we proposed to relieve it of its cumbrous form: we proposed to add to its substantially sound condition a neat and sightly shape.

That was the way in which the Committee of last year drew up their report, and so far from acting contrary to their opinion, he conceived we were taking up the case at the point where they left it, and carrying on the completion of their task as they themselves would have done it, if they were dealing with this case at the present time. He might mention that Sir John Strachey had been on that Committee. He was present when MR. HOBHOUSE obtained leave to introduce this Bill, and he did not intimate that anything was being done contrary to the views of the Committee. There were two other gentlemen, members of the same Committee present in Council to-day, and it was for them to say if they objected to the course proposed.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR moved, as an amendment to the motion of the hon'ble member, that the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Oaths and Affirmations be removed from the List of Business before the Council. He gathered from the papers circulated to the members, that that Bill had now received the ex post facto sanction of the Government of India. He gathered that it was now considered a Government Bill. But he apprehended that the fact of this ex post facto sanction having been accorded to the Bill, put him in a position to say that it was not in the first instance a Bill of the Government, but only a Bill of one Department, or one member of the Council. He ventured to hope that Bills of importance, introduced by a representative of the Government, would not be introduced without explanation whether the Bill was placed before the Council as a Government Bill, after having been considered by the Government of India. This Bill having now come before the Council as a Government Bill, he felt himself in this situation, that he had already committed himself as opposed to the introduction of the Bill. And although the support of the Bill by the master of many legions would leave him little hope of effecting his object, still he should submit the reasons which induced him to bring forward his present amendment.

The great and main objection (HIS HONOUR had several objections, but the main objection) which he entertained—the objection which had induced him to put his amendment in this form—was this, that the motion of the hon'ble member, if affirmed by the Council, would amount to a distinct reversal of the proceedings of the Council when it last sat in Calcutta. He said that this Bill would not only supplement the Act of last year, but would amount to a distinct reversal of the determination of the Council on that question.

The hon'ble member in charge of the Bill had given them an extremely interesting history in respect of oaths in England, and the introduction of that law in this country. HIS HONOUR would give a brief history of what took place in regard to the Bill which had recently dealt with the subject—he meant Act VI of 1872. He was not in a position to say anything regarding the birth of that Bill: it dated from a time anterior to his own legislative birth. When he entered the Council, he found that it was one which disturbed the rest of the members. It was altogether a Bill of an embarrassing character, raising most troublesome and difficult questions. He was eventually made a member of the Committee to whom the Council devolved the task of dealing with this most difficult Bill. His own personal experience was, that no Bill which came before a Committee or the Council had troubled the members so much. We tackled it again and again; we tackled it once and failed to solve the difficulty; we tackled it a second and a third and a fourth time: and at last, after much labour and difficulty, we evolved a form of Bill which was satisfactory to the Council and was passed, thus so far solving, beyond our hopes, a very difficult question. As he had said, the Bill solved some very difficult questions. But the question also arose, would it not be better to consolidate the whole law on the subject? The law was scattered through many enactments; and the question arose, would it not be better, while we were about the matter, to place it in a simple shape? He had himself suggested to the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill that it might be better to consolidate the law. That subject was fully discussed in Committee, and it was decided that it was not expedient to do so, not because we shirked the trouble, but because there were reasons why we should not consolidate the law which were explained to him by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill (Mr. Stephen). Those reasons HIS HONOUR would briefly repeat. The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse had told the Council the devious paths by which the law relating to oaths, coming from various quarters, had now attained its present anomalous shape. The result of all that variety of sources was, that the law was now somewhat in the shape in which it was put before the Council, and which, HIS HONOUR ventured to affirm, was a very absurd shape. The main law in regard to oaths was contained in the fourth and eighth sections of the present Bill. It amounted to this, that an oath should be tendered to every one, except almost everyone; that was to say, except every one who was a Hindú or Muhammadan, or who objected to take an oath. If the Council looked to these sections, they would see that that was the effect of the Bill. We all knew that Hindús and Muhammadans composed the great mass of the people in India. The provision, therefore, amounted to this, that an oath should be tendered to every one, except every one, with certain limited exceptions upon the exceptions. When we came to look what those exceptions upon the exceptions were, we found that it amounted to this, that an oath should not be tendered to the great mass of people, inhabitants of the country, who were classed under the wide designations of Hindús and Muhammadans, but should be tendered to Christians and any other minor sects of people who might turn up. The population of the country might be mainly classed into Hindús, Muhammadans and Christians. Therefore, practically, the declaration amounted to this, that an affirmation should be tendered to Hindús and Muhammadans, but an oath to Christians. It seemed to HIS HONOUR that, in such a state of things, very difficult questions—questions that were more than troublesome, the very gravest questions—arose. The hon'ble member would pardon him, having considerable experience in India, if he ventured to differ on one point, namely, the objection to oaths on the part of Muhammadans stated by the hon'ble member. He thought that Muhammadans had no religious repugnance to taking oaths. The Muhammadan laws, principally drawn from a Jewish source, particularly affected oaths; any important transaction between Muhammadans, to obtain validity, should be bound by an oath; and oaths were taken on every occasion on which any Muhammadan wished strictly to bind another. He would be corrected if he was wrong when he asserted that the Korán was the common instrument used for binding an engagement. Therefore, so far from objecting to oaths, Muhammadans affected the Jewish law of oaths. That law was much modified by the Christian law. His opinion was that, if any class of people might reasonably object to take an oath, it was Christians. The law which was common to Jews and Muhammadans was clearly modified by the law of Christians. In the Christian Scriptures, very strong expressions were used against the use of oaths: their communications should be "yea, yea, and nay, nay"; and again they were told to 'swear not at all.' Therefore, if there was any class of persons who might object more than others to take an oath, it was Christians. It did seem to him that it was an extraordinary anomaly that we should now enact a law, that an oath should not be tendered to Hindús and Muhammadans, but should be tendered to Christians. It seemed to him that the reasonable solution would rather be to say—"you are exempting Hindús and Muhammadans from the obligation to take an oath, you had better exempt Christians also." On the other hand, we were told by Mr. Stephen, that there were many good people who objected to the abolition of oaths: there might be lawyers who objected to the abolition, as against their legal religion, as well as others who wished to retain the religious sanction.

Such and such like were the serious questions raised by the declaration of the law. Last year it seemed to the Committee and the Council inexpedient to bring before the public these inconsistencies, anomalies and difficulties of the law without solving them. It seemed to them that it would be better to leave quietly sleeping in their graves, these questions which were set at rest in an indirect manner by Act VI of 1872. That Act contained two very important provisions which seemed to them to get over the difficulty. It might not have been very courageous to adopt that course, but it was discreet and expedient. We got over the difficulty in Act VI of 1872 by enacting that, if any person objected to take an oath, he need not do so; and that, if there was any irregularity in the mode of administering an oath, it should not affect the validity of the proceedings. Those two provisions seemed to render any further questions impossible.

As he had before said, these very grave and serious questions, among which the then members of the Council feared to tread, were got over by the Council last year in the manner stated. If the hon'ble member was now about to rush in and solve them, His Honour should admire the hon'ble member's courage, although he might doubt his discretion. But His Honour did think it most inexpedient to flaunt in the face of the public, these inconsistencies and anomalies without attempting to solve them. The hon'ble member did not attempt to solve them, but he brought in a Consolidation Bill which flaunted these inconsistencies in the face of the public. The question had been before the Council last session, and the Council deliberately resolved that it was better not to do what it was now proposed to do. Great questions, relating to the land-tenures and land-revenue, must occupy the attention of the Council during the comparatively short period of its sitting, and it was most inexpedient and undesirable that these embarrassing questions regarding oaths should take up time which might be so valuably employed in the consideration of other grave and important questions. It might be said that we were driven to a Bill of this kind by necessity, and if the Council believed in that necessity, they must submit. But in His Honour's opinion, there was no necessity of the kind. Not only had we had a Bill, Act VI of 1872, which he might call No. 1, but also, a few months ago, the hon'ble member in charge of this Bill again dealt with the question in another law, which he might call No. 2, section 12, Act XVIII of 1872, by which he professed to clear the doubts which existed regarding the administration of oaths and affirma-tions. His Honour thought that, if there was any difficulty, it was cleared by that provision: if there was no difficulty, he thought a difficulty had been created. This Bill, No. 3, was, in his opinion, a work of supererogation. By the codes of procedure, every man was bound to give evidence, and was bound to state the truth, whether he was on oath or not, and was liable to the penalties of perjury if he stated that which was false.

His Honour thought that the objections of the Judicial Commissioner of Sindh were unnecessary objections, which were raised by people seeking out illegalities and finding flaws which were not raised by those practically affected. His Honour's opinion was, then, that this Bill was unnecessary; that it was inexpedient; and that it reversed the deliberate determination of the Council last year. He had thought it his duty to place on the paper his amendment, and having explained his views, he left it to the Council to decide upon the matter.

The Hon'ble Mr. Chapman felt bound to state that, whatever difficulties and complications had arisen in this matter were due to the course which His Honour himself had thought fit to pursue. His Honour had talked of the danger and inexpediency of flaunting these questions before the public, but Mr. Chapman would like to know who was responsible for this flaunting; who had unfurled the flag, if not His Honour himself?

The original Bill was of a very simple character. It was, as had been explained by the hon'ble and learned member, introduced for the purpose of removing a difficulty that had occurred in connection with the Coroners' Act. The Council expected the Bill would have passed without much difficulty and discussion. But His Honour thought fit to deal with general questions of principle, and the discussion threatened to become embarrassing and troublesome.

In order to avoid those invidious discussions, the Bill was passed in its present incomplete state. The concession thus made was perhaps a weak one, but the Council were at the time much occupied with two great measures—the Contract Law and Criminal Procedure Code—and were desirous to avoid both embarrassment and delay.

Mr. Chapman could not conceive what the objections to the present proposal could be. Nothing was altered; if His Honour's amendment was carried, the result would simply be that the number of confused and doubtful laws specified in the schedule would remain on the statute-book, and the work of consolidation would be indefinitely postponed.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor wished to explain that he must give the most emphatic contradiction to the facts stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman.

His Excellency the President observed that the statement which His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor had just made was not an explanation, but a statement of fact, and was therefore out of order.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse felt he had not very much matter to reply to in the arguments that had been advanced against this Bill. The principal argument—the first one—adduced by the Lieutenant-Governor was this, that we were reversing the proceedings which the Committee of last year thought fit to take. Mr. Hobhouse said that they were carrying on the proceedings of last year's Committee. He conceived the Committee had not laid down any rule to their successors, and never intended to do so. They judged on the case before them. But seeing that their report was dated 1st March 1872, looking to the statute-book, and seeing the great mass of business going on at that time, there could be little doubt that they felt the value of time, and that their judgment was partly guided by the necessity of paying attention to other important work. Indeed, with all these reasons for the decision of the Committee, the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman doubted its soundness. Mr. Hobhouse, however, could hardly doubt it. The Bill was an important one. It settled the law in a satisfactory way, and it was better to pass it and leave consolidation to the future, than to incur the risk of losing it during that sitting of the Council by lapse of time: a risk which they would have incurred if they had taken up the work of consolidation.

But he wondered when this new desire of not disturbing previous decisions arose in his friend the Lieutenant Governor's mind. Was he prepared to stick to it? Then MR. HOBHOUSE thought the Lieutenant Governor must omit the next notice of motion standing in his name. He saw that the Lieutenant Governor was to move—

[His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that it was rather irregular to refer to a motion which was not then before the Council.]

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE was using an argumentum ad hominem. That motion referred to a section of an Act recently passed, in which a distinct line of action was affirmed by the legislature. The Lieutenant Governor thought it wrong, and did not find his respect for what had been decided prevented his moving to alter it. Moreover, in the Lieutenant Governor's speech, he showed a disposition not only to reverse a particular decision of the Council, but to reverse a principle which formed the very keystone of the policy of the Government in its legislation for a number of years. He had actually argued that it was better to have an obscure law than a clear one. When MR. HOBHOUSE came out to this country, nothing was so strongly impressed on him both by his friend Sir Henry Maine, and by his friend Mr. Stephen, as the great importance of simplifying the law. He was told that the law was in a state of much dispersion and confusion, and that it admitted of measures being passed from time to time for the purpose of bringing it into one view. And, now, in proposing one of the simplest of those measures, he was told that there was a difficulty; and because there was a difficulty, we were not to show the people what the law was; we were to hide the law, lest the people should see the anomalies of the law. That was a complete reversal of policy.

As to the difficulty, MR. HOBHOUSE did not see it. First, the Lieutenant Governor said "you commence with an absurdity: you say oaths are to be administered to every one except certain persons who are every one." MR. HOBHOUSE would ask His Honour to read section 5, which said—"oaths or affirmations" shall be made by certain persons. There was no clause which said that oaths were to be tendered to everybody, with those large exceptions which His Honour mentioned. On the contrary, His Honour would find that, throughout the Bill from beginning to end, the two alternative methods of taking evidence were contemplated, according to the law as settled by Act VI of 1872. Then, he said, there was a large class of persons, the class of Muhammadans, who were wrongly dealt with by Act V of 1840. Now, that Act had been the law for thirty-two years. MR. HOBHOUSE could find no complaint of its operation. He had read the whole of the proceedings which took place on the passing of Act VI of 1872, and found nothing on that point, except that His Honour himself made a speech which gave people outside the impression that he wanted to revive the administration of oaths; on which the British Indian Association presented an address in which they stated that perfect satisfaction had been felt with the working of Act V of 1840. That was some evidence of the soundness of the law of 1840; the absence of complaints was still better evidence; and except the statement MR. HOBHOUSE had heard for the first time that day, there was not one scrap of evidence to the contrary.

Well, then, the only other argument was, that there was in fact no difficulty about the administration of oaths, and that if there was a difficulty, it ought to have been dealt with when we passed a law to amend the Evidence Act. But if His Honour would refer to the proceedings in connection with the passing of that Act, he would find that it was stated at the time in this Council, that a Bill for the consolidation of the law respecting oaths was to be introduced, and the topic was one which fell more justly under that Bill. The reason for dealing with a fragment of the case by the Evidence Act was, that a particular law standing in the statute-book, containing certain express provisions, had, along with a mass of other law, been repealed; and the powers which had been conferred by, and exercised under, that particular law were wanted for immediate use. The communication from Bombay had not then been received, and it was that which first drew attention to the existence of doubts elsewhere. Now we were told by an officer of great learning, industry and merit, and holding a responsible judicial position, that he felt some embarrassment. He sent a communication to his immediate Government. They examined the question very carefully, as their letter showed: they suggested one solution of the difficulty; but failing that, they agreed with him. Then, were we to declare that, when persons holding high and responsible positions felt a difficulty, because express powers given by law had been taken away, we would not restore those powers and place the matter beyond doubt? It so happened that MR. HOBHOUSE was reading yesterday a very able paper by the Advocate General of Madras on the subject of the re-arrangement of the law. Speaking of the Procedure Code, Mr. Cunningham said, "formerly the law was scattered about all over the statute-book and what was the result? For fifty years all the Sessions Courts in the North-Western Provinces were acting without jurisdiction. Every man that was tried by them for half a century had a right of action against the Judge who sentenced him, and the Government had to pass an Act all of a sudden, because the Allahabad High Court positively refused to confirm any more sentences of death till the Judge who passed the sentence was provided with a legal footing."

That was exactly the thing we might have to do, though in a case of less importance, if we allowed these matters to go on as they were. The fact was we never knew at what inconvenient moment an unsound part of the law would be tested; but if we left it unsound, it was sure, sooner or later, to plunge us into a quagmire. His Honour might not recollect, but MR. HOBHOUSE did, the circumstance that the old law of wager of battle was sprung upon the Courts, after very long disuse. It had not been repealed, and about fifty years ago an accused person availed himself of it by offering to fight his accuser. We had then gravely to enact that, thenceforward, suits were not to be decided according to the defendant's bodily strength, or skill in arms.

MR. HOBHOUSE thought that the difficulties indicated by the Judicial Commissioner of Sindh and the Bombay Government were substantial; but whether we thought difficulties were well or ill-founded, if they were entertained by a number of competent persons holding high official position, we had better make the law clear.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said: "I wish to remark that it is a frequent practice of the British Parliament to amend the law relating to a particular subject in one session of Parliament, and afterwards to consolidate that law as amended in another.

"The advantage of that practice is, that the legislative assembly has its attention directed, in the first instance, to the particular amendments proposed to be made, and the law is afterwards put into a clear and definite shape. I think the Council would act wisely in following the same course, and the law relating to oaths having been fully discussed, and an agreement having been arrived at in this Council last year, there is no objection, so far as I can see, to the consolidation now proposed.

"I also beg to say that I agree with what has fallen from my hon'ble friend, Mr. Hobhouse, that it is essential to solve the doubt which exists in regard to the authority of the Courts in the Bombay Mofussil, which has been stated by the highest judicial authority in Sindh and supported by the Local Government. It would, in my opinion, be undesirable to leave any such doubt to be solved ex post facto, because such action is very much to be deprecated, and should only be resorted to in unforeseen circumstances.

"In this case, we cannot say that the circumstances have been unforeseen, and therefore it seems to be our duty to deal with the case."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR wished now to submit to the Council his most emphatic contradiction of the facts stated by the hon'ble Mr. Chapman. HIS HONOUR understood Mr. Chapman to have stated that the difficulties in regard to consolidation of the law of oaths were of his own creation. He gave the Council to understand that His Honour had opposed consolidation; that it was on account of the difficulties he suggested that consolidation had not been effected. If he had rightly understood Mr. Chapman, His Honour gave that assertion the most emphatic contradiction. He did not oppose consolidation, or make difficulties about it: on the contrary, he had suggested it, not knowing the difficulties; and so far from having his own way in this matter, his suggestions were overruled by the explanations of Mr. Stephen and of his colleagues. His Honour's reason was convinced, and he submitted to the opinions of his colleagues. That being so, the assertion that he in any way created difficulties in regard to consolidation was an entirely mistaken one.

Then, the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill had submitted to the Council the proposition that, even if the law was bad and inconsistent, we should consolidate and put it into one document: he said that it was our duty to clarify the law and make it simple. His Honour quite concurred with the hon'ble member that, if we had a good substantive law, it was well to put it into a shape in which it should be shown as settled in a reasonable manner. But His Honour's argument was, that the present law was in a state of chaos and inconsistency, and he desired to cover up from the public that state of chaos and inconsistency till we could set it right. Till they could find a solution of the difficulty, he strongly recommended the hon'ble member not to consolidate the law.

As regards the suggestion of the Judicial Commissioner of Sindh, His Honour would say that he differed from the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner. It did not appear that the difficulties were suggested to him by anything which occurred in his Court; and therefore, not being a practical difficulty, His Honour was the less inclined to respect the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner. It seemed to His Honour that Judicial Commissioners were, of all functionaries, those who had the least useful work, and who were the most given to go hunting-up difficulties. He was sure that gentlemen who had experience of the matter would bear him out in that assertion. His Honour had himself been a Judicial Commissioner, but in those days he had a great deal to do besides Court work. But things were now changed, and Judicial Commissioners had not a sufficient amount of judicial work, nor of any other useful work. The consequence was, that the Judicial Commissioner set himself to pick holes of all sorts and in every manner. It was one great merit of the English law and English lawyers, that, however technical and particular they might be, it was contrary to the genius of the English law to raise difficulties that were not raised before the Judges in a practical manner. But Judicial Commissioners were entirely beyond that trait of English lawyers: they seemed to consider that it was their duty to raise difficulties. His Honour was specially averse to take up a matter of this kind on the recommendation of a Judicial Commissioner.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse had twitted His Honour by saying that he was not averse to reverse the proceedings of the Council in another matter. But the hon'ble member forgot that the Bill to which his subsequent notice of motion referred, had been vetoed by higher authority—an authority which had the power of disapproving of any proceeding of this Council, and had disapproved of it and disallowed it. The Bill which had been passed by the Council previously had been disallowed by that authority; and he thought the Council were entitled, and were bound, to reconsider the provisions of that Bill to which reference had been made.

The Hon'ble Mr. Chapman desired to state, by way of personal explanation, that what he intended to say was, not that His Honour opposed consolidation on this subject, but that the Committee, to avoid delay, and to avoid the discussion of difficult and embarrassing questions which His Honour was disposed to moot, agreed to the incomplete measure passed last year.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor remarked that he must entirely deny the correctness of the hon'ble Mr. Chapman's present statement. He did not raise those difficulties, and had never even heard of them until they were explained to him by others, being entirely ignorant of them till Mr. Stephen stated them. He neither suggested nor knew of those difficulties: they were suggested by the hon'ble member then in charge of the Legislative Department and accepted by him.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that the Council were rather drifting into the question of what took place on a former occasion. He thought it was not desirable to continue a discussion which really affected the proceedings of last year: it could be settled by a reference to the debates of the Council.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR remarked that the discussion in question occurred in Committee, and no reference to it would be found in the proceedings of the Council.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR's amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE's motion was then put and agreed to.

PANJÁB APPEALS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb.

BURMA PORT-DUES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Port-dues in British Burma.

NORTHERN INDIA IRRIGATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON moved that the further report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India be taken into consideration. He said that it would be in the recollection of the Council that this Bill was amended in Council, and was referred back to the Select Committee for re-consideration, in order to complete the amendments, and to revise the whole of it with reference to them. The Committee had adopted the amendments in sections 35, 45 and 66, regarding appeals, which were proposed in Council, and they had retained the alteration in the wording of those sections which was suggested in Council.

The Committee had added words to section 1, which declared that the Bill was to apply to lands permanently settled and free of revenue, as well as to lands temporarily settled.

This was considered necessary, as a portion of the Benares Division of the North-Western Provinces was permanently settled. The alteration did not introduce any new provision. It was always intended that lands under permanent settlement should be subject to the Canal Act, but the express provision now made removed any doubt on the subject which might have been raised.

In section 8, in the last paragraph but one, the date of the notification, instead of the date of passing the Act, had been made the period from which the limitation was to be reckoned. This was, in fact, a verbal alteration made to bring the paragraph into accordance with the rest of the section.

In section 38, words had been introduced which made the application of the rules regarding the assessment of the owner's rate to land under permanent settlement more clear.

In section 39, it was provided that no owner's rate shall be charged during the currency of a temporary settlement, on lands assessed at irrigated rates.

In section 66, words had been introduced which defined more clearly that the Local Government was to prescribe the rates for impressed labour, and that these rates shall be in excess of the highest rates payable in the neighbourhood for similar work.

There was no need for him to trouble the Council with any further remarks on the Bill which had been so long before the Council. The substance of the Act of 1871 had been really very little changed, except in regard to compensation for loss or diminution of a supply of water.

The alterations made had been chiefly elucidations rather than substantive alterations.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that, in clause 38, lines 5 and 6, the words "or on adjacent land of similar description and with similar advantages" be omitted; and that, to the section be added the words "and, for the purpose of this section only, land which is permanently settled or held free of revenue shall be considered as though it were temporarily settled and liable to payment of revenue."

The amendment was of a purely verbal character. When this clause (38) was before the Select Committee, it ran thus: "The owner's rate shall not exceed the sum which, under the rules for the time being in force for the assessment of land-revenue, might be assessed on such land on account of the increase of the annual value or produce thereof on account of irrigation." It was pointed out that, as the maximum owner's rate was to be ascertained by the rules in force for the time being for the assessment of the land-revenue, and those rules only were to show what must be assessed on such land, when you came to land which was permanently settled, the rules would show that nothing additional could be assessed on the particular acres you were dealing with, and, therefore, an owner's rate could not be assessed on land permanently settled. That was the objection taken to the clause as it stood. But the intention was, that an owner's rate should be levied on all land that got the benefit of canal-water. And it was thought well to add the words "or on adjacent land of similar description and with similar advantages," with the view of referring the Settlement Officer to similar land, instead of the very land that was to be assessed. The Committee reported that they had done that. But after the report of the Committee was presented, his hon'ble friends, Messrs. Bayley and Inglis, put their heads together, and thought that, as there were large tracts of land under permanent settlement in the North-West Provinces, there might be cases in which this reference to similar land adjacent, would not carry the Settlement Officer beyond permanently settled land, so that the object of the alteration would not be attained. It was now, therefore, proposed to affirm directly, instead of indirectly, the liability to owner's rate of land permanently settled. Therefore, what MR. HOBHOUSE now moved was, that they should strike out the words inserted in Select Committee "or on adjacent land of similar description, and with similar advantages", and so express the section as to apply to land permanently settled, by adding the words "and for the purpose of this section only" (that was for the sole purpose of ascertaining the maximum rate which could be assessed on the owner) "land which is permanently settled or held free of revenue shall be considered as though it were temporarily settled and liable to payment of revenue." MR. HOBHOUSE believed, as far as he understood the question, that would meet the object in view.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR moved that section 45 be omitted, and that the numbers of the subsequent sections be altered accordingly. On the last occasion he withdrew several of his amendments, on the understanding that the Bill was to be referred back to the Select Committee. The Select Committee having considered those matters, and being quite capable of dealing with them, HIS HONOUR was not disposed to raise any question dealt with and settled by that Committee. But the matter which was the subject of the present motion was left an open one, and was not decided by the Committee. Therefore, the Council at large might decide the question one way or the other.

The hon'ble member in charge of the Legislative Department had already alluded to this Bill, and HIS HONOUR had also alluded to it, as founded on the disallowance by the Secretary of State of a former Bill, which was objected to principally on the ground of the compulsory clauses it contained. Now, it seemed to His Honour that this clause was a sort of compulsory clause; a sort of rag of compulsion that somebody had nailed to his mast. Section 45 was in these words:—

"If it appear to the Divisional Canal Officer that any cultivated land situate within three hundred yards of the edge of any artificial canal maintained by Government, receives by percolation from such canal an advantage equivalent to that which would be given by a direct supply of canal-water for irrigation, he may, subject to an appeal to the head revenue officer of the district, or such other appeal as may be provided under section seventy-six, charge on such land a water-rate not exceeding that which would ordinarily have been charged for such a supply to land similarly cultivated.

"For the purposes of this Act, land charged under this section shall be deemed to be land irrigated from a canal."

The result of that section (45) was to introduce into this Bill the principle of compulsion, on a small scale no doubt, but still the principle. The man who did not ask for a canal found that a canal was brought through his grounds, and he was told—"you are benefited by it in the opinion of the Canal Officer, and therefore you must pay as if you had voluntarily taken water from the canal." That was so far compulsory, and was, he thought, to be avoided. There might be a good deal to be said in favour of the principle that a man who had benefited by a canal should pay for the benefit he derived, whether he wished to have that benefit or not. But it seemed that, practically, this would be a very small source of revenue, and extremely difficult of application. The rule could but apply to a very small strip of land on the sides of some portions of the canal; and it was extremely difficult to say whether the land had benefited, and how much it had benefited. It was still more difficult to say who ought to decide that question. His Honour strongly objected to the Canal Officer deciding it, and if this section was passed, he thought the claim of the Canal Officer should be decided by an entirely independent authority. His Honour not only objected to the clause on direct grounds, but also on much larger indirect grounds, namely, that there was no provision for compensation on account of injury done by a canal, corresponding to the rate sought to be levied on account of benefits, and therefore it was not consistent that a rate should be levied on account of benefits indirectly given by a canal. That was, in fact, the principal ground upon which he would ask the Council to strike this clause out. He had spent considerable portions of his life in countries where irrigation-canals existed; and he found that, wherever you took a canal, you must necessarily very much disturb the existing state of things. You did good to some; you did harm to others. You gave water to many to whom it was a benefit; but, on the other hand, you flooded lands where the flooding was an injury: you caused wells to fill in where such falling in was an injury. You drained where it was a benefit to drain: you drained where it was an injury to drain. There was no end to the questions which would arise if you applied fairly the principle involved in section 45 to adjust the benefits and the injuries resulting from canal-works. If you attempted to adjudicate in these matters, you would be put into overwhelming difficulties. He believed that you must look on these disturbances, these changes which altered the course of waters and drainage, as a sort of act of Providence. You must set the benefits conferred upon those who did not ask for them against the damage done to others. It would be impossible to adjust those matters satisfactorily; to give compensation to lands injured, and take payment from lands benefited. Unfortunately, we could not compensate those who were injured, and we should not seek to charge those who were accidentally benefited. His Honour much believed that that view must influence the Council, because those who benefited in the manner provided for by this section would be a small number in comparison to the cases in which compensation for injury might be claimed if the principle were allowed. He therefore hoped the Council would accept the amendment.

His Honour would say one word on the general question. It appeared to him necessary and most desirable that, in canal-irrigation, we should be scrupulously just: we should do nothing having the semblance of injustice. When this question was last before the Council, he alluded to the fact that there was a singular amount of unpopularity attached to canal-administration, notwithstanding the eminently benevolent and beneficial object of the works. He himself had some misgivings that he might have said too much on this point. His experience in Northern India had been in districts about the upper portions of the canals, where, perhaps, the injuries were more conspicuous than the benefits; and in Bengal, where the rain-fall was so large that the benefit was not at once recognised by the people: but he fully admitted that, in dry countries like the Panjáb, they were not to be compared with any other work. When the hon'ble Mr. Egerton was inclined to twit His Honour with an inclination to see the injuries caused by, rather than the benefits derived from, canal-irrigation, His Honour reflected that his experience was not so large as the hon'ble member's in countries where canals were a first necessity. In such a country as the Panjáb, canals were of immense benefit, and he thought to himself that, perhaps, he had said too much by way of caution regarding the proceedings of Canal Officers. But his opinion had been again somewhat modified. He was about to commit a serious breach of confidence. There were cases in which one must commit treason to save the State. On that account, he was about to betray the private confidence of the hon'ble member in charge of this Bill. He would not mince the matter, but he would tell the Council that, talking with the hon'ble member in the confidence of private friendship, and without the least suspicion that he was extracting evidence against the Canal Bill, the hon'ble member said something which had considerable effect on His Honour's mind in this matter. He was talking to Mr. Egerton about the Panjáb. His Honour was an old Panjábí, and had very much interest in the people there. He said to Mr. Egerton—"Do you think the people of the Panjáb really are happy and contented?" Mr. Egerton said—"I think they really are;" but he went on to say "they grumble a good deal, no doubt, as people generally do." His Honour asked, "What do they grumble about?" He thought Mr. Egerton would perhaps say they grumbled about the lawyers; but, in fact, he did not put the lawyers first on the subject of grumbling. He said—"well, they grumble a good deal about the canals." He went on to say—"It is very odd, but the people who have not got canals; the people who are at a distance from canals, are wild to have them; but as soon as they get them, they grumble about one thing and another." His Honour attributed this grumbling principally to what he had submitted to the Council, that the canal-administration had been too much the judges in their own cases; that they sometimes committed some injustice, not wilfully, or intending to do injustice, but from a natural zeal for their own Department. He attributed the conspicuous grumbling about canals, in a country where water was worth its weight in gold, in a very great degree to the cause which he had stated. Therefore, he thought the Council should take care that nothing should be done having the semblance of injustice. It did seem to him that this compulsory clause was not balanced by any corresponding clause for the grant of compensation for injuries sustained by means of canal-irrigation; that it would be difficult and irritating of application; that little would be got by it, and he would therefore omit it.

The Hon'ble Mr. Inglis agreed entirely with what had just been said by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, and should vote in favour of the amendment proposed by him. The section was a remnant of the old compulsory rating-clauses, which had been struck out of the Bill and should have gone with them.

It seemed to him inequitable that power should be given to Government to charge a water-rate on account of benefits caused by percolation, while all claims for compensation on account of damages arising from the same cause were barred. The cases in which injury would be done to land by percolation from a canal, were far more numerous than those in which benefit would be received; indeed, it might frequently happen that land which was benefited one year by percolation, would be injured the next should the percolation increase, and he could not think it right that a charge should be made on the owner in the one case, while no compensation was to be given to him in the other.

The Hon'ble Mr. Egerton opposed the amendment of his hon'ble friend, the Lieutenant Governor. The provision contained in this section was not a new one. In the rules made under Act VII of 1845, provision was made for charging a rate on lands which were situated within a certain specified distance of either side of the canal, whether the owners of such land took the water or not, and whether they benefited by the water or not. So that the rule was an arbitrary rule of distance, which applied rigidly to all lands within a certain distance from the canal. It had been found by experience, that the benefit derived from proximity to a canal varied according to the nature of the soil. The former rules, which prescribed that lands lying within a certain distance from a canal should pay the water-rate, disregarded this fact. In order to avoid the injustice which might arise from a uniform rule of distance only, this section was framed, which made the power of charging a rate on land depend, not only upon the consideration that the land lay within a certain distance from a canal, but also whether advantage had accrued to that land or not. If the land had been injured, the water-rate could not be charged. If it had not received the full benefit from percolation that it would have received from a direct supply of water, the rate could not be charged. There seemed to him to be no injustice in charging a water-rate on land which was shown to have been benefited by its proximity to a canal, although it had not received a direct supply of water, in a degree equal to that which would be caused by a direct supply of water.

With reference to what the Lieutenant Governor had stated in regard to a private conversation between His Honour and himself, MR. EGERTON would observe that His Honour had apparently misunderstood his meaning. When His Honour enquired what the people said about affairs in general, he told him that they certainly grumbled about canals. He went on to explain that you must not take people's grumbling literally, and stated that the proof of that was that the people who had canals always grumbled, while the people who had not the benefit of canals always wanted them. This illustration was intended to show that people made things which they really valued as advantages, ground of complaint, and that they were very reluctant to tell any one that they were well off. It was not intended to convey the meaning which His Honour had apparently understood, that there was any general complaint against the administration of the canals by the Canal Officers.

The clause regarding percolation stood as a part of Act XXX of 1871. It had been maintained since the year 1845 in some form or other by the rules framed under that Act. It was not objected to by His Honour on the occasion of his proposing various other amendments. He objected to there being no express provision for an appeal to the head revenue officer of the district in the section; but he did not object to the principle of charging for the benefit derived from percolation in itself. The amendment which His Honour proposed on that occasion to this section was, that after the first paragraph of section 45 be added the words "Any person dissatisfied with any such charge may appeal to the Collector." MR. EGERTON did not in that see any objection to the principle of charging for the benefit derived from percolation; and the provision regarding appeals to which His Honour's amendment related had now been inserted by the Select Committee. He thought, therefore, that, as the amendment was a new one in substance, and as he considered that the section as it stood contained a right and proper provision, it was his duty to oppose the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. BAYLEY agreed generally with the hon'ble Mr. Inglis in thinking that the clause as it stood gave rather an unfair appearance to the Bill. Perhaps the unfairness was rather apparent than real in character, for, though the Bill, indeed, as it stood distinctly provided that, where benefits which the land previously enjoyed from percolation were destroyed, there should be no compensation; whereas, wherever new benefits were given by percolation, a rate should be levied, yet, as a matter of fact, he thought that this clause would prove really inoperative. It was so guarded, and limited, and hedged in with conditions which were very just and wise, that he doubted whether it could ever be put in force. It required that the benefit should be proved to the satisfaction of the revenue authorities to be equal to the benefit that would be derived from a direct supply of water. He had had some little experience of canals, and in those districts where the soil was porous and thirsty, and the climate arid; and yet he thought he might safely say that he had never seen a case to which this rule would apply. The chief benefit even in the parts of the country to which he referred, were derived from the raising of the water-level in the wells, and in other parts of the country, where the soil was not so thirsty, and there had been a tolerable water-supply before, evil even might arise from this result. But it was manifest that in no case could the benefit thus derived from percolation amount to an extent equal to that of a direct supply of water. He believed, therefore, that the clause would be inoperative. But as he thought it represented an unfair principle, and as the cognate clauses regarding compulsory rating had been struck out, he would support the amendment.

Major General the Hon'ble H. W. NORMAN observed that he could not admit that the principle of this clause was the same as that contained in the clauses which had been objected to by the Secretary of State, because, under this section, it had to be proved that an advantage had been received, and there was the right of appeal to the principal revenue officer of the district. Still, as he was informed that the question would rarely arise, and that, in point of fact, the clause would be inoperative, he did not care to support its retention.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS said if this question went to the vote, he was prepared to vote with the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill. MR. ELLIS thought his hon'ble friend had fully answered the objection taken by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, that this was a part of the compulsory clauses disallowed by the Secretary of State. For Mr. Egerton had told the Council that this clause was a modification, in the direction of liberality to land-owners, of the rules framed and in force in the Panjáb under the old Panjáb Irrigation Act of 1845. That being so, it was obvious that the objection of His Honour that this clause was a remnant of the compulsory clauses objected to by the Secretary of State could not hold good.

The second objection which the Lieutenant Governor took had not been referred to by other members. But MR. ELLIS thought that that objection also might be answered. His Honour had stated that it was unjust to allow the Government to impose a rate on land benefited by percolation, when we refused to compensate land-owners for losses caused to them from land being injured by percolation. But there was a difference in the two cases. We had a standard whereby to gauge the benefit derived by percolation, and we laid down that the rate should not be leviable unless the benefit amounted at least to the corresponding benefit derived from a direct water-supply. On the other hand, compensation for damage done by percolation was disallowed after careful consideration, because there were no means of ascertaining the amount of loss sustained, which, as suggested by Sir William Muir, must necessarily be of so uncertain and varying a character, that there could be no estimate of the amount and no reason for allowing compensation. The two cases were perfectly distinct; and as both the objections raised by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor were, in his opinion, untenable, he (MR. ELLIS) would vote against the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE thought His Honour the Lieutenant Governor must not lay the flattering unction to his soul that this clause was comprised in the principle of those which were rejected by the Secretary of State, because the compulsory clauses objected to were for the assessment of rates on land which was irrigable but not irrigated; and the main objection to those clauses was, that you assessed people on a purely imaginary benefit, that was to say, on the benefit they might receive if they chose to take water. Here, you proposed to assess a rate on the basis of the real benefit they received from water coming out of the canal. At the same time, on comparing section 45 with section 8, MR. HOBHOUSE thought there was the injustice which His Honour pointed out. Section 8 said—

"No compensation shall be awarded for any damage caused by stoppage or diminution of percolation or floods, or for deterioration of climate or soil."

Therefore, if you diminished percolation, and so injured the land, the landlord got no compensation; if you increased percolation so much as to deteriorate the soil, again he got no compensation. But if your percolation was just of that amount which gave the landlord benefit, you made a charge for such benefit. When he first read the controversy between the Panjáb Government and the authorities of the North-Western Provinces, he thought that there was an inequality in this mode of treating the matter, and he had never been able to see the matter in any other light. Therefore, he was constrained to support the amendment.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE thought this clause was of extremely small importance, and could not say that he had any pronounced opinion upon it. But he concurred in the arguments adduced by his hon'ble friend, Mr. Ellis. He believed that every word of that argument was correct. And in reply to what had just fallen from the hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse, SIR RICHARD TEMPLE would say that there was a difference between a charge for percolation, and the refusal of compensation for damages. That damage was absolutely undefined. It might be more or less, though it never happened to such an extent as to destroy cultivation. His hon'ble friend seemed to have lost sight of the fact that the damage was so indefinite. But in these cases of benefit from percolation, there was a precise measure of the benefit to be derived, namely, that it must be equal to that which would have been derived from a full supply of canal-irrigation. It was not correct to say that there was one measure in this clause, and another measure in another clause. If it had happened that extensive lands were receiving benefit from percolation, then, certainly, he would, in concurrence with his hon'ble friend, Mr. Ellis, vote for retention of the clause. But it was the fact, as stated by the hon'ble Mr. Bayley, that there was a very limited area of land thus affected. Therefore, he could not say he had any pronounced opinion one way or the other, believing the clause to be of no practical importance. But as the clause was not objectionable in principle, he thought it was better to follow the advice of the member in charge of the Bill, who carried with him the weight of local authority; and to let the clause stand as it was.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT thought enough had been said to show that there was a good deal in this clause which was open to objection. There was, no doubt, a small modicum of compulsion in the clause, and HIS EXCELLENCY was satisfied that the Council were desirous fully to carry out the views of Her Majesty's Government against compulsory rating. There was also the question of equity stated by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor and the hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse, namely, that, as the Act debarred claims for compensation for loss caused by percolation, it was not fair that there should be a charge made in those cases in which the landholders received benefit from percolation. Therefore, HIS EXCELLENCY thought the Council would be disposed to decide the question by omitting this clause.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR observed that he hoped his hon'ble friend, Mr. Egerton, would not be so hard upon him as he seemed to be inclined to be. HIS HONOUR believed that his hon'ble friend had re-stated the conversation almost exactly in the same words as HIS HONOUR had used, although the deduction he drew from them was different.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR'S motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT observed that the rules provided that a Bill could not be passed on the same day on which it was amended. The motion that the Bill be passed would therefore stand over till the next meeting of the Council.

The Motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

The following Select Committee was named:—

On the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Oaths and Affirmations—The Hon'ble Messrs. Bayley and Chapman, His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis, the Hon'ble Rájá Ramánáth Thákur and the Mover.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 11th February 1873.

OBSERVATIONS.—Serious inconvenience has been experienced in consequence of trees being too close to telegraph wires, and thus interfering with the safe transmission of telegraphic messages, and frequent difficulties and delays have arisen regarding the removal of such obstructions; while on the other hand, the Civil and Public Works Officers have complained of irregular action on the part of Telegraph Officers in injuring trees without permission or consultation with the proper authorities. His Excellency the Governor General in Council considers it expedient that rules should be promulgated for future guidance, with a view to prevent the recurrence of similar difficulties.

2. The following are the rules which have been approved by the Governor General in Council :—

Draft Rules regarding the planting and cutting of trees, and the cutting of branches which interfere with telegraph wires.

Rules applicable more especially to new lines of telegraph.

In laying out a new line of telegraph, the Telegraph Officer charged with the erection of the line should take care that there is no unnecessary destruction of trees, especially those of old and fine growth, and should avoid, as much as possible, interference with existing avenues, groves and plantations, and even single trees, whether public or private property; he should consult the Civil Authorities and others and satisfy them on this point; and when a new line is to be constructed along a road, the Telegraph Officer should be careful not to place it so as to interfere with the future planting of avenues of trees.

2. Where, after such consultation, it is agreed that interference is unavoidable for the proper construction of the line, the Telegraph Officer will be careful further to consult the Civil Authorities and others concerned, and arrange with them that due compensation is paid to the owners in all cases where the trees are private property.

3. If the trees are the property of Government, they shall, on no account, be cut down or lopped without the permission of the officer in charge of the trees, and if this permission is refused, and the Telegraph Officer is not satisfied, the matter must be referred to the next superior officer in the Telegraph Department, who may then consult the higher Civil or Public Works Authorities, or refer to the head of his own department.

4. When new lines are being constructed in Native States, the Political Agent shall be referred to by the Telegraph Officers to make the necessary arrangements with the Native Durbar for cutting or removing trees, and for granting compensation.

5. Unless, under special sanction or agreement with the local officers concerned, no line of telegraph shall be erected parallel to an avenue or side of a grove of trees within 25 feet of the edge thereof. Civil and Public Works Officers are, however, requested to give all reasonable consideration to the requirements of the Telegraph Department, as exemplified in the following extract from a letter No. 321 of 6th November 1872, from the Officiating Director General of Telegraphs :—

"In many parts of India, and in many instances, the only portions of the country not under water in the rains are the main roads, along both sides of which avenues or groves of trees are not unfrequently planted for shade. To place the supports of a telegraph line at a distance not less than 25 feet outside of the boundary of the road, avenues of trees or groves would necessitate the telegraph line being erected well into the fields or jungle liable to inundation, at a distance so considerable as to preclude the possibility of inspection from the road, with, moreover, a deep ditch full of water between the road and the boundary thereof. I am, therefore, of opinion that this paragraph should be either cancelled or altered if future extensions of, or alterations to, telegraph lines are to be worked efficiently. If the avenues of trees is of any age and growth, the trees will be sufficiently high and thick to admit of the supports for the telegraph lines being planted within a few feet of their trunks, and of the wires being carried under their branches without, many of the latter having to be cut off from the one side, the trees being disfigured, or their shade reduced. The telegraph lines in India were at first constructed across the fields and away from the sides of the roads, the result being that at certain times of the year inspection was most difficult and shirked, and involved injury to the growing and standing crops. This system was abandoned when the lines were being reconstructed."

6. When new lines of telegraph must be taken over avenues, they should be carried across as nearly at right angles as possible. Long slants are objectionable, as they interfere with many trees.

7. The Civil or Public Works Officers are desired to inform the officers of the Telegraph Department immediately on becoming aware of any cases in which telegraph lines are being constructed within 25 feet of any grove or avenue, or so as to prevent the convenient planting of a road avenue in future, or generally when any arrangement of a line of telegraph is likely to cause inconvenience or injury. In case of failure to arrange with the officer immediately concerned, the matter should be brought to the notice of the local head of the Telegraph Department, and also reported to higher authority in the Civil or Public Works Department.

Rules applicable more especially to existing lines of telegraph.

8. Where existing telegraph lines are within 25 feet of any avenue or grove of trees, the Telegraph Officer shall be primarily responsible that the wires are kept free of contact. To this end he may, without reference to the officers in charge, keep boughs up to 2 inches diameter clear for a distance of 3 feet from the line of telegraph wire. Likewise, twigs and small boughs easily moved by the wind may be cleared away for a distance of 6 feet from the telegraph line without reference to the officer in charge.

9. In cases where it is necessary that large boughs or tops of trees should be cut, permission to cut them should be asked in writing from the officer in whose charge they are. Should no answer be received within ten days of the date of despatch of the letter to the office of the officer concerned, the Telegraph Officer may intimate his intention to proceed to cut the branches, and one week thereafter shall be at liberty to cut the branches without further reference.

10. Telegraph Officers shall be held responsible that the cutting and lopping of trees is not more than is absolutely necessary for the proper working of the telegraph line.

11. Public Works Officers and other officers in charge of roads will be held responsible that trees are not planted in positions where they are likely to interfere with the telegraph wires, viz., within 25 feet of them as laid down in Rule 5.

12. The officers of the Telegraph Department are required immediately to make a courteous remonstrance in any case where trees are being planted within 25 feet of, or so as to be likely to interfere with, a telegraph wire; and in case of their objection not being attended to, they should report at once to their immediate superiors. The Superintendent of the Division or the superior officer should represent the case to the local authority in charge of the planting, and endeavour to get the trees removed, failing which he should report to the head of his own department.

13. Wherever possible, trees that have been recently planted within the prescribed distance should be removed.

14. It may be necessary in some few cases to remove existing lines of telegraph, which interfere seriously, or are likely so to interfere, with groves or avenues of trees, but on account of the expense, no such removal is to take place without a special report to the Government of India of all the circumstances of the case. Such report must distinctly show whether the avenue was first planted, or the telegraph line first erected.

15. The foregoing rules are not applicable to lines of telegraph passing through forest and jungle tracts, but care should, nevertheless, be taken to avoid injury to large trees which are in every situation to be considered as valuable.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution, and copy of the Rules embodied therein, be forwarded to all local Governments and Administrations for information and guidance, and for communication to all officers concerned.

Ordered also, that copies be forwarded to the Government of India, in the Home Department, for publication in the Gazette of India, and to the Officiating Director General of Telegraphs in India for information and distribution.

Traffic.—On the whole, the traffic was greater than it was in the corresponding month of last year. The increase is principally in grains, firewood, and building materials. On the other hand, there is a falling off in the rafting of squared timber and in the quantity of cotton carried down the canal.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

Memorandum by Dr. Forbes Watson on the results of examinations made in England to ascertain the value of Indian Gums and Resins.

The gums and resins alluded to in letter No. 18, India, Revenue Forests Department (1872), have been received as follows:—

FROM THE N. W. PROVINCES ... { "Simli" gum of zizyphus flexuosa.
"Lac" from ficus religiosa and ficus Indica.

FROM THE CENTRAL PROVINCES { "Dhawa" gum.
"Dammar" of Shorea robusta.

FROM HAIDARABAD ... { Dowra gum of Conocarpus latifolia.
"Mohin" gum of Oodina Wodier.
Chironji gum of Buchanania latifolia.
"Karrai" gum of Sterculia urens.

FROM BRITISH BURMA ... { "Thingan" resin of Hopea odorata.
"Tingyoo" turpentine from Pinus Khasyana and Pinus Massoniana.

These have been submitted for valuation to two brokers and two gum merchants, the result of whose examinations are summarized below:—

SAMPLES.	BROKER—No. 1.	BROKER—No. 2.	MERCHANT—No. 3.	MERCHANT—No. 4.
"Simli." Zizyphus flexuosa, North-Western Provinces.	Low Arabic pickings; on value.	Arabic, dark, inferior, at 5 per cwt.	Very dark, dirty, and blockty, hardly pay freight and charges.	Black, dark, quite unsaleable.
"Dowra." Conocarpus latifolia, Haidarabad.	Inferior gum Arabic, drossy, weak, at 15 per cwt.	Arabic ghatty gum, at 22-6 to 25 per cwt.	Low Arabic kind, partially soluble, at 10 per cwt.	Macilaginous, weak, 50 per cent. insoluble of clean, at 15 per cwt.
"Karrai." Sterculia urens, Haidarabad.	Low Tragacanth or Hog, partly insoluble, at 30 per cwt.	Tragacanth, Hog, large, at 45 per cwt.	Hoggy, Tragacanth, at 30 per cwt.	Tragacanth kind, insoluble.
"Mohin." Oodina Wodier, Haidarabad.	Gum Arabic kind, too low for this market.	Arabic Hoggy, mixed, at 25 to 30 per cwt.	Similar to Chironji, but more pulpy, at 10 to 15 per cwt.	Macilaginous, with viscid insoluble matter, little or no value.
"Chironji." Buchanania latifolia, Haidarabad.	Inferior gum Arabic, part insoluble and foul, at 25 per cwt.	Tragacanth and Arabic mixed, dark, at 25 per cwt.	Inferior Acacia type, fairly soluble, at 15 to 20 per cwt.	Similar to Mohin, darker and with more bark.
"Dhawa." Central Provinces.	Too low for this market.	Arabic or ghatty, dark, inferior, at 15 per cwt.	Lower kind of "Dowra," at 5 per cwt.	Similar to "Dowra," but more dark unsaleable.
"Thingan." Hopea odorata, British Burma.	Low crusty copal; would not pay charges.	Dammar, middling, small, pale, at 25 to 30 per cwt.	Low soft copal, resembling common Manilla, at 20 per cwt.	Copal similar to Lisbon copal, at 30 to 40 per cwt.
"Sal." Shorea robusta, Central Provinces.	Low crusty copal; would not pay charges.	Copal, resinous, drossy, at 15 per cwt.	Weak firable resin, at 5 per cwt.	Copal similar to Manilla copal, at 18 per cwt.
"Lac." From ficus religiosa and ficus Indica.	Small dusty, at 40 per cwt.	Dusty, mixed, at 40 per cwt.	Fair colour, medium quality, at 70 per cwt.	Small, dusty, pale, at 70 to 80 per cwt.

By reference to these reports it will be noted that the Simli gum obtained from Zizyphus flexuosa is of such dark colour and inferior quality as not to be saleable in this market at a price to pay freight and charges. The "Dhawa" gum from the Central Provinces obtained but a little better report, and it may be presumed that this quality would not pay for export.

The remaining gums, "Dowra" from Conocarpus latifolia, Mohin rom "Oodina Wodier," and Chironji from Buchanania latifolia, may all be accepted as representing a low class of Arabic gum, and as such may be compared in price with that gum in this market. Broker No. 2 rates these three above-named kinds at from 22-6 to 30 per cwt.; the market price of Turkey gum gedda at the same date being about 25*s*. per cwt. Hence it will be seen that the "Dowra," Mohin, and Chironji gums sent for report may be entered as equal in price and quality to Turkey gum gedda.

If the price quoted by the Officiating Deputy Conservator of Forests at Haidarabad as that for Dowra gum, namely, £14 per ton, be accepted as the normal rate, then from £10 and upwards remains to pay freight and charges and secure a profit upon consignments to this country. This is the conclusion which the reports justify us in forming. It is worthy of notice that these samples of gums are not so good as they might have been, had more care been exercised in their collection. All the samples are more or less drossy and mixed with pieces of bark. The gum itself is subject also to selection, since the separation of the brown from the white pieces would raise the value of the latter. The market value, it may fairly be presumed, would be augmented considerably by the gum being cleaner picked, and the browner portion separated from the whiter, the latter only being exported.

The Karrai gum, obtained from Sterculia urens, belongs to a different class, namely, that a low Tragacanth, and the sample sent is valued at from 30 to 45 per cwt. This again would be increased in value if picked over, and the brown pieces excluded. The pale gum thus left would probably approximate more nearly to the price of Hoggy Tragacanth, of which the present value is about 70*s*. per cwt.

The two resins are of a very low quality, and that of the Sal Shorea robusta would scarcely pay to export to this country. The Thingan from Hopea odorata is small and valued at from 20 to 40 per cwt. Its nearest allies in the London market are common Manilla and Lisbon copal, the value of which respectively are about 28 and 37 per cwt. The market value of this resin in British Burma is stated (despatch No. 20 of 1872) to be about 4*d*. per lb. If so, it would be useless to send it to this country to compete with Manilla copal, 3*d*., and Lisbon copal at 4*d*. per lb.

"Lac" is so well known in the market as not to call for any special remarks, except that the present sample is valued by the brokers at 40, and the merchants at 70 per cwt. The principal objection urged against it is that of its being "small and dusty."

The crude turpentine from British Burma has been very favorably reported upon. It is the produce of Pinus Khasyana and Pinus Massoniana, the market rate being about 4*d*. per lb. in Burma. The reports of the two firms to which the sample was submitted for valuation are No. 5: "We have submitted the crude turpentine to the trade, and have their report to the effect that it appears to be of very fair quality. We estimate the market value would be from £12 to £14 per ton." No. 6 "have carefully examined the sample of rough or crude turpentine and found the quality to be fine and equal to any ever imported from the United States, where the distillation for this market and that of the continent (Bordeaux excepted) is carried on; crude has ceased to be an article of import. There was not any in 1872, 1871, 1870, or 1869, whereas twenty years ago it was a great trade; the nominal value of sample before us would be 13*s*.-6*d*. per cwt."

Manifestly, if the value in Burma of this turpentine is about 4*d*. per lb., or 37 per cwt., and its value here is only from 12*s*. to 14*s*. per cwt., it would be far better to rely upon home consumption.

The only gums, therefore, which could be sent to this country with any chance of profit or success (in so far as the present reports help us to an opinion) are gums of the Acacia kind, and probably also the Tragacanth. Resins of the copal kind, as shown by Mr. Broughton (No. 794, 30th June 1868), would have to compete in this market with the best copals, and therefore could hardly realise remunerative prices. It would be well if samples of other good soluble gums were sent over for report, taking into account what has already been suggested as to picking it more carefully, so as to exclude the fragments of bark, and sorting from it the darker pieces. The gums of Acacia Arabica, Acacia catechu, Feronia Elephantum, and Azadirachta Indica, if clean and pale, and can be had in quantity, should be valued, for which purpose 10 lbs. of each would suffice. Mixed gums containing pieces differing in solubility, or including bark and other foreign substances, should not be placed in competition with the cleaner and more homogenous gum Arabics of the London market.

INDIA OFFICE,
London, the 31*st December* 1872.

To His Excellency the Right Honorable the Governor General of India in Council.

MY LORD,

I forward, for the information of your Excellency in Council, copy of two despatches* addressed by the Governor of Trinidad and the Lieutenant-Governor of Grenada to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Governor of the Windward Islands, respectively, and which have been transmitted to this office by desire of the Earl of Kimberley, reporting the return to India, on board the vessel Pandora, of certain immigrants, the amount of savings deposited for remittance to them, and the sums carried back by them in specie and jewellery.

* 5th November 1872, and enclosure.
25th October 1872, and enclosure.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) ARGYLL.

No. 231.

From Acting Governor Rennie, to the Earl of Kimberley.

TRINIDAD,
The 5*th November* 1872.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to report to your Lordships the departure of the ship Pandora from this colony yesterday with return coolies for Calcutta. She carries 508 souls equal to 448½ adults, of these 71 men, 23 women, 8 boys and 8 girls belong to Grenada, and the remaining 220 men, 97 women, 27 boys, 32 girls, and 22 infants are from here.

2. The Pandora measures under Sterling's rules 5,607 feet, less 190 feet deductions for masts, &c., giving accommodation for 451 adults. A copy of Dr. Winstone's certificate regarding the health of the passengers and the fittings and supplies of the ship is herein enclosed.

3. I have caused several of the children to be vaccinated, so that a supply of lymph may be obtained for carrying on the vaccinations during the voyage; and as the Trinidad coolies have been kept a considerable time in the depôt on one of the Five Islands previous to embarkation, I hope that no small-pox will break out.

4. The remittances by the coolies from here amount to $$54,876^{64}$, of which $$51,083^{46}$ have been paid into the Colonial Treasury, and $$3,793^{18}$ in specie have been placed in charge of the Surgeon Superintendent of the ship. These large savings are divided amongst 181 of the coolies, as the children and 136 of the adults have made no deposits.

Six men have deposited amongst them sums giving a total of $13,066. One hundred and thirteen coolies have deposited sums varying from one hundred to a thousand dollars, and sixty-two, sums under one hundred dollars. Of course in addition to these deposits there is a certain amount of gold carried by the coolies themselves, and fully the usual amount of gold and silver in the shape of jewellery.

On a visit I made to the depôt, I noticed several women whose arms were covered with bangles.

5. A curious feature I have remarked, in looking over the return of wills made by the coolies, is that one woman (and that the largest female depositor) has willed her money to the Crown, and three men have made wills in favor of the Trinidad Cooly Orphanage.

6. I enclose a copy of a report made by the Agent General of Immigrants as to the state of the coolies in the depôt some days previous to embarkation, and would remark, with regard to that part of it relating to the vaccination of the Grenada coolies, that out of 88 coolies reported as vaccinated at Grenada prior to embarkation, only two turned out to have been successfully vaccinated.

7. A bill for £15,000 at 90 days' sight is being transmitted to the Crown Agents by this mail, so that it may arrive at maturity in time to meet the drafts from India on account of the coolies' deposits and the expenses of the vessel.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) W. W. RENNIE.

IMMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, TRINIDAD.

Surgeon Superintendent's Certificate.

I certify the undermentioned to be the number of return Indian immigrants delivered into my charge on board the ship Pandora bound to Calcutta, and that there is not apparent among them any sickness of consequence or any infectious disorder capable of proving dangerous to the passengers. I further certify that I have carefully examined the fitments of the ship, provisions, medicines and medical comforts, and that they are according to agreement.

(Signed) J. B. WINSTONE,
Surgeon Superintendent.

From Dr. Mitchell, to the Hon'ble the Colonial Secretary.

IMMIGRATION OFFICE,
The 25th October 1872.

SIR,—I have the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that all preparations for despatching the Pandora have been completed since the 22nd instant, but that the ship herself will not in all probability be ready to receive the return coolies till Monday, the 28th instant.

2. These coolies deposited money in the Treasury for transmission to India to the amount of more than fifty-one thousand dollars ($51,000), and a further sum in gold, rupees, &c., of $ 3,746 in the hands of the Sub-Agent, to be entrusted to the care of the Surgeon Superintendent. Gradually as their wills were made and their different receipts registered, they were transferred to the Island Depôt, where, on the 22nd instant, their numbers finally reached 203 men, 92 women, 29 boys, 32 girls and 22 infants.

3. To prevent any taint from the late epidemic, these people have been as carefully isolated as circumstances permitted.

At the depôt they enjoy sea-bathing under proper restraint. A daily bulletin of their health is transmitted by the officer in charge, and since the 10th instant they have been thrice visited by me professionally and once in company with the Surgeon General, when a careful enquiry was instituted, lest any symptoms of eruptive maladies might have declared themselves. To-morrow I propose visiting the depôt again accompanied by the Surgeon Superintendent. From the 20th instant till the embarkation of these immigrants, their feeding will be at the charge of the ship Pandora.

4. The return immigrants from Grenada arrived per Royal Mail Steamer Tyne, and were transferred to the Pandora on the morning of the 20th instant, where they have since remained under charge of Surgeon Superintendent Winstone.

As many of the children among the latter had not been vaccinated, the fact, in compliance with His Excellency's instructions, has been communicated to the Health Officer, with a request that he will take the steps he may deem most suitable to meet the emergency.

There still remain some people to be shipped from the House of Refuge and from the Hospital, who, with others not at depôt, may bring the number up to 450. Of these last, the particulars will be given when the ship leaves.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) H. MITCHELL,
Agent General of Immigrants.

SIR,—I have the honor to transmit to your Excellency the accompanying return* showing 71 males, 23 females, 8 boys and 8 girls, total 110 immigrants, who left this island on the 19th instant by the Royal Mail Steamer Tyne to join the ship Pandora at Trinidad, which vessel was chartered by the Emigration Commissioners for the conveyance of coolies from this island and Trinidad to India.

* In duplicate.

2. The usual returns have been transmitted to the Emigration Commissioners, London, and the Protector of Immigrants, Calcutta.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE FORTNIGHT ENDING THE 13th FEBRUARY 1873.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Prospects continue much the same as last fortnight. An unseasonable rainfall seems to have done some damage in Nagapatam and Mysor. On the other hand, in Northern India rain for the rabi crops is more or less wanted from Bhagalpur westwards to Lahor. The Central Provinces have had seasonable rain, and thence, as also from Lower Bengal and Bombay generally, the accounts of the cold weather crops are favorable. In Gujrat and the Berars cotton-picking is still going on; in Wardha it has been completed. Prices in Bombay seem variable, some districts shewing a further fall, while in contiguous districts grain has slightly risen.

RESOLUTION.

It having been brought to notice that the distribution of plants and shrubs from the several Botanical Gardens was restricted by the high rate of freight (4th class) charged for their conveyance by railway, the possibility of lowering the rate was suggested to the various Companies. The Governor General in Council is now glad to observe that the Companies noted on the margin have agreed to reduce the rate to the 2nd class, and the Great Southern of India Railway Company even to the first class; all consignments being carried at the owner's risk.

Eastern Bengal Railway.
East India Railway.
Sind, Punjab and Delhi Railway.
Madras Railway.

2. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company has agreed to carry plants and shrubs on the payment of—

(1).—A minimum charge at second class rate, as for three tons per truck used at owner's risk; or

(2).—Third class rate for actual weight, also at owner's risk; or

(3).—Fourth class rate on actual weight, at the Company's risk.

3. The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Company is prepared to adopt the same terms as have been accepted by the authorities of the other railways with which that Company books through.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be forwarded to local Governments and Administrations* for communication to the several Botanical Gardens and Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 11th February 1873.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G. M. S. I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Major General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.
The Hon'ble A. Hobhouse, Q. C.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.
His Highness the Mahárájá of Vizianagram, K. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.
The Hon'ble R. A. Dalyell.
The Hon'ble Rájá Ramánáth Thákur.

The Hon'ble MR. DALYELL took the oath of allegiance, and the oath that he would faithfully discharge the duties of his office.

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Rules for the Conduct of Business be taken into consideration. When he moved for that Committee he had explained that the reason for doing so was, not on account of there being any great defects in the Rules, but that, in some small particulars, it was found that the practice of the Council habitually differed from that laid down by the Rules. The Rules, in fact, were made not very long after the Indian Councils' Act was passed, and very good Rules they were. But the practical experience of ten years had thrown some light on them, and in some particulars it seemed that they might be advantageously altered. Hence the Committee. The Committee had sat on the question, and had made some alterations, all of a rather minute character.

He would just explain what were the principles upon which the amendments were made. The first was a mere re-arrangement. There were some Rules laid down for us by Statute which we could not alter, and there were others which were within our own competency to make, and which we could alter from time to time. These were, to some extent, mixed up in the former Rules. We had now separated them; and, for the convenience of the members, we had given, by way of introduction, the sections of the Act of Parliament which bore on the business of the Council. We then proceeded with those Rules which we could ourselves make and alter. Then the principal points in which the practice of the Council was found to vary from the Rules were thus dealt with. In some places the existing Rules laid down fixed times for the performance of various operations, and in other places they ordered fixed acts to be done, such as the publication of Bills and so forth. It was found that very often the fixed times and fixed acts were not observed. And therefore the Committee had framed the new Rules upon a somewhat different principle. He would take Rule 19 as an example. The new Rule 19 answered to the existing Rule 16. Rule 16 said that no Bill should be introduced until seven days after a copy of the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons had been furnished to each Member. Now that limit of time very often was not observed. And there were many Bills of a very simple character, in regard to which it was by no means necessary to observe that Rule. Take, for instance, the Bill which he had next on the List of Business. Half-an-hour would enable any person to go through that Bill and its Statement of Objects and Reasons, and to make up his mind whether he required further time for consideration or not. Therefore, the Committee had altered the principle on which that Rule went, and what they had provided was this—that before any motion about a Bill was made, the Statement of Objects and Reasons and a copy of the Bill should be furnished to each member. Then they said that any member might object to the motion unless such copies had been furnished to him seven days previously, and such objection should prevail, unless the President, in exercise of his power to suspend any of these Rules, allowed the motion to be made. So that they did not lay down any positive Rule that a certain time should elapse between the day on which a copy of the Bill was furnished and the day on which the Bill was introduced or the motion was made. But if any particular injustice or inconvenience was likely to result from too little time being allowed, it was competent to any member to object to the motion, and that objection was to prevail, unless the Rules were entirely suspended; an operation which would not be performed by the President against the objection of any Member unless there was some very strong and substantial reason for doing so.

They had altered several other Rules in the same way. The new Rules 26, 28 and 31, which all related to time, were framed on the same principle. And with regard to publication, they had also relaxed the Rule which existed before. The new Rule 21, put it to the Council to make an order which was to prescribe the particular Gazettes in which publication was to be made, and the particular vernacular languages in which it was suitable for each Bill to be published. It was obvious that a Bill might affect different parts of the country, and it might be proper to translate it into one or two or more languages. But it would be a mere waste of time to translate it into all the other languages of the country.

Then there were some alterations made in respect to Select Committees, in regard to which the existing Rules were somewhat silent. They provided that the Law Member should always be ex officio a member of every Committee, and that he should also be ex officio chairman of the Committee and should have a casting vote. They also provided that the Select Committee should always, in their Report, state whether the Bill had been so altered as to require re-publication, and also whether the publication ordered by the Rules or by the Council had taken place. The rule was put in that form because the publication of Bills was not very infrequently neglected, and such neglect was not brought to the notice of the Council. It was proposed that it should always appear in the Report of the Select Committee what had been done in respect of the publication of Bills. And then it would be for the Council to judge, with regard to the nature and character of a Bill, whether they would proceed with the Bill or give further time for its publication.

There were several other small alterations made with the view of bringing the form of the Rules in accordance with that pra[illegible] ex-perience had shown to be most convenient. He need not [illegible]ain the Council further with any explanation of what had been done.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR felt hi[illegible]elf precluded from moving any formal amendment, because he had not direc[illegible]taken advantage of the opportunity that was afforded him of sitting [illegible]mber of the Select Committee. He did not sit on that Committee [illegible]aving said, as the hon'ble Member in charge of the Legislative Department ha[illegible]entioned, that he should not be able regularly to attend the meetings of the [illegible]mmittee. But if he had known that the proceedings of the Committee would [illegible]ave been so short, he would not have objected to serve. He had, however [illegible]offered to give the Committee any information they desired as to the work[illegible]g of the Rules of the Bengal Council, which were somewhat differently fr[illegible]ed from those of this Council. The Committee did not think it necessary to [illegible]ll upon him to fulfil his promise; and as the matter was disposed of by [illegible]e Committee, he was not prepared formally to propose any alteration. But [illegible]e was one somewhat radical question which went beyond the Rules embodi[illegible] the Report; and if it should happen that any hon'ble members should think that there was anything in what he said, possibly, His Excellency the President might consent to adjourn the debate, with a view to the consideration of this matter. What he had to say was with regard to one important point only. The hon'ble member had told the Council that they had neglected, in some minor points, the Rules hitherto prescribed. His Honour was about to suggest that, in one radical point, the spirit of something more than the Rules—the law—in regard to the constitution of the Legislative Council had been, he thought, to some extent, neglected in the practice which had grown up during the last year or two. He alluded to the practice of legislating with regard to the general interests of the empire, at places and under circumstances in which a large portion of the Council had not an opportunity of expressing their views, when the Council was almost exclusively confined to Members of the Executive Government, and when the members, who were called Additional Members, had not the opportunity to attend. It seemed to His Honour that the spirit of the Act of Parliament on this subject did require that, when great laws affecting the empire in general were discussed and passed, an opportunity to attend on such occasions should be given to the Additional Members of the Council. His Honour was himself of opinion that, in this country, very large powers, he might say in some sense despotic powers, should be exercised by the Executive Government. But the British Parliament, for very good reasons no doubt, prescribed that the power of legislation should not be exercised in that way; that it should be exercised in a more deliberate manner and by a larger body; that there should be added to the Executive Council of His Excellency a certain number of members, called Additional Members taken from various classes of society. These classes might be briefly summed to consist of, first, Government servants of standing and experience from various parts of the empire; secondly, of independent European gentlemen engaged in the business of commerce and other pursuits, who lent the aid of their practical experience and advice; thirdly, of Native gentlemen who loyally gave their gratuitous services sitting in this Council. It seemed to His Honour that, when the Council met on the Himalayas, under circumstances which did not admit of these gentlemen attending the Council, the Council was incomplete. He wished to suggest for consideration whether, if it be possible, it might not be desirable that some Rule should be made by which great laws affecting the empire in general should not be passed under circumstances when the Council was cut down to one-half of its members and those all of one class. In order to meet emergent cases, power was given to the Viceroy to pass laws for a period of six months upon his own authority and responsibility. But laws of a more lasting character passed by the Council should be passed by the Council at large, and not by only a portion of that Council at places where the Additional Members, although summoned to meet at Simla, practically had not the opportunity to attend. Although summonses might be issued to the servants of the Government to attend, and although, perhaps, they would be glad to go there, in practice, the opportunity was not given to them, and they did not go. The Council were aware that the mercantile members, who had their own occupations and engagements, could not possibly go, and did not meet at Simla. It also happened that some of the Native members had not given their presence at Simla. One very valuable Native member was a resident of Calcutta, and whether he might or might not attend His Honour was not aware, although another hon'ble Native member might, probably, give his very valuable services there. Notwithstanding, he thought that, in the course of the last two years, some important Bills, affecting the empire in general, and affecting Bengal, a long way off from the place of meeting, had been passed when the Additional Members had not an opportunity of attending. It seemed to His Honour that this Council had twofold functions to perform. In his opinion, by a very unfortunate misconstruction of the Act of Parliament, it had been supposed that, in the various outlying provinces of the empire, nothing could be done without a law. His own opinion was different. When we succeeded to the Government of those provinces, we succeeded, as he thought, to the despotic powers of the Governments before, and those powers were exercised by the Executive Government till they were limited by law, and so far as they were not limited. But another opinion had prevailed, namely, that, in all the provinces, since the passing of the Indian Councils' Act, nothing could be done without a law. The consequence was that, in regard to all those provinces which had not Legislative Councils of their own, it was necessary that all matters requiring legislation should be disposed of by this Council. Therefore, this Council had two-fold duties; one of making laws for the whole of the empire in general, which were beyond the competence and scope of the local legislatures; and the second was the passing of those particular measures required for the outlying provinces which had no legislatures of their own. As a matter of expedience and practice, the legislation necessary for such outlying provinces as the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces, British Burma, and other provinces, might very fairly and properly be conducted by the Council shorn of many of its members. But, on the other hand, legislation of a general character, which affected the whole empire, which affected those provinces which had legislatures of their own, should not be passed, he would not say by an emasculated Council, but by a Council cut of one-half of its members. General laws should be passed by a Council which really represented the whole of the elements of which the Council was composed. And therefore, if the remarks which His Honour had made were in any way worthy of consideration, it might be better to adjourn the discussion, in order that the question might be considered whether some Rule might not be passed which should ensure the claim of all sections of the Council to consider laws of general interest and importance. Some such Rule might be possible as a Rule providing that general laws affecting the empire, and laws affecting provinces which had legislatures of their own, should not be passed at places distant from the Presidency, unless at least five Additional Members were present. His Honour was not prepared to propose a Rule in any definite and formal shape. He submitted the matter in general terms, and hoped that, if the suggestion was thought worthy of consideration, the consideration of the Committee's Report might be adjourned with a view to the consideration of this particular point.

His Excellency the President :—"His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has, as I understand him, put the question to me, whether it is advisable that the Council should be adjourned in view of the propriety of passing some rule either in respect to the locality in which the Council shall assemble, or to the qualification of the members who constitute a quorum. I have received no notice of these questions, but I will endeavour to answer them to the best of my ability.

"In respect to the locality, I apprehend it is not competent to the Council to pass such a rule, because the section of the Act of Parliament under which we are now acting is in the following words :—'It shall be lawful for the Governor General to make rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Council,' and 'such rules may be subsequently amended at meetings for the purpose of making laws and regulations.'

"These words seem to me to limit our power to the framing of rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Council, and therefore, in my opinion, it would not be competent to the Council to pass any rule in respect to the locality in which the Council shall assemble.

"In regard to the other suggestion of His Honour, namely, that some rule might be passed in respect to the qualification of the Members who are to constitute a quorum, the section of the Act of Parliament is as follows :—'The power of making laws and regulations vested in the Governor General in Council shall be exercised at meetings of the said Council at which such Governor General or President, or some Ordinary Member of Council, and six or more Members of the said Council (including under the term Members of the Council such Additional Members as aforesaid) shall be present.'

"In accordance with this section, the quorum of the Council consists of seven Members, and I apprehend that it would be contrary to the spirit, if not to the actual letter, of the Act to make any rule under which the general provision respecting the quorum of Members should be limited by any restriction as to the qualification of the Members who should compose the quorum; therefore, if I am to express an opinion on the matter, I should say that it would not be within the competence of the Council to make an alteration in the rules in the manner suggested by His Honour, and, accordingly, I do not think it advisable to entertain the discussion whether it is necessary to adjourn the consideration of the rules for the conduct of business for that purpose.

"I also wish to say—for as President I consider myself generally responsible for the course of business of the Legislative Council—that I do not consider that the proceedings of the Council of the past year in Simla are justly open to the criticisms which have been advanced by His Honour. I think it will be in the recollection of those Members of the Council who were present at the meetings held at Simla, that no measure of any great importance, touching the whole of India, was there passed. So far from my having any desire to pass measures of importance at Simla, I deliberately deferred the passing of two Bills—one affecting the Panjáb, and the other the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh—namely, the Panjáb Municipalities Bill, and the Bill for the regulation of Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India. Although those measures were discussed at considerable length at Simla, I thought it advisable that the Council at Calcutta should have an opportunity of considering them before they became law. I am glad that I took that course, because I think that the consideration of these Bills by the Council at Calcutta has enabled us to introduce some modifications, not of any great importance certainly, but still some modifications which, I believe, will be beneficial. So far, then, as my recollection serves me, the course which was taken by the Legislative Council at Simla in the past session is by no means open to the criticisms which His Honour has made in respect to legislating upon large and important subjects, affecting the whole of India, in a place where we are subject to the inconvenience of not having the presence of some of the Members of the Council whose assistance we are so fortunate as to receive in Calcutta.

"In respect to the Bills passed at Simla, there was one, namely, the Straits Settlements' Emigration Bill, which mainly affected the Presidency of Madras, but before passing it, the subject had been carefully considered in communication with the Madras Government.

"It will, I think, be obvious to all the Members of Council, that if we were to bind ourselves in respect to legislation by any rules of the nature suggested by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in regard to the locality in which the Council should sit, or in respect to the qualification of the Members of Council who constitute the quorum, the Government of India would, before long, find itself involved in much difficulty in the matter of legislation. Cases may undoubtedly occur in which it would be absolutely necessary to legislate at once, and without unnecessary delay; but unnecessary delay would, in my opinion, be incurred if any such rules were introduced, or if there had been in the Act of Parliament any provisions of the nature suggested by His Honour. I look upon the Act of Parliament as ruling this case, and I think the legislature of Great Britain exercised a wise discretion in not binding the Indian Council by any such rules.

"His Honour has alluded to the power which, by the Act of Parliament, is vested in the Governor General of acting without the Legislative Council in cases of emergency, by making and promulgating ordinances. For my own part, having the honour to fill that office, I must distinctly say that I should very much prefer to act with the advice and assistance of the Legislative Council rather than to exercise the extraordinary powers which are entrusted to me by the law; and I think that it would be far preferable that, in all cases, there should be a power to assemble the Legislative Council in any place in which the Government of India may for the time being be placed under the provisions of the present law with respect to the quorum of Members, rather than that obstacles should be placed to such meetings of the Council and any difficulties which might consequently arise be met by the promulgation of ordinances by the Governor General."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR explained that he entirely concurred with His Excellency the President that it would not be lawful to limit the place of meeting of the Council by any rule. His observations had reference only to Rule 4 of the Rules now before the Council which was in these words:—

"4. The quorum shall be seven including the President."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the Rules as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PANJÁB APPEALS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE asked the permission of His Excellency the President to postpone the next three items in the List of Business, namely—

That the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to prolong the law relating to Appeals and Reviews of Judgment in the Panjáb be taken into consideration:

That, in section 4, the following words be omitted:—

"with the modifications subject to which it was extended to the Panjáb, by notification of Government, dated the twelfth day of September 1866; and"

That the Bill as amended be passed.

A communication had been received from the learned Judges of the Chief Court of the Panjáb, which rendered it necessary to refer to the Local Government.

Leave was granted.

BURMA PORT-DUES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE also moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Port-dues in British Burma be taken into consideration. He said that the consideration of this Report would not take the Council long, because it only said that the Committee saw no reason to make any alterations in the draft Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE then moved that the Bill be passed. When he introduced this Bill, he had explained its object, which was very simple. It was merely for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of passing a separate Act of Council whenever a port in British Burma reached that stage at which it was desirable to bring it within the general Port-dues Act. As that Act was framed, after a port was brought within its compass, no dues could be levied, except such as were specified in that Act or some subsequent Act. British Burma was in that stage of growth that, every now and then, it was found desirable to bring some port within the provisions of the general Act. It was not convenient to pass a special Act in every case. Therefore, it was proposed to give power to the Local Government and the Governor General in Council, acting in conjunction, to fix the rate and conditions for the levy of port-dues by a declaration, which might be the same declaration which brought the port within the compass of the general Act, or a subsequent one. Their power was limited by fixing the maximum of dues and the character of the vessels upon which they might be levied. Those limits were such as had been already provided in two separate Acts passed for Burmese ports, which was thought a proper limit to fix for all the Burmese ports. Since the Bill passed through Committee, they had the advantage of the presence of the Hon'ble Mr. Eden, the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, in Calcutta, and he had gone through the Bill and approved of it.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTHERN INDIA IRRIGATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. EGERTON moved that the Bill to regulate Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage in Northern India, as amended, be passed. At the last meeting of the Council, when the Bill was taken into consideration, certain amendments were moved and carried which rendered necessary some verbal alterations in the Bill. These had been made, and the Bill was now complete, as amended after consideration in Council. He had no further remarks to make regarding it.

His Highness THE MAHÁRÁJÁ OF VIZIANAGRAM said that, having estates in the province to which this Bill was particularly intended to apply, it appeared to him proper, not only to give his concurrence to it, but also to express his general approbation of its purpose and the scheme by which it proposed to effect such purpose. It was, THE MAHÁRÁJÁ believed, by its large irrigation-works that the benefits of British government were as intimately brought home to the body of the people as by any other works undertaken by the Government for the advancement of this country. The system was one which had of necessity been practised here for generations; but under no other Government in India had it been organized and developed in so extensive a way as it had been, and was at present being, under the British Rule. To the mass of the people, and to those living in parts remote from the immediate influence of educated thoughts, the advantage of the other works now so largely undertaken by Government was not so readily apparent; but the most ignorant ryot did not fail to see at once, and appreciate the inestimable benefit of a constant supply of water brought home to his fields. In time, too, as he became aware of the diminution of sickness and the lesser frequency of weak constitutions, he would understand and acknowledge the advantage of such drainage-works as this Bill contemplated, and, in expressing his hearty approval of it, he begged to state that he was also expressing the feeling and opinion of the Native community at large.

Major General the Hon'ble H. W. NORMAN had opposed certain clauses of the Panjáb Irrigation Bill which passed the Council at Simla in 1871. It was therefore satisfactory to him that that Act was never brought into operation. As the present Bill contained no clauses of a similar nature, or which compelled the ryots to take water whether they desired it or not, he was able entirely to support the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS did not propose to refer in any detail to the past history of this Bill, or to trouble the Council with a relation of the past proceedings by which we had arrived at the present stage. But he desired to say a few words, lest a silent vote might be misconstrued, and it might be supposed that he repented of the vote which he gave as a Member of the Council in 1871, when the previous Bill was under discussion. He believed that the provisions of that Bill were not sufficiently understood by the general public, and he was certain that a considerable amount of virtuous indignation had been unnecessarily expended, both inside and outside these walls, in denouncing the clauses of the Bill as it stood when passed by the Council in 1870-71. He had, indeed, an instance of that in the few words which had fallen from his hon'ble colleague, General Norman, who had told the Council that he rejoiced in the Bill passing in its present form, because it did not compel the owners or occupiers of land to take water against their will. MR. ELLIS hoped to make it clear that such a provision formed no part of the Bill of 1871. He believed that the worst that could be reasonably said of that Bill, was stated by those who referred to the clauses as likely to prove inoperative, because water was so valued that every one who could, would use it, and that the clauses were therefore not wanted, or if wanted, they provided a procedure so fettered by conditions, that the Bill would not work. Worse than those objections he did not think any one could fairly and reasonably urge against the Act. He thought that the reason for the misapprehension was that the original scheme was very different. The promoters of the Bill desired, in the first instance, that a compulsory rating should be levied from the whole district whenever a work of irrigation failed to be remunerative. That provision was not embodied in the Bill as it stood before the Council. But the original scheme was referred to in great detail by those who supported that principle, and also by those who declaimed against it, and the debate consisted mainly of arguments pro and con on that original principle which was not to be found in the Bill then before Council. He thought his hon'ble colleague, Sir Richard Temple, would bear him out, that the greater portion of the speeches delivered in Council on that occasion were directed to the question whether a compulsory rating on the whole district was desirable or not, although that principle was not embodied in the former Bill. What was there, then, in the Bill which passed the Council, which we did not find in the present Bill? It was simply this. The Bill provided that, if, after a certain term of years, the Government found that a large irrigation scheme was not remunerative, enquiry should be made to ascertain the cause. If the cause was found to be, that the original estimate as to the rates assessable, the cost of construction, or the area irrigable was wrong, or that expenditure had been by negligence or otherwise incurred in excess of the estimate, then the imperial Government, having, as the representative of the people, made a mistake, the people generally would bear the loss. But if, on the other hand, it was found that, owing to the idleness or ignorance of those who could make use of the water, but failed to do so, the scheme was unremunerative, it was then made lawful to the Government, not as was popularly supposed, to compel the people to take the water, but to levy from those persons a small and fixed rate, the maximum being stated in the Bill, to go towards defraying the interest of the scheme undertaken for their benefit, and which they had not the sense to avail themselves of. The power of the Government was most strictly guarded by the provisions which rendered it necessary to prove that the persons declining to take the water could use it to their benefit. And that was in no sense, therefore, a compulsory rating, such as the original proposal was, and such as his hon'ble friend, General Norman, and MR. ELLIS with him, objected to before the Bill took the shape in which it passed. He thought the sole effect, therefore, of the Bill was this. It provided that, whenever a project proved unremunerative owing to no fault in the estimate or construction, then the general tax-paying public of India should not be compelled to pay, until those who might avail themselves of the water and failed to do so through ignorance, idleness or other causes had discharged their quota. He thought there was no hardship in that. It was, to quote an expression of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, "scrupulously just" that such persons should be called upon to pay, before we burdened the general tax-payer with the obligation to make up any deficiency caused by the ignorance and folly of these people.

For obvious reasons, MR. ELLIS did not ask now to insert any particular clauses representing the principle which he advocated; but he believed the Bill as now passed, owing to their omission, was less perfect than it would have been. Those clauses seemed to him to have given the Government an insurance against a risk, for which they might reasonably be allowed to provide. The omission of the clauses did not affect his readiness to pass the Bill, but he certainly thought it should affect our readiness to admit schemes for benefiting the people by irrigation, when we had no such insurance to fall back upon. That was, however, rather for discussion in the Executive Council; and he now merely said that the Bill was not so perfect as it would have been with those clauses.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said as his hon'ble friend and colleague had referred to him, he thought it just to his hon'ble friend to afford full corroboration to what he had said. SIR RICHARD TEMPLE certainly thought that the rejected clauses were, if properly understood, perfectly just and expedient. And he feared their rejection would somewhat retard the progress of canal-irrigation. But as he had, at the time, said all he could on that behalf and vindicated at great length the course taken, and as that course was rejected by superior authority, it was of no use for him to say anything more, although he adhered to all the opinions he then expressed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

SUNDRY BILLS.

The Hon'ble MR. HOBHOUSE moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Dalyell be added to the Select Committee on the following Bills:

To consolidate and amend the law relating to the local extent of the general Regulations and Acts, and to the local limits of the jurisdictions of the High Courts and the Chief Controlling Revenue Authorities.

To consolidate and amend the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents.

To consolidate the law relating to Oaths and Affirmations.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES RENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Rent in the North-Western Provinces. Almost ever since Act X of 1859 became law, it had been evident that some of its provisions were unsuitable to the tenures of Upper India, and proposals for amending the law had been for some time past under the consideration of the Local Government. The Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to land-revenue in the North-Western Provinces, which was now before the Council, dealt with the same questions. Consequently, it was absolutely necessary that the two Bills should be considered together, so that their provisions might be brought into accordance with each other. When he introduced the Bill, he would explain fully the changes proposed in the existing law.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR would only express his satisfaction at the introduction of the Bill at this time. The experience he had had in the Select Committee on the other Bill of the hon'ble member, had thoroughly convinced him and other members of the Committee, that it would be impossible to deal with one Bill without considering the other. The explanations the hon'ble member had given had shown that the provisions of the two Bills were woven together. They involved the most enormously important questions; they involved questions which were not only applicable to the North-Western Provinces, but also to other provinces of the empire. And therefore it would be in every way desirable that they should be considered together, and that a decision should not be precipitated.

The Hon'ble MR. ELLIS merely desired to say that he corroborated all that had fallen from His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, both as to the desirability of considering this Bill in connection with the Bill relating to land-revenue, and as to the importance of both Bills, and the necessity for not hurrying them through the Council.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 18th February 1873.

RULES RELATING TO EMIGRATION FROM THE PORT OF CALCUTTA UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF ACT VII OF 1871.

I.—OF PRELIMINARY ARRANGEMENTS IN PORT.

Rules for the guidance of the Protector of Emigrants.

1. The attention of the Protector of Emigrants is directed to those sections of the Act which define his position and duties, the position and duties of others who are engaged under the Act, and to the following rules.

2. Besides the usual reports [under section 8 of the Act] on return emigrants, the treatment they have experienced on boardship and in the colony, the Protector will submit for the information of Government the under-noted periodical reports and returns :—

(a.) Monthly.—A return showing the number and description of emigrants who have embarked for the colonies during the month immediately preceding that on which the return is due.

(b.) Annually.—A report on the emigration of the preceding official year, giving particulars on any points of importance, and embracing detailed information on (a) the number and description of emigrants embarked for and returned from the several colonies; (b) the amount of savings brought back by return emigrants; (c) the detention of coolies in the depôts and their mortality in depôts; (d) the length of the voyages and the mortality during those voyages; and (e) the prevalence of cholera on board of emigrant ships for the period under review.

3. Fees under section 31 of the Indian Emigration Act must be levied on each emigrant as defined in section 3 of the Act.

4. In the event of any emigrant who is already registered for one colony desiring to emigrate to another, such emigrant may be re-registered for the colony elected; and the same fee authorized for the first registration must be paid for re-registration by the Agent or recruiter of the colony to which the emigrant is going.

5. A certificate signed by the Emigration Agent and countersigned by the Protector of Emigrants, to the effect that any emigrant has deserted prior to embarkation, shall be accepted as sufficient proof [under section 31 of the Act] on which the fee paid in respect of such emigrant may be refunded to the Agent or recruiter by whom it was paid.

6. Copies and translations of the Indian Emigration Act, and of the rules framed under its provisions, may be procured, at the authorized prices, from the office of the Protector of Emigrants, who will submit annual returns to Government of the number of copies of each which have been disposed of.

Rules for the guidance of the Medical Inspector of Emigrants.

7. The attention of the Medical Inspector is directed to sections 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 34, 42 and 49 of the Act, and to the following rules.

8. The Medical Inspector shall exercise a careful supervision over the sanitary state of the emigration depôts; and, when necessary, he should suggest to the Agent or officer in charge of the depôt any alteration which, in a sanitary point of view, may seem to him likely to benefit the coolies; and, so far as circumstances render it expedient, he should endeavour to introduce uniformity by assimilating the approved practices and arrangements in the several depôts each one to the other.

9. He is jointly responsible with the Protector of Emigrants for the eligibility, for emigration purposes, of vessels which take emigrants from this port, and is expected to be present with the Protector of Emigrants at the primary and final surveys of ships chartered for the conveyance of emigrants, of their ventilation, fittings, provisions, medical stores, and hospital arrangements. He shall also be present at the embarkation of emigrants, and shall see that everything is done to lessen the likelihood of disease and increase the comfort of the coolies.

10. No emigrant must be permitted to embark who is considered by the Medical Inspector to be physically unfit for the voyage, or who cannot do so without danger to his or her health or to that of others. It will not be for the Inspector to decide upon the fitness or otherwise of the coolies for labor in the colony to which they are bound; that is a question for the consideration of the Agent, who is guided in his selection of fit laborers by the advice of medical officers,* who are specially appointed to this duty by the colony to which the emigrants are going.

* (a) The Surgeon of the depôt and (b) the Surgeon of the ship in which the coolies are about to be conveyed.

Rules for the guidance of Emigration Agents.

11. Their attention is directed to those sections of the Act that define their duties, and to the following rules.

12. Correspondence with the local Government in connection with colonial emigration should be conducted through the Protector of Emigrants.

13. Ordinarily, the Agent will be guided by the Medical Inspector of Emigrants and the Surgeon of the depôt in all sanitary measures adopted in depôts, but the following points, briefly indicated below, should always be kept in view, viz.—

(a.) Cleanliness and ventilation, as affecting the persons of the coolies, their clothing, sleeping sheds, hospitals, depôt, compound, and privies

(b.) The purity of the drinking water-supply [which must be distinct from that used fo washing and bathing] and the efficiency of the means for preserving its purity.

(c.) Food.—That it is of good quality, sufficient in quantity, and well cooked. Where rations are issued in lieu of diet money, the Government dietary scale (No. 1, Schedule E) should be used as a guide.

(d.) Clothing.—A sufficient supply at all seasons, and of blankets during the cold months especially. Clothing which coolies bring into the depôt with them may be retained by them, provided that the articles are in good condition, are not suspected of infection [in which case they must be burnt], and are properly washed, especially on admission and previous to embarkation.

(e.) The immediate isolation of all cases of communicable disease (e.g., cholera, small-pox), and the prompt and careful disposal of all excreta, particularly in cholera cases, the destruction by fire of all infected or suspected clothing or other articles, the vaccination of all emigrants admitted into depôt previous to embarkation, and the free use of disinfectants in sleeping sheds, hospitals, and privies.

(f.) Employment and recreation should be encouraged. Coolies should be engaged, as far as possible, in maintaining the good order and cleanliness of the depôt compound, garden, &c., for which service they ought to be fairly remunerated, and games or other amusements should be encouraged.

14. Whenever cholera makes its appearance, the matter should be immediately reported to the Protector of Emigrants, who will in severe outbreaks report for the information of Government.

15. There should always be two hospitals in every depôt,—one for ordinary cases, and the other for communicable disease (e.g., cholera, &c); and a resident native or other doctor, subject to the approval of the Medical Inspector, shall be appointed to have charge of, and to live near the hospital and within the depôt compound.

16. The weekly hospital report, in such form as may be desired by the Medical Inspector, shall be furnished regularly.

17. Coolies should not be detained too long in depôt. Every effort should be made to despatch the coolies, if possible, within a month from the date of their arrival in depôt, so that the average detention in depôt may not, as a general rule, exceed one month. A return in Form No. 2 should be submitted for the information of Government at the close of each official year, with an explanation if the detention in depôt has been unusually long.

18. A qualified European or Native medical officer (who has a fair knowledge of English) shall, subject to the approval of the Protector of Emigrants, be appointed by the Emigration Agent to every ship engaged.
